And the feller kind o' halted, with a trimble in his chin.
And Uncle Jake he fetched the feller's coffee back and stood
As solemn, for a minute, as a' undertaker would;
Then he sort o' turned and tiptoed to'rds the kitchen door—and next,
Here comes his old wife out with him, a rubbin' of her specs—
And she rushes for the stranger, and she hollers out "It's him!
Thank God, we've met him comin'! Don't you know your mother, Jim?"
And the feller, as he grabbed her, says: "You bet I hain't forgot"—
But, wipin' of his eyes, says he: "Your coffee's mighty hot!"

THE MISTAKE.

BY A. R.

The express train had come and gone through the rainy December dusk, with its eye of scarlet fire and its whiss of escaping steam and there was only one passenger for Peterbank—a tall, aristocratic-looking old gentleman, with a fur-trimmed overcoat, gold eye-glasses and a fringe of snowy whiskers under his chin.

Rolf Otherbrae, the young Scotch ticket agent, looked at him with that half curious, half indifferent expression [illegible] ticket agents grow in time to regard the whole world; and the old gentleman [illegible] up his glassy blue eyes [illegible] glance.

"[illegible] here, I suppose?" said [illegible].

"[illegible]," Otherbrae answered, half [illegible] the supercilious tone adopted by [illegible].

"[illegible] then, you can tell me what time [illegible] from Carrowdale is due?"

[illegible]

[illegible] glanced first at the [illegible] by the wall, then at his watch; [illegible] deliberately down by the fire, as [illegible] himself to an hour and a [illegible]. And Rolf went out into [illegible] to make sure that the [illegible] hundred yards or so [illegible] track, had not fall[illegible] that the signal-lights [illegible] clear and steady for the South[illegible] which would be along now, [illegible] knew it.

[illegible] Rolf Otherbrae [illegible] about the old gentleman with the frosty whiskers, [illegible] sable furs about his [illegible].

[illegible] train came in about [illegible] for the [illegible]

[illegible] with a [illegible] Rolf Otherbrae [illegible]

At the same instant she arose and came [illegible] half across the floor.

"I beg your pardon, sir—but has the [illegible] come in yet?"

"[illegible] ago," Mr. Otherbrae [illegible], wondering if it were possible that so fair an exterior could conceal the inner life of crime! And then, all of a sudden, it ocured to him that the tall gentleman, in the fur-trimmed overcoat in the other room, might possibly be the "friend" she had spoken of, and the "old man" alluded to in the dispatch.

At the same instant, advancing a pace or two further, she caught sight of the tall, erect figure by the fire in the other room—the figure wraped in furs, with the silvery, aristocratic hair, and the chin drooping on the breast, as if in slumber.

"Papa," broke involuntarily from her lips. "He has been waiting for me, and I never knew it."

She hurried past the ticket agent, into the other room. Rolf Otherbrae looked after her, in dismay.

"I'm to stop her, am I?" thought Rolf. "And now the duce am I to do it, I'd like to know? I wish Mr. Deko was here himself."

As these disjointed reflections passed through his mind a sudden shriek rose up in the silence—and Mr. Otherbrae, hurrying into the waiting room, saw the young girl kneeling on the floor beside the old gentleman. And in an instant he percieved the secret of her cry. The stately old man, with the fur-trimmed garments and snowy beard, was quite dead!

As Rolf advanced she looked wildly up into his face.

"Can't you help him?" she gasped. "Can't you do something? Oh, don't you see he has fainted? Tell me where to go for a doctor? Where can I find one? I have a smelling bottle, but—"

"It is of no use," Rolf answered, gently, entirely forgetting the dispatch, or rather resolved to ignore it. "My mother's cottage is close by. Let me take you there."

"And papa? Papa, who has come all the way from India to meet me, and take me home to England!"

"I will send some one to him at once," said Rolf, swallowing a big lump in his throat, as he felt how utterly useless was all human aid, and adding to himself. "I don't care if she has committed fifty forgeries, aye, and a murder besides. I won't make a brute of myself by laying so much as an additional straw of the burden of her troubles. It's the sweetest face I ever saw.—yes, and the best."

And so old Mrs. Otherbrae was stricken dumb as she sat by her hearthstone, at ten o'clock at night, by the sudden apparition of a beautiful young lady drowned in tears.

"Don't ask any questions, mother darling," Rolf whispered, "but be good to her."

And he hurried back to the depot, where the dead man still sat, keeping silent vigil.

Half an hour afterward Ethel Dewgrove knew that she was an orphan in a strange land.

"Where shall I go?" she faltered, looking wildly around. "What shall I do? Papa! oh, poor, poor papa!"

"My dear, my dear!" said Mrs. Otherbrae, kindly patting her head. "be calm! You need go nowhere; you need do nothing. Rolf will arrange it all. Rolf is the best fellow in the world. Just quiet yourself, and let him manage it all!"

And as Rolf in the other room heard the suppressed sobs of the bereaved daughter, he resolved within himself that not all the police agents in Christendom should wrest Ethel Dewgrove from beneath the aegis of his protection.

With these reflections in his mind, he went out to see the midnight train rush in, pause a second on its hurrying way, and then steam onward like a fire-breathed monster, a [illegible] of moving [illegible].

"Well, we've got 'em!" said Simeon [illegible], the conductor, as he swung a [illegible] lady off the lower steps to Rolf's protecting hand.

"[illegible]?"

Plain [illegible] plaited or box-plaited skirts are used for very young ladies.

The straight plaits or waterfall drapery are much used on the back of heavy dresses.

In children's fur there is little change; they wear grebe, cony, squirrel and krimmer.

Lace bonnets made up over colored satin foundations are in style for evening wear.

Serge dresses are principally navy blue in color, and are generally combined with velvet.

For cloth dresses the new moss green and a dark red shade are the prevailing colors.

A zouave jacket of cloth is worn by quite young ladies, over a waistcoat of different fabric.

Plum-color, dark gray, brown and black dresses are in favor with elderly ladies, both for the street and house.

The drapery on the most costly dresses is very simple, but is made bouffant by means of the cushion bustle or steel springs underneath.

A very stylish design for the skirts of those who are very tall, is to form the front and side breadths in four wide tucks reaching to the short apron drapery.

The Engineer's Story of the Brakeman.

Several years ago I was running a fast express. One night we were three hours behind time, and if there's anything I hate it's to finish a run behind schedule. These grade crossings of one horse roads are nuisances to the trunk lines, and we had a habit of failing to stop, merely slacking up for 'em. At one crossing I had never seen a train at that time of night, so I rounded the curve out of the cut at full tilt. I was astonished to see that a freight train was standing right over the crossing, evidently intending to put a few cars on our switch. I gave the danger whistle and tried to stop my train, but I had seven heavy sleepers on, we just slid down that grade spite of everything I could do. Quicker than I can tell you the brakeman on that freight train uncoupled a car just back of our crossing and signalled his engineer to go ahead, which he did sharpely, but barely in time to let us through. In fact, the pilot of my engine took the buffer off the rear car. Through that little hole we skipped, and lives and property were saved. Now, that brakeman was only a common railroader, yet he saw the situation at a glance. There wasn't time to run his whole train off the crossing, nor even half of it—barely time to pull up one car length by prompt, quick work. He kept his wits about him as, I venture to say, not one man in a thousand would have done, and saved my reputation, if not my life. He is now a division superintendent in one of the best roads in this country.—[Chicago Herald.

Wasn't Libelous.

"Do you want a case, Mr. Smedes?"

"Certainly, if there's money in it and any show for winning," replied the lawyer.

"Well, it's for libel. I propose to sue this infernal newspaper for traducing my character."

"What has it said?" inquired the lawyer.

"Why, it has stated that I am worse than a hog in my family, that I beat my wife and starve my children, and lie when I get a chance, and don't steal because everybody locks the door when I come around, and a whole lot more of the same kind, and I want damages for it."

"Is that all?"

"Isn't that enough?"

"Hardly. You see there's nothing in the statute [illegible] newspaper telling the truth. When the paper tells lie on you come around and I'll see what I can do for you. Good morning."—[Detroit Free Press.

Nearly all the school [illegible] have left after a most agreeable [illegible] here. Numbers triumphantly bearing their note books filled with items and ideas for future reference. Many thoughts were recorded during their brief sojourn in the city and at the World's Exposition to which they will often refer with profit, pleasure, pride.

The car drivers' strike which occurred last Saturday, greatly annoyed the public, as it was difficult for the crowd at the Exposition to reach the city. It lasted for three days, when differences were adjusted. This is the second strike within two months, but is not likely to occur again.

While the attendance at the Exposition is not excessively large, it increases daily; and the railroads centering here are already adding extra cars. Their passenger agents inform us that extra trains will be put on in a few weeks. Several passenger steamboats are fitting out to accommodate the public by river travel.

One point of great importance to those who will attend the Cotton Centennial, &c., is to get information respecting board and lodging; consequently your correspondent called upon Messrs. Wolz & Moulton, 23 Carondelet street, New Orleans, who make a specialty of furnishing accommodations for from one to one thousand visitors, and was told that comfortable and agreeable quarters could be had for $1.50 and $2.50 a day.

Another feature to be inaugurated during the season is that of frequent pleasure excursions by rail and water up and down the noble Mississippi to the beautiful lakes and gulf [illegible] Mexico, Central America, or Cuba, at trifling cost.

Your correspondent celebrated New Year on the Exposition grounds, visiting departments not yet mentioned in these letters. It would require a whole column in this paper to properly inform your readers of even the smallest of the dozen separate places of interest outside of the Government and Main buildings, which are in themselves each a little world.

Work continues on the extensive machinery sheds connected parallel west from Main building. While they are in course of completion, machinery, such as cotton gins, compresses and hundreds of other kinds, is being placed in position so that when the buildings are finished the machinery can be set up immediately, which will require a week or two.

A visit to the live stock stables is well worth the attention of all. Illinois seems to be ahead in point of numbers at this writing. Indiana, Kentucky, Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan show fine stock but now limited in quantity. The horses are Clydesdale, Normans, Percheron, interspersed with a few Shetland ponies for contrast. Some thoroughbred race horses are arriving. There are a dozen fine Jacks and Jennies to be seen. The cattle are mostly fat beef, exhibiting a blooded class of Galloway, Jersey and Hereford. But few hogs are yet shown; among them we noted Chester, Jersey, Suffolk, Essex, and Berkshire. Some sheep appear to good advantage. A lot of domesticated deer with fawns are pretty and affectionate. There are [illegible] large stables, only two of which [illegible].

Salt on Potato Ground.

In the Central New York Farmer's Club, when discussing the subject of potato scab, its cause and remedy, Hon. Geo. Benedict, Verona, N. Y., said that on one piece of land he sowed salt in the Fall, and had a splendid crop of potatoes, and on the same soil when he put on no salt he got no crop. For three years back he had good crops by using salt, but not otherwise. Mr. C. J. Edie, of Marcy, N. Y., said that during the season of 1881 he tried salt on soil in which he had planted potatoes. He broadcasted about 1,000 or 1,200 pounds per acre, and harrowed it in. The potatoes were then planted and others were planted alongside in the same field without salt. The effect was most striking. Just as far as the salt extended, the potatoes were smooth, sound and good size. In the rows next adjoining, where the salt did not reach, the potatoes were small, wormy and rough.

An absolute cure for Rheumatism, Sprains, Pain in the Back, Burns, Galls, &c. An instantaneous Pain-reliever.

Within the shadow. By Dorothy Holroyd. 12mo, $1.25. This volume is the latest addition to the famous "V. I. F." series, and is a story of such brilliancy and power as to at once entitle its author to recognition as a writer of high ability. She possesses strong originality, a keen eye for character, and a vigorous style, three qualities which are essential to the construction of a work of fiction. The plot she here sets herself to work out is ingenious, and yet not complicated or improbable, and the events happen so naturally that the reader is never called upon to exercise his imagination or to manufacture reasons for the action of the narrative. The heroine is Cecil Chester, a young girl who has been tenderly and carefully nurtured, and whose unusually fine natural gifts have been developed by judicious culture. By the death of both her parents she is suddenly left alone in the world, without relatives and without money. Of an independent spirit she rejects all offers of help from friends, choosing rather to avail herself of her accomplishments to support herself. She enters the home of a wealthy widow as a companion, and while there, by an extraordinary combination of circumstances is made to appear as having committed a criminal offence, for which she is arrested and brought to trial. The story of her sufferings is vividly told, and the chapter in which the climax is reached is strongly dramatic. The book cannot help making a sensation. Boston; D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers.

THE BEST FOR BUTTER.

There is but one best color for butter, and that is Wells, Richardson & Co's. Improved Butter Color, no candid investigator doubts. It is the best Butter Color in the world; is is free from sediment or impurity, always ready for instant use, and it imparts to butter that rich dandelion yellow, without a tinge of red, which is the acme of desirability in any butter color.

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently proceeded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose that he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a common attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure. [illegible]

Like Mother Used to Make.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

"I was born in Indiany," says a stranger lank and slim,
As us fellers in the restaurant was kindo' guyin him,
And Uncle Jake was slidin' him another pun'kin pie
And a extra cup o' coffee, with a twinkle in his eye,
"I was born in Indiany—more'n forty year' ago—
And I hain't been back in twenty—and I'm workin' back'ards slow;
But I've et in every restaurant 'twixt here and Santy Fee,
And I want to state this coffee tastes like gittin' home to me!

"Pour us out another, daddy," says the feller, warmin' up,
A-speakin' 'crost a saucerful, as Uncle tuck his cup—
"When I seed your sign out yonder," he went on' to Uncle Jake—
"'Come in and git some coffee like your mother used to make'—
I thought of my old mother, and the Posey county farm,
And me a little kid agin, a-hangin' in her arm,
As she set the pot a-bilin'—broke the eggs an' poured 'em in"—
And the feller kind o' halted, with a trimble in his chin.

And Uncle Jake he fetched the feller's coffee back and stood
As solemn, for a minute, as a' undertaker would;
Then he sort o' turned and tiptoed to'rds the kitchen door—and next,
Here comes his old wife out with him, a rubbin' of her specs—
And she rushes for the stranger, and she hollers out "It's him!
Thank God, we've met him comin'! Don't you know your mother, Jim?"
And the feller, as he grabbed her, says: "You bet I hain't forgot"—
But, wipin' of his eyes, says he: "Your coffee's mighty hot!"

THE MISTAKE.

BY A. R.

The express train had come and gone through the rainy December dusk, with its eye of scarlet fire and its whizz of escaping steam and there was only one passenger for Peterbank—a tall, aristocratic-looking old gentleman, with a fur-trimmed overcoat, gold eye-glasses and a fringe of snowy whiskers under his chin.

Rolf Otherbrae, the young Scotch ticket agent, looked at him with that half curious, half indifferent expression wherewith ticket agents grow in time to regard the whole world; and the old gentleman lifted up his glassy blue eyes to return the [illegible] glance.

"You are in charge here, I suppose?" said the tall, [illegible] stranger.

"I am, sir," Otherbrae answered, half offended at the supercilious tone adopted by the newcomer.

"Perhaps, then, you can tell me what time the train from Carrowdale is due?"

"[illegible], sir."

The old gentleman glanced first at the clock on the wall, then at his watch; [illegible] resigning himself to an hour and a half waiting. And Rolf went out into the twilight to make sure that the switch [illegible], a hundred yards or so [illegible], and that the signal-lights burned clear and steady for the South-shore train, which would be along now, almost before they knew it.

And so, naturally enough, Rolf Otherbrae quite forgot about the old gentleman with the frosty whiskers, and the costly sable furs about his white old throat.

The Carrowdale train came in about [illegible] minutes or so behind time, for the [illegible] and the rails were [illegible] passengers [illegible]

[illegible] Stop an old man [illegible] young girl—well dressed and [illegible] Reward. H. O. DEKO, [illegible] General Office, New York."

Rolf gazed at the quivering wires as if expecting to glean further intelligence from their metallic surfaces: then he glanced across the room to where the slender dark eyed young lady sat, her hands clasped on her knee, and her eyes fixed dreamily on the wall fire.

"A young girl, well dressed and plausible!" The description tallied well enough—but then she was alone! And as for her being 'connected with a forger's gang—pshaw!' Rolf Otherbrae knew better!

At the same instant she arose and came hesitatingly half across the floor.

"I beg your pardon, sir—but has the express train come in yet?"

"Two hours ago," Mr. Otherbrae mechanically answered, wondering if it were possible that so fair an exterior could conceal the inner life of crime! And then, all of a sudden, it occured to him that the tall gentleman, in the fur-trimmed overcoat in the other room, might possibly be the "friend" she had spoken of, and the "old man" alluded to in the dispatch.

At the same instant, advancing a pace or two further, she caught sight of the tall, erect figure by the fire in the other room—the figure wraped in furs, with the silvery, aristocratic hair, and the chin drooping on the breast, as if in slumber.

"Papa," broke involuntarily from her lips. "He has been waiting for me, and I never knew it."

She hurried past the ticket agent, into the other room. Rolf Otherbrae looked after her, in dismay.

"I'm to stop her, am I?" thought Rolf. "And now the duce am I to do it, I'd like to know? I wish Mr. Deko was here himself."

As these disjointed reflections passed through his mind a sudden shriek rose up in the silence—and Mr. Otherbrae, hurrying into the waiting room, saw the young girl kneeling on the floor beside the old gentleman. And in an instant he percieved the secret of her cry. The stately old man, with the fur-trimmed garments and snowy beard, was quite dead!

As Rolf advanced she looked wildly up into his face.

"Can't you help him?" she gasped. "Can't you do something? Oh, don't you see he has fainted? Tell me where to go for a doctor? Where can I find one? I have a smelling bottle, but—"

"It is of no use," Rolf answered, gently, entirely forgetting the dispatch, or rather resolved to ignore it. "My mother's cottage is close by. Let me take you there."

"And papa? Papa, who has come all the way from India to meet me, and take me home to England!"

"I will send some one to him at once," said Rolf, swallowing a big lump in his throat, as he felt how utterly useless was all human aid, and adding to himself. "I don't care if she has committed fifty forgeries, aye, and a murder besides. I won't make a brute of myself by laying so much as an additional straw of the burden of her troubles. It's the sweetest face I ever saw.—yes, and the best."

And so old Mrs. Otherbrae was stricken dumb as she sat by her hearthstone, at ten o'clock at night, by the sudden apparition of a beautiful young lady drowned in tears.

"Don't ask any questions, mother darling," Rolf whispered, "but be good to her."

And he hurried back to the depot, where the dead man still sat, keeping silent vigil.

Half an hour afterward Ethel Dewgrove knew that she was an orphan in a strange land.

"Where shall I go?" she faltered, looking wildly around. "What shall I do? Papa! oh, poor, poor papa!"

"My dear, my dear!" said Mrs. Otherbrae, kindly patting her head. "be calm! You need go nowhere; you need do nothing. Rolf will arrange it all. Rolf is the best fellow in the world. Just quiet yourself, and let him manage it all.!"

And as Rolf in the other room heard the suppressed sobs of the bereaved daughter, he resolved within himself that not all the police agents in Christendom should wrest Ethel Dewgrove from beneath the ægis of his protection.

With these reflections in his mind, he went out to see the midnight train rush in, pause a second on its hurrying way, and then steam onward like a fire-throated monster, a vertebrae of moving lights.

"Well, we've got 'em!" said Simeon Pike, the conductor, as he swung, a stout old lady off the lower steps to Rolf's protecting hand.

"Got whom?"

"The forgers. Went on to Shelton's Point. Jones arrested 'em. There's 'em by the far window," with a jerk of his hand toward a certain glimpse of redish light, where a dull, wicked profile nodded occasionally. "Real good luck it was. Wish it had been me had laid hold of 'em!"

Rolf started. Then his inner convictions had all been erroneous. He had suspected the tall, hazel-eyed girl by [illegible] that she was aught [illegible] innocent [illegible] What a dolt—a blockhead he [illegible] What an idiot! Well, at all [illegible] glad she never had suspected [illegible]

FASHION NOTES.

The basques of cloth dresses are very short.

Crazy patchwork bags and reticules are all the rage.

Black hare is a very beautiful and very popular fur.

Kid and suede gloves are very fashionable this season.

Sashes or scarfs are very generally worn with evening dresses.

Very short jackets are worn as street wraps for cloth costumes.

Plain kilt pleated or box-pleated skirts are used for very young ladies.

The straight pleats or waterfall drapery are much used on the back of heavy dresses.

In children's fur there is little change; they wear grebe, cony, squirrel and krimmet.

Lace bonnets made up over colored satin foundations are in style for evening wear.

Serge dresses are principally navy blue in color, and are generally combined with velvet.

For cloth dresses the new moss green and a dark red shade are the prevailing colors.

A zouave jacket of cloth is worn by quite young ladies, over a waistcoat of different fabric.

Plum-color, dark gray, brown and black dresses are in favor with elderly ladies, both for the street and house.

The drapery on the most costly dresses is very simple, but is made bouffant by means of the cushion bustle or steel springs underneath.

A very stylish design for the skirts of those who are very tall, is to form the front and side breadths in four wide tucks reaching to the short apron drapery.

The Engineer's Story of the Brakeman.

Several years ago I was running a fast express: One night we were three hours behind time, and if there's anything I hate it's to finish a run behind schedule. These grade crossings of one horse roads are nuisances to the trunk lines, and we had a habit of failing to stop, merely slacking up for 'em. At one crossing I had never seen a train at that time of night, so I rounded the curve out of the cut at full tilt. I was astonished to see that a freight train was standing right over the crossing, evidently intending to put a few cars on our switch. I gave the danger whistle and tried to stop my train, but I had seven heavy sleepers on, we just slid down that grade spite of everything I could do. Quicker than I can tell you the brakeman on that freight train uncoupled a car just back of our crossing and signalled his engineer to go ahead, which he did sharpely, but barely in time to let us through. In fact, the pilot of my engine took the buffer off the rear car. Through that little hole we skipped, and lives and property were saved. Now, that brakeman was only a common railroader, yet he saw the situation at a glance. There wasn't time to run his whole train off the crossing, nor even half of it—barely time to pull up one car length by prompt, quick work. He kept his wits about him as, I venture to say, not one man in a thousand would have done, and saved my reputation, if not my life. He is now a division superintendent in one of the best roads in this country.—[Chicago Herald.

Wasn't Libelous.

"Do you want a case, Mr. Smedes?"

"Certainly, if there's money in it and any show for winning," replied the lawyer.

"Well, it's for libel. I propose to sue this infernal newspaper for traducing my character."

"What has it said?" inquired the lawyer.

"Why, it has stated that I am worse than a hog in my family, that I beat my wife and starve my children, and lie when I get a chance, and don't steal because everybody locks the door when I come around, and a whole lot more of the same kind, add I want damages for it."

"Is that all?"

"Isn't that enough?"

"Hardly. You see there's nothing in the statute against a newspaper telling the truth. When the paper tells a lie on you come around, and I'll see what I can do for you. Good morning."—[Detroit Free Press.

SOLID COMFORT.

Every one likes to take solid comfort and it may be enjoyed by every one who keeps Kidney-Wort in the house and takes a few doses at the first symptoms of an attack of Malaria, Rheumatism, [illegible] or any [illegible] Liver, Kidneys or Bowels. It is a purely [illegible]

[illegible] New Years was [illegible] usual noise and [illegible] such occasion. [illegible] served mostly by the Cr[illegible] However, [illegible] the advent of the new ye[illegible] cellars, when [illegible] freshments were [illegible] culiar warm, [illegible] the Exposition [illegible] entertainment [illegible] tured on New Year's [illegible] year was rung out while 1885 was welcomed in by the chimes in the tower of Main building through Prof. Wi[illegible]ows. The incandescent electric lights in music hall were turned on in full[illegible], which presented a very cheerful appearance.

Nearly all the school teachers have left after a most agreeable visit here. Numbers triumphantly bearing their note books filled with items and ideas for future reference. Many thoughts were recorded during their brief sojourn in the city and at the World's Exposition to which they will often refer with profit, pleasure, pride.

The car drivers' strike which occurred last Saturday, greatly annoyed the public, as it was difficult for the crowd at the Exposition to reach the city. It lasted for three days, when differences were adjusted. This is the second strike within two months, but is not likely to occur again.

While the attendance at the Exposition is not excessively large, it increases daily; and the railroads catering here are already adding extra cars, their passenger agents inform us that extra trains will be put on in a few weeks. Several passenger steamboats are fitting out to accommodate the public by river travel.

One point of great importance to those who will attend the Cotton Centennial, &c., is to get information respecting board and lodging; consequently your correspondent called upon Messrs. Wolz & Moulton, 23 Carondelet street, New Orleans, who make a specialty of furnishing accommodations for from one to one thousand visitors, and was told that comfortable and agreeable quarters could be had for $1.50 and $2.50 a day.

Another feature to be inaugurated during the season is that of frequent pleasure excursions by rail and water up and down the noble Mississippi, to the beautiful lakes and gulfs, even to Mexico, Central America, or Cuba, at trifling cost.

Your correspondent celebrated New Year on the Exposition grounds, visiting departments not yet mentioned in these letters. It would require a whole column in this paper to properly inform your readers of even the smallest of the dozen separate places of interest outside of the Government and Main buildings, which are in themselves each a little world.

Work continues on the extensive machinery sheds connected parallel west from Main building. While they are in course of completion, machinery, such as cotton gins, compresses, and hundreds of other kinds, is being placed in position so that when the building is finished the machinery can be started up immediately, which will require a week or two.

A visit to the live stock stables is well worth the attention of all. Illinois seems to be ahead in point of numbers at this writing. Indiana, Kentucky, Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan show fine stock but now limited in quantity. The horses are Clydesdale, Norman, Percheron, interspersed with a few Shetland ponies for contrast. Some thoroughbred race horses are arriving. There are a dozen fine Jacks and Jennies to be seen—The cattle are mostly fat beef, exhibiting a blooded class of Galloway, Jersey, and Hereford. But few hogs are yet shown; among them we noted Chester, Jersey, Suffolk, Essex, and Berkshire.—Some sheep appear to good advantage. A lot of domesticated deer with fawn are pretty and affectionate. There are six large stables, only two of which are filled.

Adjoining the stock departments and near the Government building an oblong race track has been graded. It will be in readiness for driving as soon as the ground dries. An electric light house stands in the middle of the circuit.

One of the most [illegible] publications for general distribution [illegible] out concerning the World's Exposition is a ten cent Visitors' Guide [illegible] by Theo. Pohlmann, of New Orleans. This contains an accurate [illegible] city, showing Exposition grounds, lines of street railways, points of [illegible] &c.; also illustrations of the [illegible] Exposition buildings, with a [illegible] of buildings and grounds, [illegible] information upon all points [illegible] the visitor. [illegible] knows by long experience that at no other time in the year do sheep require such close attention and good care as during late autumn, and he is confident there is little nourishment in frost-bitten grass.

"Sheep will look full and plump while out to late pasture, and the careless flockmaster may not be aware that they are all the time losing flesh, but when put on dry feed this loss will be seen. If I had grain to feed my sheep but one month in the year, it would be fed in November. When sheep are kept where they can be brought to the barn nights and fed hay, beginning as early as November 1, gradually tapering off from grass, to hay, it is a fine course to pursue. My breeding ewes were put on hay and grain November 10 this year, and let out in the pasture a few hours each day. My mutton lambs were put into the yards and sheds November 6, and have not been out since. They have gained finely."—[N. Y. Tribune.

Salt on Potato Ground.

In the Central New York Farmer's Club, when discussing the subject of potato scab, its cause and remedy, Hon. Geo. Benedict, Verona, N. Y., said that on one piece of land he sowed salt in the Fall, and had a splendid crop of potatoes, and on the same soil when he put on no salt he got no crop. For three years back he had good crops by using salt, but not otherwise. Mr. C. J. Edie, of Marcy, N. Y., said that during the season of 1881 he tried salt on soil in which he had planted potatoes. He broadcasted about 1,000 or 1,200 pounds per acre, and harrowed it in. The potatoes were then planted and others were planted alongside in the same field without salt. The effect was most striking. Just as far as the salt extended, the potatoes were smooth, sound and good size. In the rows next adjoining, where the salt did not reach, the potatoes were small, wormy and rough.

The Wealth of the Country.

In 1850 the Wealth of the United States was equivalent to $615 per capita; in 1880 it was $940 per capita. In New England the wealth to each person was $610 in 1850 and $1,235 in 1880. In the Middle States it was $525 per capita in 1850 and $1,480 in 1880. In the Southern States the rate per capita in 1850 was $[illegible] in 1880. This falling off is due to the emancipation of the slaves and the losses by the war. In the Western States the rate per capita in 1860 was $[illegible] in 1880 $850. CENTAUR LINIMENT

An absolute cure for Rheumatism, Sprains, Pain in the Back, Burns, Galls, &c. An instantaneous Pain-reliever.

Within the shadow. By Dorothy Holroyd. 12mo, $1.25. This volume is the latest addition to the famous "V. I. F." series, and is a story of such brilliancy and power as to at once entitle its author to recognition as a writer of high ability. She possesses strong originality, a keen eye for character, and a vigorous style, three qualities which are essential to the construction of a work of fiction. The plot she here sets herself to work out is ingenious, and yet not complicated or improbable, and the events happen so naturally that the reader is never called upon to exercise his imagination or to manufacture reasons for the action of the narrative. The heroine is Cecil Chester, a young girl who has been tenderly and carefully nurtured, and whose unusually fine natural gifts have been developed by judicious culture. By the death of both her parents she is suddenly left alone in the world, without relatives and without money. Of an independent spirit she rejects all offers of help from friends, choosing rather to avail herself of her accomplishments to support herself. She enters the home of a wealthy widow as a companion, and while there, by an extraordinary combination of circumstances is made to appear as having committed a criminal offence, for which she is arrested and brought to trial. The story of her sufferings is vividly told, and the chapter in which the climax is reached is strongly dramatic. The book cannot help making a sensation. Boston; D. Lothrop & Co., Publishers.

THE BEST FOR BUTTER.

There is but one best color for butter, and that is Wells, Richardson & Co's. Improved Butter Color, no candid investigator doubts. It is the best Butter Color in the world; is is free from sediment or impurity, always ready for instant use, and it imparts to butter that rich dandelion yellow, without a tinge of red, which is the acme of desirability in any butter color.

AN EDITOR'S TRIBUTE.

Theron P. Keator, Editor of Fort Wayne, Ind., "Gazette," writes: "For the past five years I have always used Dr. King's New Discovery, for coughs of a most severe character, as well as for those of a milder type. It never fails to effect a speedy cure. My friends to whom I have recommended it speak of it in the same high terms. Having been cured by it of every cough I have had for five years, I consider it the only reliable and sure cure for coughs, colds, etc." Call at R. E. Phillip's drug store and get a free trial bottle. Large size $1.

Matthew Arnold expects to make his American son-in-law a long visit.

AN OLD MAN'S BELIEF.

Have used Parker's Ginger Tonic for my bad cough and hemorrhage I had twenty-five years. I feel like another man since I used it. Am 66 years past. Believe it sure cure younger persons.

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently proceeded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose that he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like prespiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a common attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching, and affecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, O. Told by M. M. Williams. 29tf.

[illegible] PRISONS.

[illegible] to the Legislature, [illegible] think that because [illegible] failed to abolish con[illegible] labor, that the Legislature [illegible] to do but as the [illegible] Prison superintendent [illegible] his report states some very [illegible] reasons in favor of continuing the [illegible] labor system in prisons. The financial statement shows this to have been the most favorable year in the history of the system. The prison expenses were reduced $7,454 and the net surplus earnings were $10,697. The total earnings were $401,159 and the expenditures $390,501.

In regard to the discipline he says that out of the average population of 1,522 at Sing Sing during the year only eight were locked in cells for refractory disposition. The returns from Auburn and Clinton are equally good. In reference to the prisoners' physical condition the physicians of the three prisons say that the prisoners were never healthier. The effect of this system in preventing crimes and lessing the criminal population Mr. Baker shows by a table. It shows that while the population has increased 15 per cent during the past ten years, there has been a decline of 19 per cent in the total number of convicts in our prisons. There are also fewer committments. Mr. Bush a warden at Sing Sing says that the committments are fewer every year. Chaplain Searles of Auburn says that of 869 convicts discharged during the year he could learn of but seven who had recommitted crime. He adds "Considering the vast increase in the population of the state, I consider our diminishing prison population as one of the hopeful signs of the age." It has been argued against the system that contract labor works injury to free labor. Mr. Baker replies that the wage earners of the state are estimated at 1,000,000 and then asks "Can any man seriously claim that the intrests of the million men are injured because 2,800 men in the prisons do the work of 1,400 men who are free laborers when even this number is divided into eight industries.'

The superintendent certainly shows strong reasons for upholding the system of contract labor and the Gov., in refering to the vote of '83 as what ought to decide the question is hardly sound. It is a question that has merits and by those should be decided. The present Legislature will doubtless act upon it and it is to be hoped that they will act wisely.

WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT has attempted to acquit General Grant of the debt incurred in connection with the failure of the firm of Grant & Ward. Two offers have been made and declined, one on Saturday and one Sunday. Mr. Vanderbilt's procedure was as follows: Having bought in all the personal property pledged by General Grant as security for the debt, he on Saturday wrote to Mrs. Grant, presenting it, together with the judgements obtained at the request of General Grant and the mortgages on the realty, to Mrs. Grant as a separate estate, the only condition being that on his death, or sooner if she desired, the General's trophies of war and peace having historical interest, should go to the National Government. This generous offer was declined so far as anything except the trophies were concerned. These General Grant said should go to Washington as soon as they could be transmitted. Sunday Mr. Vanderbilt wrote a second letter in which he modified his offer so as to create a trust fund out of the proceeds of the real estate, the income from the fund to go to Mrs. Grant during her life time and the principal to be at her disposal by will. This offer was at first accepted, but has since been declined in a letter written by Mrs. Grant.

THE substance of Premier Ferry's reply to Earl Granville in regard to Egypt is as follows: That there is no necessity for a reduction of the Egyptian debt; that a loan be raised under the collective guarantee of the Powers, to pay the Alexandrian indemnity and to relieve the pressure on the Egyptian Treasury; that the Debt Commission include German and Russian delegates; that the present limits of the control be maintained, and that the English occupation of Egypt be limited to three years.

Prince Albert Victor, son of the Prince of Wales and heir presumptive to the English throne attained his majority January 8th. The day was celebrated with ringing of bells, firing of cannon and made a day of rejoicing.

David D. Swan ex-cashier of the Northern Pacific R. R., at St. Paul disappeared July 13 1884, after embezzling $51,000. He was captured at Suttons Bay Mich., last Tuesday, where he was employed as a confidential clerk under the name of D. T. Eddington. He was formerly well known in New York society.

James F. Legate of Kansas has announced that he made an effort to secure money from the National Republican committee for removing St. John from the Presidential contest. Mr. J. S. Clarkson a member of the Republican national cammittee makes a serious charge against St. John to the effect that he St. John offered to withdraw for $25,000 all of which is stoutly denied by Mr. St. John.

The offices of the Manhattan Elevated R. R. are being removed from New York to Irvington. The object is to avoid taxation, as at the latter place the taxes are much lower. There is a statue which says that a corporation shall pay its tax where its certificate of incorporation is filed. Irvington is a town on the Hudson River R. R. about twenty miles from New York. It is the summer home of Gould and Cyrus W. Field, principal owners of the Manhattan R. R.

Sarah Bernhardt will sell her present house and furniture at auction and will go into a smaller house. She has settled a part of her income on her creditors. She has entered into a contract to write the Paris correspondence for several foreign newspapers. The Tribune of Rome will pay her 4,000 francs monthly. Her first article will be a criticism on M. Sardou's dramas.

Reports from the exposition at New Orleans are not of an encouraging character. With their money gone and in debt subscribers failing to pay, many of the people opposed to them, fraud, railroads, car drivers' strikes, tumbling buildings et cetera, the management seems to have its hands full.

It represents the slowness of the South to catch the spirit of the go-aheadativeness of the West and North West. It is a golden opportunity for the South if they are wise enough to see it. There is no reason why they shall not make the Exposition a success if they will only come to the front and push the matter along. The board of management are looking to the people of New Orleans and the South to carry the undertaking through and their action will doubtless make or defeat the success of the Great Fair. There is a spirit of uneasiness and desire to locate South or West by many of the wide awake young men in our Northern and Eastern cities and villages and if the Exposition is a success numbers of them will go to see it and the same time make their trip a prospecting tour. A cordial reception at the South and a spirit of energy shown by its people will attract this band of prospectors, but sloth and cold heartedness will tend to drive them away. The South needs an influx of this generation of live young men and she now has a few months to improve her chances.

Specimens of the wood used in the construction of the transport boats furnished to the Nile expedition have been sent to the Admiralty. These are found to be rotten and entirely unfit for use. The boats are made out of Swedish spruce, and their structure was such that in a rush of water they were unlikely to hold together. An official inquiry has been ordered into the matter. [illegible]

Mr. Strassner, a court stenographer in New York city refuses to pay political assessments any longer. He says that he has had to pay one half his salary for the past three years.

General Butler has commenced suit for libel against the Boston Herald and lays damages at $25,000. The paper accused Butler of ignorance in the management of a transport ship during the war.

H. H. Warner & Co., have made a contract with the Whitney Glass Works, of Philadelphia, for 7,250,000 bottles, which will weigh 10,000,000 pounds and fill 500 cars. This is said to be the largest contract for bottles ever made.

A company styling itself the British Congo Company has been formed. The capital is fixed at $3,500,000. Messrs. Jacob Bright, Houldsworth, and other members of the House of Commons, are among the directors.

The Salvation Army has got into trouble at Wilkesberre, Pa. The town council forbid them using tambourines on the street. They continued using them, and the captain was arrested; but has since been released. It caused a rumpus and pistols were drawn but nothing more.

The trial of Madame Clovis-Hugues for the murder of her traducer, Private Detective Morin, was opened at the Court of Assizes at Paris January 8th. concluding her statement M'ame Clovis-Hugues said; "If you believe me guilty, condemn me. If you can understand the moral torture I have endured acquit me." In reply to a remark by the judges that the murder was unjustifiable, especially after fifteen months' meditation she said: "You would not reason so coolly if you had suffered as I have." and the prisoner proceeded to unfold the character of the persecution to which she had been subjected. Madame Clovis-Huhues was acquitted, but is condemned to pay $400 damages and the costs of the trial.

The English ministry continue to be censured for their inactivity. "The Times" asked the ministry to resign. Mr. W. H. Gladstone, the premier's son, in a speech predicted his father's speedy retirement from public life. Mr. Parnell has definitely established his authority over the Irish people. The Tiperary electors in a regular convention chose Mr. O'Ryan as a candidate against Mr. O'Connor, Mr. Parnell's nominee. Two days later Mr. Parnell summoned a new convention, made himself president, compelled Mr. O'Ryan to withdraw and forced Mr. O'Connor on the convention as a candidate under the threat of himself abandoning the nationalist movement, and closed the proceedings by disclaiming any desire to interfere with the free choice of the electors.

The opinion is rapidly growing that a formal declaration of war by France against China is imminent. It is also certain that the Chinese are deliberately following the advice given them by "Chinese" Gordon many years ago. The general's advice was to avoid pitched battles, but to maintain a vigorous guerilla warfare, leaving the rest to "King Fever." Letters from private soldiers of the French army in Tonquin and Formosa to their friends in France indicate that the fever king is proving a most effective ally of the Chinese. Authentic news has been received from Khartoum under date of December 28 to the effect that General Gordon and the garrison were in good health and spirits and that steamers were bringing cattle and grain from the North.

George Augustus Sala who has just arrrved in America, was entertained by the Lotus Club last Saturday evening; Whitelaw Reid presided. In response to the President's speech Mr. Sala among other things said: "There never before was a time when it was so expedient for England to say to America, "Don't quarrel!" England is surrounded by enemies—by real enemies who hate her. Why? Because she tries to be honest; and tries to be free. She is hated by Germans and Germany equally hates the institutions of this country, because she sees the blood and the bone of intelligent Germany coming to the United States and becoming capable citizens, instead of carrying the needle-muskets at home. She is hated by France, because France has got a Republic which she calls democratic and social, but which is still tyranny—and the worst of all tyrannies, because the tyrant is a mob. I do not disguise the fact that we [illegible]

[illegible] between [illegible] before [illegible] government [illegible] from the [illegible] Rico, sugars [illegible] and [illegible] In return nearly all of the goods of the United States are to be admitted to those islands free. Our government will lose a yearly revenue of some $50,000,000 as an offset to whatever advantages may be gained from having the ports of these islands open. They import from our country about $15,000,000 worth of goods annually and from all other nations about $8,000,000 worth. Special privileges are granted to us and American ships are favored. It is claimed for the treaty that it will increase the markets for our goods and will foster the American merchant ship trade. The question for congress to consider is whether this nation will receive advantages sufficient to compensate it for the loss of so large a revenue. It is evident that our exports cannot increase very largely as the island markets are not extensive. At first appearances it would seem that the signing of this treaty would be a bad bargain for the United States and a good one for Spain; and that the benefits would be conferred upon the Cuban tobacco growers and sugar planters only. This is not true. To say that we shall lose a revenue of some $50,000,000 sounds startling, but if our government loses this revenue who is to gain? Not the Cuban and Porto Rico planters because the competition in sugar growing in neighboring countries is so strong that they cannot raise their price on sugar when the duty is abolished. The gain is to the consumers of the sugar and it takes in nearly every family in this country. In 1872 the tariff on tea and coffee was abolished in obediedience to the popular demand for a "free breakfast table" but Brazil immediately raised a duty on the article produced and instead of our own people receiving the benefits of this tariff reduction the government of Brazil recieved it. The reason was that the coffee producing area was not large enough to supply the demand and cause competition. In the present case it is different, for the sugar districts of the central and south American states can produce largely in excess of the demand, and there is competition between them and the Spanish islands. So that a loss of revenue to this nation means simply a cheaper article to almost every household. Other considerations are important. It will stimulate trade between the countries and open markets in sister countries and bring the people into closer relations. Our country is progressing rapidly and it is a wise scheme to establish firmer relations with the neighboring states and governments south of us, and by commerce to increrse the power of the United States over them and establish similiar forms of government. People should not be mislead by the cry of fanatics. It will be a wise thing for our government to control the markets of Cuba and Porto Rico. It is true that the ratification of this treaty will injure some Louisiana sugar planters and northern tobacco manufacturers, but the individual interests should not hinder national interests.

THE NICARAGUAN TREATY.

The text of the treaty has been presented to the American people. It is an agreement between Nicaragua and the United States to build a ship canal across Nicaragua. The length is 181 miles of which 56 miles is across lake Nicaragua and part of the distance is up and along the river San Juah. The distance from New York to San Francisco by this route is much shorter than by the Panama canal. The country traversed is more healthful and is dotted by villages. Its estimated cost is $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. The United States and Nicaragua are to be joint owners; Nicaragua owning one third and the United States two thirds; Nicaragua furnishes the territory through which the canal is to pass and our government is to build it. Our government also guarantees the integrity of Nicaragua and there is to be a perpetual alliance between these countries. Difficulties are to be settled by arbitration. The management is jointly by the two countries. Work must be commenced within two years after the signing of the treaty and completed within ten years thereafter unless unforeseen obstacles intervene in which case the time is to be extended. The United States agree to loan at once $4,000,000 to Nicaragua for governmental purposes and that amount shall be a lien upon her interest in the canal until paid. Interest on the same 3 per cent. per annum.

The advocating of such a treaty will doubtless raise serious protests from England and France. France will wince at seeing a competition to her Panama canal and the English will growl at any scheme whereby this nation can threaten her interests. In war, too, these two countries, Nicaragua and our own can shut out other nations from the use of said canal. England protests that it is in violation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, but Secretary Frelinghuyson replies that this treaty has been abrogated by the action of England. Such a canal would undoubtedly be of vast importance to our nation. As a financial scheme it certainly looks as though it would pay big, if the receipts and growth of business of the Suez canal is any criterion. But to protect the canal when built requires a powerful navy and our war tubs are at present far from that point. It is a project of great magnitude, and would be a great undertaking on the part of our government. The agreement to guarantee the integrity of Nicaragua is a bold announcement, for it is in effect setting up a [illegible] over that country. The [illegible]

We take pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of the RURAL NEW-YORKER in another column. It is a wide-awake farmer's paper, owned and edited by live, practical working farmers, who own and farm 380 acres experimentally. On this all new things are carefully tested, and the result faithfully reported in the RURAL. Really new and valuable seeds are selected from those tested, and annually from six to eight kinds are given to its subscribers. In this way it has done much to benefit the farmers and advance their interests. Our only wonder is that everybody does not take the RURAL and share in these good things.

She says she has positive information that Green has a wife living near Youngstown, Ohio, whom he deserted in 1882, and witness believes he has still another in Vincennes, Indiana. Mrs. Olive Green testified that she married Green on July 4, 1884, and that she does not believe he has another wife. Other witnesses testified that they were present at Green's marriage in Oswego and others also in Alton. The justice decided to hold the prisoner to await the grand jury's action. He was taken to Lyons Thursday and jailed. Thursday his acknowledged wife visited him in the jail. She is utterly overcome with grief. Green says he is a nephew of Martin I. Townsend, of Troy, and that he believes his uncle will surely come to bail him and defend him if he should be brought to trial. Mr. Townsend disclaims any relationship with Green, and says he will have nothing to do with him.—[Utica Herald.

A very pleasant party numbering about eighty was held at the residence of Mrs. W. J. Graham last Friday evening. Refreshments were served and a general good time was enjoyed by all.

South Scriba.

Edward Potter has let his farm to Thomas Dodge, and is going to move to Waterford.

Charles Snow is the happiest man at Mt. Pleasant. It's a seven pound girl.

Married at St. Paul's Church, Oswego, N. Y., Jan. 8, 1885, by the Rev. Father Barry, Mr. William Hogan, of South Scriba, and Mrs. Johannah Maher, of New Haven, N. Y.

Mrs. C. M. Percival is seriously ill, but little hopes are entertained for her recovery.

SOUTH SCRIBA, Jan. 8.—Alonzo Sisson who has resided in this vicinity for about five years, died at his home Friday January 2d. The remains were taken to Watertown his former home, for interment Monday. Through Mr. Sisson's short stay here he had found many friends and was respected by all who knew him. He leaves a wife, two sons, and three daughters, of whom Mrs. W. Chase of Oswego Falls is one, to mourn his loss. About two months ago Mr. S. was taken with hemorage of the lungs which resulted in his death.

It is reported that John DeLong of North Volney, who was married Christmas eve to Mrs. Johannah Spencer by the Rev. Mr. Beebe, of New Haven, has absconded. It is stated that he has a wife somewhere in Cayuga county, and that she, wife No. 2, has a husband in Orwell, Oswego county.

South Hannibal.

SOUTH HANNIBAL, Jan. 14.—Nellie Wells has gone to Saratoga to spend the winter with friends.

Mr and Mrs. James Goodelle have returned from Mass.

The people of South Hannibal were treated to some very fine music on Saturday evening by the Randall Cornet Band.

Mr. S. E. Koalee attended the drafted mens convention at Oswego on Tuesday of this week.

SCHUYLER COLFAX DEAD.

He Suddenly Expires in the Railroad Depot at Mankato, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 13.—The Hon. Schuyler Colfax dropped dead in the Union depot at Mankato, this afternoon.

Mr. Colfax was born in New York city, March 23, 1823; received a public school education; and removing to Indiana in 1836, became a lawyer. He was editor and owner of the South Bend Register from 1845 to 1855. In 1850 he was chosen a member of the Constitutional Convention for that State; in 1848 and '52 he was a delegate to the Whig National conventions, and secretary of each. He was first elected Representative in Congress in 1854 and was six times re-elected [illegible]

A. E. Wallace a barber from Canada has opened a shop in the basement of the Lewis House.

The latest in town is the new spring styles of black and brown stiff hats at H. & A. Rosenbloom's, the clothiers.

Miss Carrier of Oswego visits Fulton every Saturday and gives instructions in dancing. Read her notice in another column.

The M. C. Literary society met at the residence of E. R. Redhead on Monday evening. The next meeting will occur at the residence of Dr. Haviland.

Mrs. Meyer is still in jail at Oswego and remains in a taciturn state. Those who visit her seem convinced of her insanity. The grand jury will reach her case this week.

Miss Nora Kopp of Syracuse, gave her first lessons in vocal music in Fulton, last Wednesday to a class of eight at the Lewis House parlors. Miss Kopp has a high reputation as a singer as well as being an excellent teacher.

When Mr. Nugent was here last season with his company he gave us some very fine entertainments but still we missed Mr. and Miss Gleason now that they are together again with their new plays and fine support we expect to see the sign up before 8 o'clock "standing room only."

The friends in Fulton of Walter, son of Dr. P. W. Emens of Syracuse will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed by the United States government as interpreter at the United States Consulate in Shanghai, China. His salary is $2,000 a year in gold. Mr. Emens has only been in China three years, and studied the language out of business hours.

Last Monday afternoon a very difficult and successful surgical operation was performed in this village on Mrs. Smith Davis who resides on Second street, by [illegible] of Oswego and Miller of Fulton. The operation necessitated the removal of the right breast in which seven large cancers were located. Mrs. Davis is at present very comfortable and it is believed that she will survive.

The Littlejohn lumber Co." have about eighty men engaged at their mill in Redfield and are producing 15,000 feet of lumber per day. They have large quantities of pulp timber, which has been brought as far as Smartville by sleighs, and have been left there on account of the absence of snow, awaiting transportation to the railroad at Lacona, thence to the Fulton pulp works.

Remember the celebrated and popular Redpath Concert Co., gives one of their enjoyable entertainments at the Opera House, Friday evening, Jan. 16. To hear Miss Chamberlain whistle one of her solos is worth the price of admission. This is the second of the Star Course. Tickets for the balance of the course only $1 reserved seats. Admission Friday evening, reserved seats, 35 and 50 cents, back gallery 25 cents.

Lovers of healthy entertainments have a rare chance to gratify their desire. The three remaining numbers of the Lecture Course are each first class. The price of tickets for the three $1.00 brings it within the reach of nearly every one. The lecturers Robert Collyer and E. P. Roe are to well known to need comment and in regard to the Redpath Concert Co., which appears Friday night the press of the towns they are visiting speak in the highest praise of their entertainment. It is a good thing to support a lecture course of this kind. One always learns something of interest and worth.

It has been noted that the police court business has been dull lately. Some say it is because of the efficient police force; some on account of the salvation army; others that it is the shrinkage in money; but none of these are the cause. We have carefully investigated the matter and have come to the conclusion that "the toughs" are afraid to commit crime for fear that they will lose their lives by being tried in the barn. We mean the room occupied by the Village Board. They say that a jury will "hang" any man that keeps them freezing to death hearing his case; And they would "hang" him anyway if he did not make a defense. So between the two fires they are going to keep straight until warm weather comes or they move the court to some place where the jury can keep warm.

He Takes Paris Green.

Last night Fremont Perry ate his supper at the Cornell House about 7 o'clock p. m. after he got up from the table he mixed some stuff in a saucer and drank it. The substance was Paris green. He turned and made some remark to Mrs. Clark who noticed from the label on a paper that he threw away that it was Paris green. Dr. Hall was at once summoned and by the use of the stomach pump saved Fremont from a speedy departure. Perry is driving the doctor about as usual this morning. His sufferings for a time were terrible. Dr. Miller states that he took Paris green last Saturday night and came to his room at 3 o'clock Sunday morning to see if he could save him from the effects of it. Fremont's love for Nellie Stewart is at the bottom of the affair.

Public Installation.

During the past year the Masonic bodies of Fulton have very much improved the interior of their Lodge Room by frescoing the walls, refurnishing &c., &c., and in order to give their friends an opportunity to visit their rooms and see something of the inside of masonry, the members of the Royal Arch Chapter, purpose giving a public installation of officers, on Wednesday evening the 21st inst. to which they will invite their friends. While the Chapter would very gladly extend a public invitation to all to be present on that occasion, the seating capacity of their lodge room will compel them to limit their invitations to personal friends and friends of masonry.

G. A. R.

The state encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held in Utica the first week in February. The citizens and members of the Grand Army posts of Utica are making preparations to properly receive and entertain the delegates who will be present. George E. Dunham has been made chairman of the subscription committee. An effort will be made to raise $1,500 by subscription.

R. W. & O. R. R.

The Rome, Watertown, and Ogdensburg Railroad Company issued a statement on Wednesday that the net earnings of that company for the first two months of the present fiscal year were $146,745.31, an increase of $15,120 over the net earnings for the corresponding period last year.

G. C. Lathrop Closed.

At 11 a. m. this morning the confectionery store of G. C. Lathrop closed. A sheriff sale notice was tacked on the door and the curtains drawn. Willard Johnson is the judgement creditor in the sum of $1,057.

To Poultry Raisers.

We the undersigned, as well as many of our neighbors, and friends, being in monthly receipts of a journal, called the Poultry Raiser, published in Chicago, Ill., by R. B. MARRIED.—At the residence of the brides' father in Volney Jan. 8, 1885, by the Rev. A. M. Roe, Alonzo Clark of Fulton to Miss Hattie Coles of Volney.

Mrs. Dennis Coin, of San Francisco, Cal., who has been visiting her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Lappin of this village for several months started for home this morning accompanied by her brother, Frank Lappin.

Great bargains in wagons and carriages. Mr. Bristol has purchased a large stock of wagons and carriages at bankrupt sale and will be pleased to give his customers the benefit of greatly reduced prices in consequence.

The house of George Seymour on Seneca street caught fire this morning, from a defective stove pipe. The fire was extinguished, however, by the assistance of neighbors, before much damage was done.

Rev. Charles H. Smith of Cooperstown, will preach in the Presbyterian church next Sunday. The Rev. Mr. Clark of Auburn Theological Seminary preached an excellent sermon from the pulpit last Sunday.

The board of Supervisors finished their labors last Saturday and adjourned. They fixed the tax ratio of Volney for this year at $1.412 as compared with 1,53 last year's ratio; and Granby at .76 this year as compared with .878 last year's ratio.

F. E. Munger, editor and proprietor of the Sandy Creek News has sold his interests in the office to F. D. Crouse, a graduate from the Syracuse University. Mr. Munger has made the News a live and valuable journal. We wish Mr. Crouse success in his undertaking.

Last Monday two large pulleys in the Oswego Falls factories, one fifteen and the other seven feet in diameter, were broken. This will necessitate the shutting down of the dye house, weave sheds and the whole upper mill. It will take a month to repair the damage. A large number of hands will be thrown out of work.

John W. Swan, late of the lumber firm of Schenck & Swan of this place, and Frank H. Mable of Binghamton, will enter into business in that city on or about February 1. These gentlemen propose to stock up a store with paints, oils, glass and wall paper. Mr. Swan is well known in Fulton as an enterprising young man of high standing and it is the earnest wish of his many friends here that he may succeed in his new undertaking. Mr. Swan left for New York Monday night to purchase his stock.

There was a very pleasant party of young people assembled at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Nichols on Fourth street last Thursday evening in response to invitations extended by their daughter Miss Gertrude, who gave the party in honor of her friend Miss Katie Hoff of Buffalo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hoff of this village. The party consisted mostly of old schoolmates and numbered about twelve. Miss Hoff returned Saturday to Buffalo, where she is attending school

Last Thursday evening a very pleasant gathering of friends and relatives met at the residence of Mr. G. A. Leonard's to witness the marriage of their only daughter, Miss Ella, to Mr. J. S. Stevenson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. F. Markham of Fulton. Rev's McFarland and Dibble were also present. Among the guests from abroad we noticed Mrs. Rev. J. C. Darling of Oswego, Mr. R. Leonard of Fulton, brother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] and Miss Hattie Teague of [illegible], Mr. [illegible] Hutchinson [illegible] N. Y. The bride and groom [illegible] in this [illegible] by all [illegible] and valuable [illegible] we [illegible]

[illegible] under suspension of the rules, and a [illegible] post-holiday [illegible] had prevailed in the House up to the moment that Representative [illegible] precipitated the first tariff conflict of the session. He wanted to pass a bill abolishing the Internal Revenue tax on tobacco, cigars, snuff, alcohol, brandies, etc., stating it would reduce the revenue fifty or sixty millions annually. The House divided instantly on the Tariff question, and after half an hour's debate, the bill was buried under the vote of a large majority.

Opposition to a discussion of the Bankruptcy bill was led by Congressman Hammond of Georgia, who said, the business men who ask for the passage of the bill were actuated by pure selfishness, as were also his constituents who opposed it. The assertion was made that if the bill became a law, it would create 5,000 offices, and Representative Willis raised a laugh by an appeal to spare the Democrats the infliction of five thousand more applicants in addition to those with which they are already besieged. Mr. Randall voted with the Southern and Western opponents of the motion, and as he was conspicuously active on the floor while the vote was being taken the New York Members openly hold him responsible for the result.

While the Pension Appropriation, which passed the House, was being discussed, Mr. Warner of Ohio inveighed against greedy pension agents, and secured an amendment calculated to remedy the abuse. He said the piracy of the middle ages was an honest calling compared with the operations of claim agents in the city of Washington.

The Pension office, and the Interior Department, of which it was a bureau, will be a field in which President-elect Cleveland will have abundant opportunity to practice adminstrative reform, with room for beneficial results. Like the Star Route theives, pension swindlers are of no party, and their allies in office will be found among the most pliant and time-serving fawners upon the new administration.

The exclusive Senate has passed a bill forfeiting an Oregon land grant this week, discussing Inter-State Commerce, and spent much time talking about the treaties, Spanish and Nicaraguan, behind barred doors. Safe from the gaze of the outside world Senatorial dignity relaxes, lifts its feet upon desks, smokes, dozes, tells funny stories, and otherwise disports itself like ordinary humanity under similar circumstances, or like the House does with the eyes of the world upon it.

The continued illness of the Chief Justice of the United States has given rise to many rumors and much speculation concerning changes on the Supreme bench in case of his death or resignation. The family of Justice Waite, however, express no fears that he will not recover. His daughter was out calling on two days of this week, and was surprised to learn from those whom she visited that her father was near the brink of the grave.

Of all the tempting offices in the gift of the incoming President, none seem to be more eagerly sought than the Marshalship of the District. To pose as a master of ceremonies at all the state receptions and dinners for the next four years, with all the consequent social prestige, is a pleasant position to look forward to. Nearly every state in the Union has an applicant for this office, and the District of Columbia is strongly asserting her claims.

In accordance with the spirit of the civil service rules, the record of the year in the Treasury Department shows that of one hundred and thirty-five appointments made they were dristributed fairly among thirty-five States and Territories here represented, Pennsylvania was favored with thirteen appointments, New York with twelve, and Ohio with nine.

Everything points to a complete success of the inauguration ceremonies. Inaugural headquarters has become a lively place, and committees are demonstrating their fitness for the work of preparation. From the non-partisan spirit in which citizens are lending help, it would seem there will be a demonstration free from party feeling on inauguration day.

[illegible] the horse's feet in a state of nature need no shoes. They are only to be tolerated in the winter to prevent slipping, and should then be very light. The compelling of a horse to wear a heavy set of shoes and then to go a long time without having them re-set is simply barbarous. The numerous inventions and devices for improvement, for the past century prove the need of some better system of horse shoeing. The best method of promoting the growth of a horse's hoof is to keep them frequently wet. The simple application of water is all that is necessary.

Mr. Ellsworth, of Windom, after growing tobacco for years became disgusted, gave it up and devotes the land to sorghum growing. He manufactures syrup from the cane, and made 160 gallons to the acre last year, which sold readily at 65 cents—cost of manufacture 25 cents—the bagasse makes excellent bedding. He got 25 bushels of seed per acre, which makes capital (buckwbeat) cakes, which is better than the genuine. He is well pleased with his new crop—raises the Amber Cane.

Mr. Whitelaw, of New Jersey contended that it was possible for farmers to mind their own business on business principles, and make a good profit in so doing. He believed the farmers owed much to the Patrons of Husbandry, and pleaded for the extension of the order. He thought it had done, and would do, much to prevent imposition and frauds, so often practiced upon the farming class, and would do much to elevate and fit farmers to enjoy the rights which they could secure by co-operation.

Mr. J. B. Olcott said nothing so affects man's welfare and happiness as health. It is the foundation of all that makes life desirable. The sanitary condition of farmers' premises is, as a rule, simply vile; the subject should be constantly agitated till a reformation shall be accomplished.

It is conceded by all that the best covering for strawberries, where attainable, is salt grass hay; where this is not to be had, a slight covering of earth was recommended; it has no bad qualities and is always at hand. To the question which are the best red raspberries the answer was made, Cuthbert, Reliance Early Prolific and Mountclair.

Mr. T. B. Wakemam, in considering the question "Will Farming Pay?' said that the millions of dollars made out of farming in New England had been put into investments at three to five per cent., though the money would draw twice that interest if invested in improving the farms. Farms of from 20 to 200 acres could be had for less than the cost of improvements. The average yield of corn in Connecticut is 33 bushels per acre, and only two states have so high an average. Wheat averages equally high, and all crops bring one-third more here than at the West. It was formerly thought the dullest boy would do for the farmer, now farming wants the brightest. The most intelligent farmers are the most successful. A liberal application of various manures, thorough cultivation and plenty of thought in the owner, seldom fail of securing good crops and a fair profit. Of a given number of young men, one half making farming a study and business, the other half engaging in merchantile pursuits, the former half would average much the more successful, and live the longest and enjoy life the best. Intelligence and thought are needed and will pay on New England farms. E. W.

Success with Celery.

While gardening is only a secondary matter with me, my success with celery this season has been such that it may not be amiss to give my plan for the benefit of beginners. Sow seed outdoors, and set the plants in trenches about the middle of May. As they grow, keep filling in the earth, always keeping the stem held up to keep the soil from getting inside. When a foot high, instead of holding the stems up while the earth is drawn around the stocks, I tie them, after which banking is easy. In tying, care should be used to avoid breaking any stem, as it would [illegible] the sound ones could blanch. [illegible]

[illegible] stock feeding, said [illegible] fed to [illegible] The barn should be light and warm [illegible] well ventilated.—[Misc.] It costs as much to raise a poor, as a good animal, and while you lose on the first, you make a profit on the last. A fat cow gives rich milk which makes good butter. No dairy man should be content with a cow that makes less than 250 pounds of butter per year.

Mr. Frank S. Peer, Mt Morris, said the best cow is the one that will convert the most food into the greatest amount of the desired product in the shortest time. The beef cow should eat the least and get the fattest; the milch cow should eat the most and keep the poorest. He knew a cow to give 90 pounds of milk, which made only two pounds two ounces of butter; another gave 32 pounds, which made 3¼ pounds. Economy in feeding is to feed liberally. He regarded wheat-bran and middlings as the best food; next to this come oats and cotton-seed meal. He is no friend to corn meal as cow feed, preferring oats and bran, half and half, to oats and corn meal. He likes as a feeding ration, four pounds of bran, three pounds of oats and one pound of cotton-seed meal.

Dr. Sturtevant, of the New York Experiment Station, said chemistry told us what was in a feeding stuff, provided we get it all out; but did not tell which was the most profitable to feed. Feeding is not so much a chemical as a practical problem. A cow is a machine converting food into heat, motion, flesh and dairy products. The products are the only available results of the food consumed, the others are the wasted parts, or, dead weight; therefore it is essential that the animal be kept warm and quiet.

T. D. Curtis, Syracuse, in discussing dairying in the West, said that while the East had the advantage of purer and more accessable water, the West had richer and cheaper lands. The only check to a tendency to overdo dairying in the West is the slowness with which good dairy cows are increased. He thinks the East is ahead in the quality of butter made.

Hon. H. R. Low said that corn at 25 to 30 cents per bushel, is equivalent to hay at $7 to $8 per ton; while the freight charges on Western dairy products are high. The competition from bogus products is much more damaging than all others. He was glad to see the law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of these, and was glad it had been sustained by the court.

B. D. Gilbert, of Utica, in considering the prospects of the dairy, said the skimmer has done great injury to the cheese interests. It has cast suspicion on our products, and sent the purchasers to Canada. He thinks skimming a losing business. Our best butter market is the home market.

Mr. F. Blanchard, Jamestown, in talking of Farmers' mistakes, says it is a great mistake to follow the advice of those writers who have no practical knowledge of the farm. Plowing in clover he thinks is a cheaper way of fertilizing the soil than buying commercial manures or even drawing out barnyard manure. He thinks that any land that will grow clover can be enriched without any other manure.

Prof. Roberts of Cornell University, said there was a great loss in keeping a a poor cow, also in feeding poor feed. The difference in absolute value of manure was more than the difference in the cost of food. He thought that cotton-seed meal which cost $27 per ton, was worth $34 as manure to apply to the soil. The manure made by 16 horses in a covered barn-yard in six months, by careful estimate and analysis, was worth $1,000. He therefore thinks it much better to make this rich manure on the farm than to purchase comercial fertilizers; but it must be carefully looked after that nothing be lost. He had made an experiment in cutting clover and in digging the roots and carefully analyzing both, by which he had ascertained the manural value of clover to be $34 per acre. On the College farm they feed all the hay and straw and coarse grain produced, and in addition, bought about 16 car loads of grain cotton-seed meal, bran; etc. and they made the farm pay.

After the passage of resolutions highly complimentary to Prof. Arnold, the the convention adjourned. T. D. C.

Mother as a Barber.

When a fond mother has to cut her boy's hair she draws the front hair over his eyes and leaves it there while she cuts that which is at the back. The hair which lies over his eyes appears to be surcharged with electric needles, and that which is silently dropping down under his collar band appears to be on fire. She has unconsciously pushed his head forward until his nose presses his breast. In the meantime he is seized with an irresistible desire to blow his nose, but he recollects that his handkerchief is in the other room. Then a fly lights on his nose, and does it so unexpectedly that he involuntarily dodges, and catches the point of the shears in his left ear. At this he commences to cry and wish he was a man. But his mother doesn't notice him. When she is through she holds his jacket collar back from his neck, and, with her mouth blows the short bits of hair from [illegible] of his head down his back. [illegible]

[illegible] of the West [illegible] used our powers [illegible] the bounties of [illegible] candidly review, [illegible] that the work of [illegible] quickly and thoroughly done. But little more than a generation has been required to overspread the West to the twentieth parallel, where the rainfall is under twenty inches, and to cut down the average for wheat yield from 30 to 40 per cent, until the country averages but a little more than the land of the ignorant Indian Ryot with his wooden plough, where for ages unknown few animals have been kept and paucity of fuel has forced the burning of manure. There is a grim pleasure in surveying the magnificent genius that has wrought this spoliation. We have had our dance and are now mourning over the bill for the fiddler. The situation of affairs in the West in reference to the price of wheat, etc., etc., is too well understood to need repetition. The trouble lies much deeper than the price of wheat. Mechanical farming that ignores studidious methods that has no wise system of crop management, and that draws continually on soil fertility, is bound to weaken a country as a competitor in the world's food markets. Fluctuating between ten and thirteen bushels of wheat per acre. We cannot expect a quantity so unworthy of genius to compete with new fields occupied with cheap labor where commercial enterprise is pushing railway and modern imporvements.

What next? We are in a historical period of American agriculture, a fact brought into view by the present price of wheat and a redundant wheat market, but not caused by the price of wheat, save only to a secondary degree. The best lands of the country within the aera of sufficient rainfall are now so far owned by private individuals and actually occupied by settlers that the marked feature of increase of farm population within the area already overrun, rather than in expansion of new field. Again, we are now recognizing the fact that destructive farming has had its day and accomplished its misson. Necessity, to whose lessons all bow submission, is the teacher of the latter fact. The two conditions enumerated are the parents of a system of recuperative farming now to be inaugurated over the greater part of a large portion of the West. We can double our results. By roatation of crops, in which clover and grass figure big; by the consequent increase of stock, and by more thorough and economical methods, and by more manuring, we can easily double our stock and raise the same amount of corn and grain crops on one half the area now used. I cannot now elaborate a scheme of farming best designed for success, but am happy to say that our farmers in Missouri are taking the first step in the right direction, namely, they are sowing less wheat and replacing it largely with grass and clover. A couple of years ago I estimated that only about 11 per cent of our lands inclosed as fields, or designed for tillage, were in grass.

All high farming, where staple crops are grown, is based upon a large ratio of grass to other tillage crops, and upon stock for the consumption of the hay, and the consumption of straw, etc., of the grains grown. England and the European countries run from 51 per cent. of grass upward. New England, or at least one of her states, has 84 per cent. of her tillage in grass. Dr. Lawes has shown that grass is the great conserving corp of soil fertility. The carbonate of ammonia volatillized from the surface of exposed ground, the nitric acid washed into the subsoil of the same, and the surface soil swept away (darkening our Western waters,) when exposed for grain and hood crops, is saved by grass, nature's preservative of the soil. The above authority also informs us that his land continually tilled contains but one half the nitrogen that an adjoining section does continually under grass. To its natural advantage, in feeding to stock, we may add the artificial aid of the returned manure. But, as this letter is more general than specific, let me express the hope that the movement inaugurated may continue despite of the higher price of wheat that is likely to tempt the thought less, before a year expires, to again return to wheat. With high and diversified farming we can defy the world; with our old system misfortune is sure. Let us exhaust our talents in upbuilding our farms, rather than in their exhaustion. This generation will happily witness the day when the United States will cease to export food products, to her great good and peace of mind.

The repair of broken limbs of farm animals has been shown to be an easy operation, Mr. H. Stewart remarks. All that is required is to put the animal—if a large one—in slings, to bring the fracture into proper position, and then bind the limb with bandages dipped in common plaster of Paris paste. The bandage is made in the form of a roll, by sewing the ends together in a long strip and winding this around the limb in the usual manner. The limbs of small animals may be repaired by envaloping them in wetted straw-board, fitting it to the limb carefully, and then binding a common bandage over it.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and get in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accummulate in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

In our long and varied experience in handling watches, we cannot but acknowledge and give our testimony that the Keystone Solid Silver Watch Cases are the best made to our knowledge. Carefulness in Old Age.

A medical man compares an old man to an old wagon; with light loading and careful usage it will last for years; but one heavy load or sudden strain will break it and ruin it forever. So many people reach the age of 50 or 60, or 70, measureably free from most of the pains and infirmities of age, cheery in heart, and sound in health, ripe in wisdom and experience, with sympathies mellowed by age, and with reasonable prospects and opportunities for continued usefulness in the world for a considerable time. Let such persons be thankful, but let them be careful.

An old constitution is like an old bone—broken with ease, mended with difficulty. A young tree bends to the gale, an old one snaps and falls before the blast. A single hard lift, an hour of heating work, an evening of exposure to rain or damp, a severe chill, an excess of food, the unusual indulgence of an appetite or passion, a sudden fit of anger, an improper dose of medicine—any of these or other similar things may cut off a valuable life in an hour, and leave the fair hopes of usefulness and enjoyment but a shapeless wreck.

A THRILLING STORY

As Told by a Merchant in Troy, N. Y.—A Surgical Operation Avoided—How A Father, Wife and Daughter Escaped an Awful Doom

Of the hundreds of accounts of remarkable cures wrought by DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, none have appeared so purely astonishing as the following: The persons mentioned are among the most highly respected in the city of Troy, and the story as told by the father will prove interesting to all our readers.—ED.

TROY, N.Y.

Dr. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My daughter was afflicted with a severe growth of Fungus. To remove it we had resorted to almost every remedy and consulted the most prominent surgeons and physicians. Dr.—— of Troy, said that a surgical operation would be necessary, but fearing fatal results I hesitated. Some of the physicians claimed that it was caused by one thing and some by another The Fungus was prominent and disfigured her looks. Having heard of Dr. Kennedys' FAVORITE REMEDY working so thoroughly on the blood I determined to try it, to see if this medicine could do what doctors had failed to do and surgeons had hardly dared to undertake. I can say in truth that the result of this trial was the complete cure of my daughter of this dreadful malady. Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY alone effected it. We used nothing else, for other things had completely failed. My daughter to-day enjoys vigorous health and to Favorite Remedy alone is the credit due. My wife also was very poor in health, due to some liver difficulty with which she had suffered a long time until she became very much reduced in flesh. A trial of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has resulted in a complete restoration of her health, which she had not enjoyed for years. She had gained in flesh and strength, and thus secured perfect health, and this is DUE ENTIRELY TO DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. As for myself, being engaged in the grocery and commissien business, which makes it necessary for me to test the quality of different articles, like butter, etc., my sense of taste and my stomach were seriously injured, Everything seemed to nauseate me, and fearful of dyspepsia in the most severe form. I tried DR. KENNEDY,S FAVORITE REMEDY, The first bottle afforded immediate Relief, and from that day to this I can say that Favorite Remedy has restored me to perfect health. These are facts which I claim prove that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best medicine in the world for those afflicted with the above difficulties. If any one in the city of Troy doubts the truth of these statements let him come to me and I will prove them. I have recommended Favorite Remedy to hundreds and with the same good results.

Yours, etc., WILLIAM WINSOR.

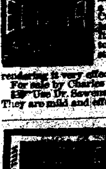
Sure Thing! Sure Thing!



For the speedy and permanent cure of Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Colic, Cholera, Cholera Morbus, and the Summer Complaint of Children Teething.

Purely vegetable in its composition. We can heartily commend it for its speedy and decided effects in even the worst cases, curing without reaction, and soothing and healing as it cures. It Never fails, I feel confident in affirming that no one has produced a Remedy which can equal the CORDIAL ELIXIR in the number and excellence of its points. It is so palatable and pleasant to the taste that it subdues instead of producing nausea, rendering it very effective with children.

[illegible] only daughter [illegible] undertaker, at [illegible] Cemetery street

[illegible] hundred dollar out fits [illegible] coffins" are well known [illegible], for his quarter column [illegible] have appeared on the [illegible] of the daily papers for years. [illegible] gathered in a goodly surplus of silver dollars, but is one of the men, who have to be constantly employed in order to exist; so he makes his business serve as his religion, and amusement, and as he employs a number of men, is always among them to see that they are [illegible] idle.

[illegible] room back of the office, he seldom [illegible], and his daughter rarely sees [illegible].

[illegible] has lived, surrounded by coffins, grave-diggers and sextons, and yet this [illegible] not killed her lively nature, nor, her natural love for a joke.

Her mother, years ago, had gone the way of all flesh, and had been buried, with great pomp, in one of the celebrated "hundred dollar outfits."

Deadina is a member of the High Steeple reform church, and takes an active interest in all affairs connected with it. All her friends are members and within the social circle she moves as a leader.

Her father always gave her plenty of money, and as she is good looking, and dresses well, she never lacks for company.

Strange to say she likes, and takes an interest in her father's business, and does not care to move away from the building in which her mother died, and the father had worked for his worldly success.

So she lived in the pleasant rooms back of the office, and did the house work, as a matter of course.

The entrance to the rooms lead through the office and this was the only thing thing that marred the beauty of the little home, for anyone passing through can't help but shudder and think of the time when they will occupy a coffin. Such thoughts are liable to cast a gloom over a social call.

Who was it that said, "None but the brave deserve the fair!" Me thinks they had not the church fair in their minds when they said it, for although the brave, don't deserve the church fair, they usually get it, or part thereof.

Young braves as a rule, fight shy of church fairs, but this could not be said of the Brooklyn young men, who were [illegible] the Academy of Music on Christmas eve a year ago. The attraction was the annual fair of the High Steeple church, and the great building was radiant with bright lights, gay [illegible] and the merry laughs and shouts of the Christmas crowd.

[illegible] to attract the eye was [illegible] and all the booths were in [illegible] the fair daughters of the church. Deadina had charge of the [illegible] where she, and her lovely [illegible] sold the goods usually found in a general store, but at prices that would open the eyes of a regular dealer.

* * * * * * *

Bobby Silk—everyone called him, Bobby, was a self made man, young it is [illegible] as far as he had journed on [illegible] had made his own way.

[illegible] the years, he had worked [illegible] boy to head sales [illegible] Store," the largest [illegible] Brooklyn. Everyone [illegible] was a favorite [illegible]

[illegible] Club, claimed [illegible] played [illegible]

[illegible] the words "Ladies' fair" and [illegible] so brightening up its exterior [illegible] great buildings. He inspected the [illegible] booths [illegible] and his [illegible] the grab bag, and at last found himself at the counter of the general store. "Ah, I've found her! The [illegible] girl that I can love! And now I will win her, come what will."

He asked Deadina the price of everything on the counter, just to hear her talk, and purchasing some trifles went home happy with his new found treasure and the strange beating of his heart. Every evening he was at the counter, buying things that he could not use, and that did not add to the decoration of the room.

On Saturday night the fair came to an end, and so Bobby was unhappy; and he wandered around listlessly, vainly looking for some one who could introduce him to "his angle."

"Confound the laws of etiquette! Why can't I go up, and introduce myself, and tell her I need her friendship? She will get away from me, and I'll have to go back to my old life."

"Hello" Bobby! What brings you here, and why so pensive?" It was Jenks from the store. "Oh! Fred do you know her, and won't you introduce me?" "Who? What? are you daft! man? I can't guess your riddle." Silk explained, and as Jenks had met Miss Toombs, he bestowed on Bobby the boon he begged for, and then withdrew. In five minutes our hero was behind the counter, and by his efforts sold all they had in stock, and that night he escorted Deadina to her home, and received a pleasant "thank you," and an invitation to call. Before his glass that night, he sang love ballads, talked with himself, and could not help but notice his changed appearance. I'm in love, was stamped, plainly on his face. He could not reconcile Deadina, and her surroundings, but thought he could soon marry her, and then move into his new home, away from the coffins and shrouds.

All that winter he was by his charmer's side, and when the spring time came, he like other young men, "fondly turned to thoughts of love," and every time he called, tried to tell the words he had so often rehearsed. He tried in his room all the love scenes in which he had depicted the tender passion, but failed to find one that would suit him; so he determined to say just what his heart prompted, relying on his dramatic training to win the case.

* * * * * * * *

Prospect Park is a favorite resort for Brooklyn lovers, during all seasons, but the spring time is of course the best time for that class of people. The air is filled with sweet perfume, and the dogwood blossoms add untold beauty to the scene. The first notes of the early birds fall pleasantly on the ear, heralding the approach of their less hardy companions. The natural grottos and deep dells, bright in their new dress, afford a safe retreat for both the birds and the lovers where they can coo and mate, to their heart's desire, and be away from the maddening crowd. It was here in the "Lover's Glen," that Bobby first told Deadina his love story. "How bright and lovely is all nature, Miss Toombs, but in my eyes thou art still more lovely, and here surrounded by everything perfect—he grasped her hand—I want to ask you to—— "Hi! Hi! Jimmy come over de bank! here's a fellow making a fool of hisself." If Silk could have caught that boy he would have strangled him, and over his ribbons next day, he cursed him and all his ilk, forgetting that only a few years ago he himself belonged to the same species of beings. He was none the less determined, however, and that same evening, called at the Toomb's residence to try again. Seated in the pleasant back parlor, he chatted with Deadina, on common place subjects, and gradually approaching the sentimental, he dropped on his knees and exclaimed: "When thou art nigh, Deadina, it seems a new creation round; the sun hath fairer——.

"Please excuse the interreuption, but Mr. Silk, may I speak with you a moment?" "Certainly, Sir," and Bobby followed Mr. Toombs into the office, expecting to receive the customary "Bless you my son."

"I want to ask a great favor to-night, and I've hesitated some time."

"Anything, Mr. Toombs, I can do I am willing to do it; said Bobby.

"Well, all the men are out, and some one must sit up with the corpse at number six Cavalry street, and if you will [illegible] do it you will greatly oblige [illegible]

[illegible] sinking through the floor, [illegible] caught, he put on [illegible] where he [illegible] his sweet [illegible]

drink a cup [illegible] and [illegible] through the [illegible] abstractly into [illegible] feasted his [illegible] to call by Deadina [illegible] have another cup of tea.

Mellowed by the pleasant surroundings he determined to [illegible] so soon as the meal was finished and they became settled again, he grasped her had, and said: "Deadina I love thee so well, so tenderly, thou'st loved, adored by me, that——

"Oh one moment, Mr. Silk. I hear the telephone bell, and away she glided, and delivered the message to her father. When she returned Bobby was gone, and then she relented.

As he did not call again the next night she sent him a sweet little note, that he read several times, and then came to the conclusion that she did love him, and would listen to what he had to tell her.

He called the next evening, and in a bantering, wordy war he soon forgot his former failure, and drifted into talk bordering on the sentimental.

They were standing at the window, and placing his hands on her shoulders, Bobby exclaimed: "Deadina, I have several times tried to tell you of my love, and have failed, and if you only knew the agony I have endured, the sleepless nights I have gone through, I am sure you would give me some hope. I intend to tell you all, now, and won't let anything interrupt me this——

"Beggin' your pardon sir, but could I ask you to give me a hand on this ice box?" It was Hearsehacks, the foreman this time, so Bobby had to go, and help lift one end of the big box, and put it in the long wagon. This accomplished he pulled his hat over his eyes, and started down the street. The next morning Deadina was about the house, busy with the work, singing gaily, and laughing at her lover. She concluded that she did love him "just a little," and when he called again would tell him so.

Her father interrupted her pleasant reverie and asked her to attend to the telephone.

She took the receiver from the hook, and answering the call, received the message from the coroner's office. He further heard a scream, and a heavy fall, and when he reached his daughter, she was prostrated in a faint, and the telephone receiver, torn from the instrument, was tightly grasped in her hand.

With the help of a physician she was resucitated enough to tell her father what had happened. Between the sobs, she said that the Coroner's Clerk reported the finding of the body of a young man, drowned in the East River. By papers found on his person, he was identified as Mr. Bobby Silk. She could say no more, and before they could prevent it, she had fainted again, and it was some weeks before she could leave the house.

As the dead clerk had no relatives, Mr. Toombs claimed the body, and Bobby was buried in one of the "hundred dollar outfits," with the usual pomp, and display.

When Deadina again took her place in the busy world, she was dressed in black, and the frequent visits she made to Greenwood, and the flowers she placed on a new made grave, told her secret more plainly than words. She loved the unfortunate young man, and only meant to tease him when she arranged what thought were harmless jokes. Now she sings, "Under the Daisies," and other songs of that class, and ponders over what might have been. Poor little widow.

Literary and Personal Notes.

The Boston Advertiser says of Arthur Gilman's "Tales of the Pathfinders," if there is any book fitted to give people a taste for historical reading, it is the little volume of sketches in which Mr. Gilman so delightfully pictures some of the salient facts illustrative of the history of this country from its first settlement to the time of the war or the Revolution." It adds that the book "is entertaining from beginning to end." D. Dathrop & Co., Boston.

An admirable biography of the eminent Unitarian minister, the late Warren H. Cudworth of Boston, prepared by his sister, has just been published by D. Lathrop & Co.

"In Case of Accident," an invaluable little manual whose purpose is sufficiently defined by its title, has been prepared by Dr. D. A. Sargent of Harvard college, and published in convenient form by D. Lathrop & Co. Mothers especially will find it very helpful.

Use of Gymnastics.

Gymnastics are not, and cannot be, the ordinary mode of [illegible] the community at large [illegible] chiefly concerned [illegible] them it is [illegible] of their future [illegible]

[illegible] In [illegible] New [illegible] towns and [illegible] perfume [illegible] Jersey differs but little from New York, and no feeling of strangeness has come upon me yet. Numerous fires have occurred lately, either simultaneously or at short intervals apart, and for a few days, the public became a little alarmed, so that occasionally you heard the word "fire-bug." This city like Hartford, Conn., is the headquarters of a great number of fire insurance companies, and the business is completely overdone. They just swarm here. It looks as though a fire might be a profitable thing if one is insured. A gentleman said to me recently that there was no longer any money to be made in insurance. Said he "they will insure a dwelling for three years for thirty cents on the hundred dollars, so you see it takes a lot of premiums to pay for one small fire, and no company can pay dividends at such rates. Those that do it, are doing so out of a surplus earned years ago." Going down Broad street the other morning, and wishing to know the condition of trade, I asked a corner pea-nut merchant how business was. "Vell, she's pretty goot shust now." Aren't you ever afraid your stand will take fire from the roaster, I asked, "Oh vell, me inshured, he do burn up gouple dimes already. He alvays burned up ven peesness vas pad, and zen I get de inshurance. I makes money ven peesnes is goot, und ven he's pad." One insurance company has recently gone out of business, and another has declared a stock dividend. So there you have the extremes. From the windows of my sanctum, I can look over to the entrance to the park theatre. A highly sensational melo-drama called "Shadows of a Great City" was played there last week, and was witnessed by large audiences, espececially of the gallery gods.

WHAT WILL DRAW A CROWD.

One evening a crowd of some two hundred stood in a pouring rain for half an hour waiting for the doors to open. When they did open, the scramble for the ticket office was like that of a mob.

It is sometimes amusing to see what will attract a crowd. As I was about crossing market street the other evening, a crowd of men in front of the Opera House attracted my attention. On reaching the spot and asking an African what was the matter he replied that they were listening to the music. I asked if it was good. "Yes," he said, "good enough for cats." A band composed of six pieces was stationed up on a balcony over the entrance, playing selections from various comic operas, and this was what had drawn a crowd of probably three hundred men and boys. Though not craving the company of members of the film race, I may perhaps have a weakness towards one member, still I "took in" the music which the blue-coated guardian thought good enough for such society, and my opinion and his agreed closely.

RAILROAD NOTES.

People round about here feel a little sore over Lackawanna at eighty-six. To think that it should have dropped from 107 to the level of New York Central. And the worst of it is, it may go lower. When in New York the other day, I noticed the tracks recently laid in Thirty-fourth street, on the aristocratic block from Fifth to Sixth avenues, had been taken up and the pavement repaired. This is the short bit of track which was laid without the consent of the property owners, on Sunday, so as to prevent an injunction being served. Ex-Judge Russel who resides on the block succeeded however in finding a judge on that day to grant an injunction, and I presume it has been made permanent.

OLD-FASHIONED LETTER PAPER.

I see the stationers are introducing the old-fashioned style of letter paper. That is without the use of envelopes. The sheets are about the size of a lady's handkerchief, ragged on the edges, and having a border like that to a hem-stitched handkerchief. This border is the part that is to be turned over on the sides to form the envelope, which is completed by folding the sheet twice in the other direction. Thus the writing is enclosed; you seal with wax, and write the address on the back.

HELEN POTTER.

Helen Potter, who I believe was a Fulton lady some years ago, gave a reading at Association Hall the other evening which was largely attended. Her impersonation of John B. Gough was simply immense.

WANTED A POSITION.

This afternoon I received a call from a colored [illegible]

[illegible]

Uncut velvet is the favorite material for bridal dresses for midwinter weddings.

All jewels are worn, but the favorites are pearls and diamonds, especially the last.

Tulle veils are worn by young brides, while those who are older wear veils of figured lace.

The embroidered velveteens are made up effectively with solid colored cashmeres of the same color.

In making dresses the sides are as richly ornamented as were the fronts of the skirts in former seasons.

Three very little birds, their heads and bodies nestling closely together, ornament some of the new muffs.

Young ladies' ball dresses of whatever material, are made short in the skirt with a sash or other simple drapery.

Brocades come with small designs for basques and waists to be with skirts of plain satin merveilleux or plaid materials.

The coursest and roughest materials are used for street costumes, and bright plaid flannel or cloth is much used for carriage wraps for evening.

The wide scarf sashes so fashionably worn with reception toilets are of wide ribbon, edged with laces, or of velvet, plush, broche, or entirely of lace.

In the handkerchief line, linen lawn is the preferred material for nice wear, and these are embroidered by hand in red, blue, pink, brown, gold and olive.

Gold trimmings are used to enrich elaborate dresses of black satin by combining large gilt and large jet beads in strands or in the same piece of passementerie.

Dressy Mother Hubbard cloaks are still worn. They are quite unlike the old models, being far more elegant and graceful than the Mother Hubbards so longe in vogue.

A simple ball dress for a young lady, is made of rose pink nun's veiling, with a straight, full skirt tucked nearly to the waist, and worn with a velvet sash of the new cresson green.

Woolen dress materials are more in vogue than ever this season. They can be made very effective in appearance, are comfortable in wear, and have the advantage of being moderate in cost.

Mr. Oscar Wilde, speaking at Glasgow recently on "Dress," said a Lancashire mill girl, with a shawl over her shoulders and wearing clogs, knew more about dress than a fashionable London lady recently returned from Paris, because in the former case there was comfort, while in the latter there was discomfort.

The Secret Art of Beauty lies not in cosmetics, but is only in pure blood and a healthy performance of the vital functions, to be obtained by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. J. W. Mackay has paid $8,000 for a tiny canvass by Gerome the size of which is described as "almost as big as a pocket handkerchief."

AN OLD MAN'S BELIEF.

Have used Parker's Ginger Tonic for my bad cough and hemorrhage I had twenty-five years. I feel like another man since I used it. Am 66 years past. Believe it sure cure younger persons.

A. Orner, Highspire, Pa.

Mr. Paul Hines, the baseball fielder, has bet a friend that he, standing on the ground, would be able to catch a ball thrown from the top of the Washington monument.

She Wanted to be a Bird.

John B. Hammer, a young Waco dude is paying a great deal of attention to a charming young lady. He called on her a few evenings ago. She seemed to be under the weather, and there was a peculiar drug store smell in the room.

"What ails my darling?" cooed John.

"I wish I was a bird," sighed the young lady.

"So you could fly to my arms," queried John suggestively.

"No, I want to be a bird so I could [illegible]

A Pair of Shoes.

A great naturalist said, "Show me a scale, I'll draw the fish." Had he been a shoemaker he might have said, "Show me a shoe, I'll tell the wearer." The sandal of the Arab, the tiny shoe of the high-bred woman in China, the wooden dancing-shoe of the Dutch, the high-heeled court slipper or the sensible walking shoes of the English and Americans, proclaim their nationality to the tyro. An amateur might not readily recognize the characteristics of different districts within a single nation, but the practiced designer must know that in the United States, for instance, your Northerner wants his shoe comfortable, neat and stylish; the Southerner asks for something fancy and handsome; the agricultural West demands solidity, fullness, and an article stout to break the land for a coming population.

"A pair of shoes" is one of the most typical products of modern industry. To make them the animal kingdom contributes the herds roaming on Western plains or South American pampas, or from the barn-yards near at home; the vegetable, from dotted groves of hemlock and oak or from the great forests still left to us. Great textile manufactories supply cloth and thread; mines, furnaces and forges combine to furnish nails or wire. A hundred machines have been invented, one of which has changed the whole course of a great industry and produced large cities. Through scores of processes the forty-four pieces of a pair of shoes require to bring them together the co-operation of fifty men, women and children; the division of labor is pursued to the utmost, demanding in turn for its successful maintenance the dispersion of product the world over; until as a return, you, well shod reader, can buy for three dollars what would have cost your forefather six.

As the reader buys a pair of shoes his next pair may at the same time be dodging the lasso of a "cow-boy" on a far away plain, or perhaps be in process of slaughter at Chicago. The perishable beef promptly reaches the market, and one day soon you dine, from a fat, juicy roast, little thinking as you smack your lips after dinner that a fine, pliable skin which once protected the delicate morsel may at some time contribute to your outer comfort. Stranger things have happened. The skins or hides are meantime salted, and the buyer of salted hides sends part of them to Peabody, Mass., and the rest to Central New York, to be tanned for sole leather.—[Harper's.

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently proceeded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose that he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. PAY UP.

It becomes necessary for us to call the attention of many of our readers to the fact that January 1st has come and gone and still their subscriptions remain unpaid. Now we have no desire whatever to allude to this matter but we need and must have what justly belongs to us. By a prompt remittance from you we are enabled to devote more time to the editing of the paper,—otherwise our time is taken up by a task which is disagreeable to most business men—that of collecting. Now what we want to see is your presence before us accompanied by $1,25. It costs money to run a newspaper, though after looking over the books it would seem that many of you were not aware of the fact. Once again we ask you to call and settle.

INCREASE OF CRIME.

Statistics of the murders committed in 1884 show that the number was more than double that of 1883. This is remarkable, and in the absence of a better reason for the increase, it may be supposed that hard times, depression in business and loss of work may have had a good deal to do with it, The entire number of murders in the country during 1884 was 3,377. Of these 315 were mysterious and remain so. Forty-eight children were killed by their parents; 83 wives by their husbands, and 13 husbands by their wives. Only 103 legal executions for murder occurred, though 219 lynchings were reported.

The Chicago Herald says that in Ohio the greatest number of murders was committed, and in Delaware and Rhode Island the least. In Ohio the number was 189, and in the two last named states 11 each. Texas was next to Ohio with 184. In the Prohibition states of Kansas, Iowa and Maine the number of murders were 78, 58 and 16, respectively. Besides Ohio and Texas, the states having more than one hundred murders were Kentucky, 178; Missouri, 146; Tennessee, 137; Georgia, 135; New York, 125; Pennsylvania, 102; Michigan, 102; and Virginia, 102. Of the populous states Illinois makes, by all odds, the best showing, having only 68 murders in the year, one-half less than the number in several states with populations one-third less than ours.

GOV. D. B. HILL is a total abstainer from intoxicating drinks of every kind.

THE Democrats met in caucus in the Assembly parlors yesterday morning and nominated Hon. Edward Cooper as as a candidate for United States Senator.

GOV. CLEVELAND once received a fee of $7,000 for answering one question on a point of law in a Syracuse court. It was the year prior to his election as Mayor of Buffalo.

EX-VICE PRESIDENT WHEELER is fast nearing his end. He lives in the town of Malone, Franklin county, N. Y., near the Vermont line. He is very much broken down in spirits and health. His wife died a short time ago, which grief has troubled him sorely ever since.

MENKEN, the man who murdered his sweetheart, Katie Braedhopt, at Elmira, January 4, 1884, escaped from the Binghamton jail last Wednesday night. Sheriff Brown offered $1,000 for his recapture. He was found in a barn near Owego Saturday night and was taken back to jail. Menken was sentenced to be hanged to-day but owing to an appeal the execution will not take place until April next.

MONDAY night a joint caucus of the Republican members of the legislature was held in the Assembly chamber at Albany to nominate a United States Senator in place of Mr. Lapham whose term will expire on the 4th of March next. Ninety-two members were present, of whom sixty-one named William M. Evarts; thirty-one named Levi P. Morton and three named Chauncy M. Depew. Mr. Evarts was then unanimously nominated and yesterday, in joint session of the Legislature, he was elected. Messrs. Howe of the first and [illegible] of the second districts voted for [illegible]

Garret S. Warner of Pulaski, son of Albert S. Warner has been appointed by the speaker of the assembly as superintendent of public documents of the assembly.

GENERAL NEWS

The Pope is confined to his bed with fever and rheumatism.

Heny George will deliver farewell lecture at Glasglow and Liverpool.

Russia intends to occupy Quelpart, an island south of Corea, as a naval station.

In New Bedford, Mass., there are 1,000 cases of measles reported, as an average of one case to every 30 persons.

In Boston, the Bay State Sugar refinery and Standard Dye Wood works burned Sunday evening. The loss is heavy.

The treasurer of the independent republican national committee reports that the receipts during the recent campaign were $23,836 and expenditures $23,408.

The French delegates to the centenary of the battle of Yorktown banqueted Minisaer Morton and the attaches of the American legation in Paris, Thursday.

In Baltimore, Thursday, Charlotte Hack, who had expended $800 of $900 entrusted to her by a neighbor, hanged herself in a barn, fearing arrest.

In the Italian chamber of deputies, Thursday, the minister on foreign affairs stated that Italy's relations with Germany were of the most confidential and cordial nature.

Greenfield and Kilrain have made a match for a glove contest. If not allowed to fight in Boston, they will go to New Orieans. Greenfield will also make a match with Mitchell.

In Taunton, Mass., Harrison Tweed dropped dead in his pew in the Baptist church Sunday morning. He was State Senator in 1868—69, presidential elector in 1872, member of the govenor's council in 1876—77—78, and a prominent business man.

Wheelmen from Boston, Schenectady, Chicago, New York and Buffalo, met in Buffalo and arranged for a tour next summer lasting two weeks, thro' Canada to the Thousand Islands, to Albany, down the Hudson to New York, making Buffalo July 6.

Our Monthly Visitors.

The midwinter (February) Harper is a notable number and is as unique in points as the in vast size of the edition.

The most prominent feature, perhaps is the paper on Pullman: "A Social Study," by Richard T. Eli. While nearly every writer, and there are many, has praised the genius of the founder of this new city, or empire more strictly speaking. The present article gives both sides of the picture, pointing out the evils which result from one man power. No one of the 4,000 mechanics at work for the Pullman Car Company being allowed to own their home and the tenant signs a lease which may be determinated on ten day's notice. "The desire" says the writer, "of an American to acquire a home is justly considered most commendable and hopeful. It promotes thrift and economy, and the the habits acquired in the effort to pay for it are often the foundation of a future prosperous career." The article is fully illustrated, giving some of the finest views of this beautiful young city. The table of contents is very full, while the "Easy Chair" pleasantly discourses upon the current subjects of the day.

THE ATLANTIC.

The Atlantic for February, which is promptly at hand, fully sustains the promise of the year's opening number, which for fresh, brilliant, and varied reading is seldom equaled even in this magazine. This number contains the first installments of three serial stories by three notable writers. Mrs. Oliphant, Sarah Orne Jewett and Charles Egbert Craddock. Olliver Wendell Holmes appears again to his friends in, The New Portfolio, from which he promises to draw each month something of interest for these pages. A very excellent and readable paper entitled, Madame Mohl, her salon and her friends, is presented in the January issue, with numerous sketches from favorite contributors. The "Atlantic" certainly affords a rich harvest to its readers of 1885. Special terms to subscribers includes a superb life size portrait of Hawthorne, Emerson, Holmes, Lowell, Whittier, Bryant, or Longfellow.

In Kingston the [illegible] much to relieve the large number of fever patients there. The board of health found a number of property owners who had converted unused wells into cess pools, contaminating those in use and causing a great deal of sickness.

The Elmira Gazette states that students in this country are forming a plan of going from university to university to study as students do in Germany. They will study base ball at Cornell, foot ball at Yale, and boating at Harvard. No man need go out of the country to get an education.

The rolling mills of Sheldon & Company of Auburn were totally destroyed by fire on Sunday afternoon. The loss is believed to be covered by insurance. One hundred men are thrown out of employment. It is doubtful if the works will be rebuilt, as the company contemplates removal from town on account of the expiration of the axle contract in the prison.

H. H. Warner, founder of the Warner Observatory at Rochester, and proprietor of the popular Safe Cure, is a liberal patron of fine art. He has purchased at a cost of $30,000 Cameron's celebrated painting, "Niagara Falls in Winter," which it was expected the State would buy for an adornment of the Capitol. Mr, Warner will place it in his private gallery.

Returns from the peach growing sections along both sides of the Hudson valley show that there will be no peaches gathered during the summer and fall of 1885, and that the failure will prove to be the worst on record since peach culture became a regular business in this part of the state. It is said that there is hardly a live peach bud to be found along the entire Hudson river.

A grand ball given Thursday night at Mucic hall by the Buffalo Press club was largely attended. President-elect Cleveland attended and remained till after midnight. An informal reception was held and a great many were presented. Cleveland was to leave at 1:30, but did not leave till Friday forenoon at 9:40, for Abany.

The gale on Saturday inflicted serious damage to the oyster beds of the Great Kills and Prince's bay. The extreme low tide that followed the high wind left hundreds of acres of choice oysters exposed. The sudden and severe freezing that accompanied the wind froze the oysters solid on the muddy bottom. The result was that probably $20,000 worth of fine marketable oysters were ruined.

One of the principal industries in the town of Belmound, Allegany county, is making toothpicks. One establishment turns out from 100 to 300 cases weekly, and they are shipped to all parts of the world. Each case contains 100 boxes and each box 2,500 picks. Large quantities of cigar lighters are also manufactured. White poplar, which grows in great abundance in Allegany and Steuben counties is the wood chiefly used.

Much work has been done in preparation for the building of the Vanderbilt mausoleum in the Moravian cemetery near New Dorp, Staten Island, recently. There will be about the mausoleum five acres of landscape garden. Excavations for the broad foundations will be begun shortly. The walls will be massive. The materials for them are already being made and sent to the cemetery. The site selected will be 50 feet higher than that where now rest the remains of W. H. Vanderbilt's father, grandfather and great grandfather.

AN EDITOR'S TRIBUTE.

Theron P. Keator, Editor of Fort Wayne, Ind., "Gazette," writes: "For the past five years I have always used Dr. King's New Discovery, for coughs of a most severe character, as well as for those of a milder type. It never fails to effect a speedy cure. My friends to whom I have recommended it speak of it in the same high terms. Having been cured by it of every cough I have had for five years, I consider it the only reliable and sure cure for coughs, colds, etc." Call at R. E. J. Foreman Wilkinson, of the Wilkinson Brother's failed bank, was examined Friday on supplementary proceedings. He testified that he did not anticipate a failure until October 15 when the Syracuse Iron works failed. He explained at length the indebtedness to the brothers at Chicago growing out of their father's unsettled estate which was secured by the transfer of real estate.

The Onondaga Agricultural society has bought 42 acres of land as an addition to its grounds, paying therefor $30,000.

Jacob Meyer, jr., of Syracuse, aged 27 while suffering from delirium tremens Thursday night, attempted suicide. He [illegible]

[illegible] of the late rebellion can be considered as calmly as the historical relationship of England to Scotland, Americans cannot yet discuss this question without passion. The general remark of visitors in the galleries, even of those who listened with deep interest to the debate was that the Senate could occupy the few remaining weeks of the session with more profitable and timely themes than the Sherman-Davis controversy.

The prompt passage of the new bill to retire Gen. Grant by the Senate, and the tribute paid to his magnanimity at the close of the war by southern Senators, was another unexpected episode of the week's doings. Senator Gibson said as a Senator from Louisiana he felt it incumbent upon him to vote for the bill in order to show the good will and sympathy of the people of the State for Gen. Grant. The junior Senator from Mississippi voted for the bill because he thought the people desired its passage. He had made a covenant with himself that on all questions that did not effect the honor of his people he would vote exactly as if he had worn the federal instead of the confederate uniform. Senator Maxey, of Texas, felt that no man had ever acted with more generosity than did Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox. And Senator Voorhees also recalled the fact that when Secratary Stanton wanted to arrest and imprison General Lee after the surrender, General Grant had told Stanton that Lee was a paroled prisoner, and that not a hair of his head should be molested. There were only nine dissenting votes to the bill.

While military heroes, war issues, measures, reminiscenses and scenes were being revived and discussed, news came of the death of Hon. Schuyler Colfax, the man who had wielded the Speaker's and Vice-President's gavel during those stormy times of reconstruction. While his remain lay in state at Chicago the Senate adjourned through respect to his memory.

The House of Representatives surprised everybody by undertaking to pay some old debts. The French spoliation claims came up and passed. The history of these claims begins with the Revolutionary war. The bill for their adjustment passed the Senate before the holidays, so, as it only awaits the President's signature, the ancient score is in a fair way to be settled.

Representatives who favor the passage of a bankrupt bill say that they can do nothing with it this session because the Congressmen from New York city cannot be kept in their seats when there is a chance to take up this important measure.

The Senate talks about the Nicaraguan treaty with its doors locked. Some days it spends three hours in these secret discussions. Senator Miller, of California, opened the debate in favor of the treaty, and Senator Sherman followed in opposition. Both gentlemen being Republicans, this shows that it is not to be made a party question, and that it will be carefully debated.

The Inauguration committee has discovered that Washington can be so arranged as to accommodate the rest of of the civilized world during March third and fourth, and make everybody comfortable and happy. The hotels and boarding houses are wonderfully elastic. The warerooms and store rooms and public halls are all to be utilized for lodging visitors, and now the Department corridors are being secured for sheltering them. The station houses will be open as usual, and yet possibilities are not nearly exhausted.

Pennsylvania avenue is to be illuminated on the night of March the fourth with colored globes, placed at short intervals. Electric lights were deemed inadvisable because their glare would destroy the effect of fireworks.

Long ago speculators secured the window space along the Avenue, and it is said one dollar per capita will be asked for a view of the procession from such vantage ground.

Itching Piles—Symptoms and Cure.

The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching; very distressing, particularly at night; seems as if pin-worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected. If allowed to continue very serious results may follow. "Swayne's Ointment" is a pleasant, sure cure. Also, for Tetter Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barber's Itch, Blotches, all scaly crusty Skin Diseases. Box by mail 50cts. Three for $1.25. Address, Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia, Pa. Sold by Druggists.

[illegible] scarcely any [illegible] the year when some persons are not more or less affected by it. In winter, however, it prevails mostly among the aged, making their last days hard to bear. A prominent physician once remarked in our hearing, "If the aged could escape the tortures of rheumatism, their last years as a rule would be quiet, peaceful and painless."

Apropos of the above, Mr. W. DeGenr, of Pella, Ia., sends us a communication which ordinarily we would not publish except at so much a line. But his experience has been so remarkable that we think we are justified in giving place to it. He says:

"Dear Sir:—I am 78 years of age. My life has been active. I am well-known in this town, and what I say I do not think will be doubted by any one who knows me. Up to a year or two ago, I was the possessor of splendid health, and hoped I should wear out my life gradually and peacefully. Two years ago, however, I was overcome with that curse of old age, rheumatism. When it first presented itself the pain was so acute I thought it was neuralgia, which medical authorities tell me indicate a low state of the system.

I fancied that this attack was the beginning of the end. I sent for a good doctor, who treated me with electrical and other agencies, but I grew worse. He finally said my case was a serious rheumatic one. For six months I could not use my limbs at all, and was handled by three strong persons, like a helpless child. Then came a period of better feelings, but re-action followed, and for six long months of pitiful suffering I was confined to the bed. For over a year I groaned in agony. I tried all reputable lotions, liniments, plasters and preparations, in vain. At this stage, my friend Elder Overcamp came to see me, and upon his earnest recommendation I began to use warner's safe rheumatic cure, a few bottles of which gave back to me the use of my limbs. I am now sleeping without pain, eating without distress, and feel as spry as I did when I was 60 years of age. I cordially recommend that preparation to all persons afflicted as I was, and especially to the thousands of aged men and women whose last days are embittered by this affliction."

Mr. DeGen's letter is endorsed by Elder Overcamp, who says he is a member of his church, and his case to him is surprising and marvelous. Mr. F. W. Brinkoff also endorses the statement in similar term.

There is no doubt that this is a true recital of the case, and Mr. DeGens' experience should be an encouragement to all others suffering as he did, to use the means he so successfully employed, for nothing better, if indeed, as good, can be had in the market.

Last evening at Dr. Marsh's a lamp which was standing upon a stand, was upset by a cat, breaking the lamp and scattering the oil about the carpet. The lamp continued to burn and in a moment the carpet would have been a mass of flames, had not the doctor picked up the lamp and extinguised it.

Perry Speaks.

Fremont Perry says that the statement which has been circulated about that he took Paris green on account of his rejected love for Nellie Stewart, is untrue. He also says that the Paris green was taken by mistake. He has a habit he says of carrying pepper in his pocket which he takes when very cold after long rides, and that he purchased a small amount of Paris green for the purpose of killing rats and in some way got them mixed. He does not state however, what he meant by his remark to Mrs. Clark just before he took the poison. Perry seems very indignant because of the erronious manner in which the story has been told.

Concering the Schools.

TO TRUSTEES AND FRIENDS OF THE SCHOOLS: The law of last year enjoins certain duties upon trustees and districts in relation to the subjects therein mentioned which I am informed have have not been generally performed.

It is desireable to have uniformity of action upon these as upon all matters pertaining to the school throughout the district.

To that end I desire to meet the trustees and friends of the schools of the several towns as follows:

Oswego, Oswego Centre, Thursday Jan. 15, 2 p. m.

Scriba, Scriba Center, Friday Jan. 16 2 p. m.

New Haven, Saturday Jan. 17, 2 p. m.

Mrs. Lucretia Green died at her home in Palermo on Thursday last at the ripe age of 87 years. She was the mother of J. N. Green of Fulton. The funeral took place yesterday from her late residence in Palermo. The remains were interred at Mt. Adnah.

The high winds last Saturday did some little damage in this village and vicinity. Many chimneys and fences were totally demolished. It was feared at one time that the roller skating rink would blow over. Firm propping in time is all that saved it. Reports reach in from the country to the effect that the damage to fences and old buildings is quite extensive.

An exchange says: It anyone can keep up with the weather provided for us this winter he is smart. The mercury is tired out with such constant running up and down the tube from one end of the thermometer to the other. Spring, fall and winter follow each other in rapid succession that one does not know what season it is anyhow. People fond of change must be happy now, as they have it daily.

Nugent & Gleason's Metropolitans, a favorite company with Fulton people, are on the boards for every night this week. They have presented two excellent plays thus far and to-night will appear in the great sensational drama in five acts, "Under the Gaslight," introducing the wonderful railroad scene. This company needs no commendation to our people. Mr. and Mrs. Gleason are the stars of the company and their acting is highly satisfactory. They received a good house the opening night, but for some reason or other there was a small audience last evening. People who enjoy a good entertainment should make it a point to attend. Let us see a full house to-night. The prices are certainly reasonable.

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the Citizens National Bank, held at their banking rooms in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 20th day of January, 1885, at 3 o'clock p. m. Present, Samuel Hart, John W. Pratt, Willard Johnson, Charles M. Lee, J. H. Case, George M. Case, Solon F. Case and H. E. Nichols.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That it is with profound sorrow that we receive the information of the sudden death of Mr. T. W. Chesebro at his residence in the village on the 19th inst at the ripe age of 77 years.

Resolved, That in Mr. Chesebro's many years of service as an officer of the bank and member of the board of directors we take pleasure in testifying to his absolute faithfulness and integrity in all matters of trust committed to his charge. That in his death the board suffer the loss of a man of mature judgement and whose high Christian character commanded the respect and confidence of all who had business relations with him. That in his death this community suffer the loss of a kind, generous and noble hearted citizen, friend and neighbor and whose character is well worthy of emulation.

Resolved, That in respect of our deceased brother, friend and neighbor this board attend his funeral in a body.

IMPALED ON A PITCHFORK.

The Horrible Accident which Resulted in the Death of Mrs. Sheldon of Clyde.

CLYDE, Jan. 18.—Mrs. A. D. Sheldon of this place met with a horrible death. Friday morning, January 19th. Mr. Sheldon being away from home she went to the barn to throw out some hay for the cattle. After throwing down upon the barn floor the necessary amount of hay from the mow she placed the fork she had been using at a safe distance, and sitting down upon the edge of the mow she expected to slide off upon the hay which she had thrown down, the distance being only four or five feet. Unknown to her a pitchfork stood against the mow exactly in the spot where she intended to slide down, and she fell squarely upon the handle, which penetrated her body at the lower portion of the abdomen, passed upward several inches when her body pitched forward and the direction of the handle was so changed that it passed backward and came in contact with the spine. After the accident the unfortunate lady walked into the house without assistance, but immediately lay down upon her bed, which she never left, dying on Friday last, after great suffering.

A Fulton Artist's Work.

Syracuse Sunday Standard: F. A. Garret, of this city, owns a picture recently finished by Mr. S[illegible], of Fulton, which unfortunately for the critics was transferred from the easel directly from the wall, without having been given public inspection. It is painted in the artist's best spirit, and his subject being an ideal, his weird fancy, has found full scope in it, without, going to the extent that it might be termed outre. We have in the picture a view across a piece of marsh land in the gloaming of a summer evening, a cloud effect being introduced to produce a contrast, which is extremely delicate in the application of color and strong in the illusion of distance. The work is a gem of its kind.

The New Hardware Firm.

Munger, Sharp & Lodewick will finish the inventory of the stock of hardware in the store of the late John Woodin to-day. It is probable that they will open the store for business the latter part of the week. The new proprietors are gentlemen of long experience in the hardware business and have the appearance of men of energy and push. We bespeak for them a liberal share of patronage.

Mr. Howard has secured the old reliable Beadle & Prindle Pleasure Company for one evening next week. The programme embraces lots of fun and a good time generally.

"He tried to kiss me and I just told him to behave," said an irate young lady after a sleighride down the road the other day. "Well did he kiss you" "No the idiot he behaved."

The second entertainment of the Star Lecture Course came off at the Opera House last Friday evening. The audience was entertained by the Redpath Concert Company. All who attended were more than satisfied with the programme throughout.

The members of assembly from Oswego county fared well in the distribution of the good things by Mr. speaker Erwin. Mr. Howe, of the first district, is chairman of the Sub committee of the Whole (grinding committee) and on Judiciary and Game Laws. Mr. Sweet, of the second district, is chairman of Public Lands, and on Public Printing and Canals.

Mrs. A. K. Ney slipped on the icy walk on the corner of Oneida and Second streets last Thursday, striking on the back of her head and inflicting a gash an inch long. Mrs. Ney was picked up unconscious and taken to her rooms at the Clark House where she was cared for by a physician. The accident is not of a serious nature.

Mr. Chas. T. Gardner, patentee and manufacturer of the $2 baby jumper, has made an assignment in favor of his creditors, and has gone to the United States, where he will go into business. In a note to the Beaver, he says it is his firm intention to settle all his liabilities as soon as he possibly can, and with this view asked his creditors to be as lenient as possible. Mr. G. goes into business near Fulton, N. Y.—[Napanee Beaver.

The Washington National Republican in criticising the New Year's calling in that city has the following mention which will be of interest to many here: Miss Eva Mills was disappointed in the the non-arrival of her friend, Miss Maxwell, of New York, who sent a telegram announcing her severe indisposition, but the brilliant conversation of Washington's favorite soprano was all that the average caller could cope with, and left nothing to be desired. Mrs. Clark Mills assisted her daughter, and her quiet dignity was a splendid fort for the vivacity and good nature of Miss Eva. Her card basket evidenced a large number of callers.

"Did you ever stop to think what a tireless letter-writer a good local paper is? Week after week, reaching into year after year, it goes on, telling of the marriages, births, deaths, and coming and going of the people of our town, and the business success or failure, accidents, crops, improvements, meetings, revivals in fact events of all kinds. All is a grist that comes to the hopper of a good local paper. Why, to undertake to write a letter each week to your absent friend and tell half the news that your local paper gives, you would soon give up in despair. The supposed pleasure becomes tiresome, the letters grow shorter, further apart, and finally quit. Why the difference? Because it is business. People in a live town recognize this and take pleasure in giving the editor the news items you would never learn otherwise."

Questions that none are too good to ask: Do I mind my own business? Do I envy others if they get ahead me? Do I imagine I have enemies, when myself is my only effective enemy? Do I improve a little every day in some way, or do I imagine I am too good to improve? Am I narrow minded enough to enjoy this world as if made for me [illegible]

[illegible] Chesebro [illegible] and Oliver French. Soon after they rebuilt and enlarged the mills and ran them successfully until a change in milling occured when a large amount of money earned by contract was lost in the business and these with others were burned in the fire of 1862. They were not rebuilt by them. In March 1871 Mr. Chesebro received the appointment of Postmaster which office he held for four years to the entire satisfaction of all parties once or twice prior to this he was elected to to the office of overseer of poor. When the Citizens Bank was organized in 1863 Mr. Chesebro was one of the first board of directors, he held various offices up to the year 1875 when at the death of Chas. G. Case he succeeded him as president of the bank. He was at the time of his death a director and yesterday the board in its official capacity passed resolutions of respect which appear in these columns. At an early day he became a member of the M. E. Church in Fulton but in the year 1848 on account of its connection with the South and slavery he with a number of others withdrew, and formed the Wesleyan church, he was appointed its first Steward and the following year elected one of the first trustees.

Since the closing of the Wesleyin society he has been a constant attendant on the Presbyterian church, although never formerly uniting. The above brief biography recounts no one of the many generous deeds done by him of whom we speak. His cordial manners and tender emotions constituted the most beautiful traits of his character. Love of justice, truth and virtue were among his marked characteristics. All knew him but to respect and to love him, while each was impressed with the slender hold he had upon life. For some years he had suffered from the rigors of this climate, the sudden changes of the present winter have been most trying to his constitution. On Tuesday last he attended a meeting of the bank directors and the following day he walked to the post office. Thursday he was prostrated by an old difficulty which, together with the exposure proved too much for his delicate health. In his departure like that of his brother-in-law, the late Chas. G. Case—the community loose a valuable citizen.

Funeral services will take place from his late residence on First street on Thursday afternoon at 3:30 p. m., attended by Rev. Dr. A. C. Shaw of Wellsbury, Pa.

Died January 16th, at her home on Buffalo street, Mrs. Minnie Hewitt, aged 28 years.

Mrs. Hewitt was well and widely known in this vicinity. She was a daughter of Gaylord and Ann Moore; was born in Palermo, six miles from this village, and has lived all her life in this vicinity. She is remembered as an unusually bright and intelligent child, a warm hearted impulsive, as well as energetic and capable woman. She has long been known as a teacher. Commencing at the age of fifteen years, she taught five terms acceptably in country schools; after which she further qualified herself for her work by attendance at the Oswego Normal School. During the later years of her life she has taught almost exclusively in the Oswego Falls public school, where for the most of eight years she was the only teacher in the primary department; a school registering 140 pupils, and having a daily attendance of about 100.

Those who have known her most intimately, her unusual energy and force of character, as well as her success in whatever she undertook were almost a marvel; for while her duties were always so faithfully and conscientiously performed that her work seemed one of choice and pleasure. She left nothing out of her social life that she could add for the pleasure of those around her.

On the 30th of July last, she was married to Louis K. Hewitt, and at once commenced life in the home they had for some time been preparing; a home that seemed to promise only happiness for the future. But sickness which had for several months affected her, followed her here, and notwithstanding her brave resistance it prostrated her. The last three months of her life were months of alternate hope and despair, [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] weeds on an acre covered [illegible]. In the light of this single fact, which has been only recently proved, is it not a greater curse to have an acre of clean soil waste $6.60 worth of nitrogen in a single year than to have the good Lord quickly cover the bare soil with protecting and enriching vegetation, even if that vegetation be in part composed of the most noxious weeds?

It is now ten years since French chemists discovered that nitrification in the soil is due to a vegetable germ which grows most rapidly when the soil is at summer blood heat and moderately moist. This condition is found in summer, when our fields are shaded with growing crops. But when the farmer unwisely makes a bare summer fallow, or neglects to cover his field with grass or grain, Nature or Providence kindly tries to remedy his neglect by protecting the bare, unoccupied soil with a crop of so-called weeds. Nature abhors a vacuum. It occupies every place and everything, and is constantly at work.

In the second place, weeds enfore more thorough tillage. If men are naturally indolent and thoughtless, if they will put on the yoke of continuous labor unless driven by wants or rewarded by gains, how well would some farms be tilled if weeds did not make tillage a necessity? A farmer may think he cultivates his corn and potatoes only to kill the weeds, when at the same time, he pulverizes, aerates, and nitrifies the soil, enriching it and guarding it against drouth. In the last century a celebrated Englishman, Jethro Tull, said "tillage is the only needed manure." Of course this is an extreme statement; but it helps to prove some benefits of weeds when they compel thorough tillage for crops.

Thirdly, weeds are a protecting and enriching mulch. This has already been referred to incidentally; therefore without discussing the processes of mulch improvement, I will only quote a few words from "Hortulanus," "I have become so convinced of the all importance of having a carbonaceous surface mulch to the soil, as a sure means of securing good growth of plants, that, instead of raking off everything in the garden and throwing it away or burning it for the sake of neatness. I collect and straw on the surface all sorts of litter that I can find—hair, rags, paper, leaves, straw, and even sticks."

In conclusion, while I do not believe in sowing weeds or encouraging their growth in place of grain or grass, yet, on our best tillable fields, I fear foul seeds much less than formerly. We have so many good ploughs, harrows, cultivators, etc., that we can prepare a proper seed-bed in a very short time. If I could have an annual coating of vegetable manure an inch or a foot thick, on condition that it were composed entirely of the seeds of the most dreaded weeds, I should accept the manure and fight the weeds with tillage and crops.

Do Lightning-rods Protect.

A few years since, at a farmers institute in Michigan, facts were reported which seems to throw much doubt on the usefulness of lightening rods or conductors as usually placed on farm buildings. This is certainly a question of much importance. I know of one small farm house and barn the surroundings of which seemed to show that the owner was illy prepared to stand such an outlay, where there are seven lightning-rods. It is an intresting fact, that in passing through any of our farming districts the buildings of the most successful, and especially the most studious and intelligent, of the farmers are unadorned with these supposed attractions for electricity. Surely the practical verdict of our best farmers is against such protection. That science believes in properly constructed conductors is evident from the fact that the tall Washington Monument just now being finished is provided with a lightning-rod. Yet that this tall shaft has remained for so long will tend to strengthen the faith of those who are willing to risk lightening without the [illegible]

[illegible] acid is added. It must then be filled with some soft tow or lint, dipped in a solution of one part of nitrate of silver to 10 of water, until the pipes come away. The opening is then dressed twice a day with the pyroligneous acid mixture, and thoroughly cleansed with a soft sponge until it gradually heals from the bottom. Unless it is thus healed, it will break out again and be as bad as ever. 2. The mare is suffering from the effects of the founder, which is fever of the feet, or laminitis. The fore-feet should be put into hot water twice a day, and then dressed with a mild blister around the coronet. The sunken shoulder is the result of the condition of the feet, and is caused by the want of proper action of the muscles, due to the lameness. This will probably always remain; but can be prevented from becoming worse by brisk rubbing of the shoulder by the hand with a strong liniment. Gombault's Caustic Liniment will be an excellent application both for the shoulder and the feet, if applied according to the directions. It would not be advisable to breed from a mare in this condition, as a tendancy to this disease generally becomes hereditary.—[Rural New Yorker.

Weakness in the Hind-Quarters of Pigs, etc; Feed for Laying Hens.

M. L. D., SHERMAN, N. Y.—1. My five months-old pigs eat well, and are growing thriftily, but they are so affected in the hind-quarters that they can scarcely stand up, their hind legs being almost useless, what is the remedy? 2. What is the best food for laying hens?

ANS.—Stiffness or weakness in the hind legs is often caused by worms in the kidness. In such cases the pigs will drag the hind parts. As a remedy, give a tablespoonful of turpentine diluted with milk. One or two doses a day for two days will be sufficient. The turpentine will be absorbed and pass the kidneys and kill the worms. Sometimes the ailment is due to founder, generally caused by eating too much corn. In such cases the food should be changed to wheat middlings or oatmeal. Immersion in hot water as hot as they can bear will keep them, and they should be kept there 20 or 30 minutes, and be then well rubbed, especially on the legs. The heads should be kept out of the water. A tablespoonful of sulphur should be mixed with their food daily for a week, and they should have all the charcoal they will eat. Weakness in the back and hind legs is also sometimes caused by inflamation of the spinal membrane, which produces a nervous weakness or partial paralysis. In such cases apply turpentine or mustard paste to the loins, and give a tablespoonful of linseed oil. 2. Hens need a great variety in their food; wheat screenings, oats, rye, wheat middlings, scraps from the table, including boiled potatoes; also green food, such as cabbage or chopped beats, carrots, or potatoes. They should in Winter have free access to lard or tallow scraps. The only corn advisable is a feed of whole corn, the last thing at night. They should also have free access to ground bones or oyester shells. We have also found an occasional feed of Imperial Egg Food to pay.

To Raise Corn Crops.

F. W. E., TAUNTON, Mass.—1. I have just an acre of light, sandy loam that has been cleared of stumps and planted to Hungarian grass. It was plowed the middle of Novemaber. I have also five cords of horse manure, how can I raise a big corn crop? 2. What variety should I plant?

ANS.—1. Spread the manure at once. The rains and frosts of Winter will break up and wash it into the soil in the best possible manner, and next Spring plow lightly again, and then put on 400 pounds of some good fertilizer rich in potash, and harrow that well into the surface. Then mark the ground according to the kind of corn, anywhere from 3½ to four feet, and plant the corn two kernels in a place, 18 inches apart in the rows. When ready to hoe, pull out one stalk from each hill; cultivate often with a shallow-working cultivator; hoe once, but do nothing more than to hoe the weeds out. Keep the ground level and cultivate as long as you can get through without breaking the stalks. 2. Plant the kind that does the best in your section. We can hardly advise farther in that direction. This being true it is probable that the item originated in some paper printed outside of the state.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case, TRADE MARK which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

Who Mrs. Grundy Was.

Who was Mrs. Grundy? It seems strange, indeed, that so little should be known about the antecedents of Mrs. Grundy, who was always anxious to know about other people; but the fact must be admitted that Mrs. Grundy's origin is enveloped in the profoundest mystery. Nobody knows who she was or when she first entered society. She was not even a character in a play, like the immortal Mrs. Malaprop. She first made known her existence to the public on the 8th of February, 1800, in a drama entitled "Speed the Plough," by Thomas Morton, where one of the characters alludes frequently to her mysterious infiuence by the words "What will Mrs. Grundy say?" Beyond this nothing is known of her. There is of coarse, the possibility that she was the wife of Solomon Grundy, of the nursery rhyme, who was born on Monday, christened on Tuesday, etc., and got through his existence on Sunday, for the rhyme expressly says that Solomon was married on Wednesday. Perhaps Solomon Grundy was a solar myth, and Mrs. Grundy something of the same kind. Thomas Morton is, unfortunately, dead, and he has carried his secret to the tomb; and once more the world, which knows so little about its greatest men, will be deprived of all further knowledge of one of its most interesting women.

A THRILLING STORY

As Told by a Merchant in Troy, N. Y.—A Surgical Operation Avoided—How A Father, Wife and Daughter Escaped an Awful Doom

Of the hundreds of accounts of remarkable cures wrought by DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, none have appeared so purely astonishing as the following: The persons mentioned are among the most highly respected in the city of Troy, and the story as told by the father will prove interesting to all our readers.—ED.

TROY, N.Y.

Dr. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My daughter was afflicted with a severe growth of Fungus. To remove it we had resorted to almost every remedy and consulted the most prominent surgeons and physicians. Dr.—— of Troy, said that a surgical operation would be necessary, but fearing fatal results I hesitated. Some of the physicians claimed that it was caused by one thing and some by another The Fungus was prominent, and disfigured her looks. Having heard of Dr. Kennedys' FAVORITE REMEDY working so thoroughly on the blood I determined to try it, to see if this medicine could do what doctors had failed to do and surgeons had hardly dared to undertake. I can say in truth that the result of this trial was the complete cure of my daughter of this dreadful malady. Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY alone effected it. We used nothing else, for other things had completely failed. My daughter to-day enjoys vigorous health and to Favorite Remedy alone is the credit due. My wife also was very poor in health, due to some liver difficulty with which she had suffered a long time until she became very much reduced in flesh. A trial of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has resulted in a complete restoration of her health, which she had not enjoyed for years. She had gained in flesh and strength, and thus secured perfect health, and this is DUE ENTIRELY TO DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. As for myself, being engaged in the grocery and commission business, which makes it necessary for me to test the quality of different articles, like butter, etc., my sense of taste and my stomach were seriously injured, Everything seemed to nauseate me, and fearful of dyspepsia in the most severe form. I tried DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, The first bottle afforded immediate Relief, and from that day to this I can say that Favorite Remedy has restored me to perfect health. These are facts which I claim prove that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best medicine in the world for those afflicted with the above difficulties. If any one in the city of Troy doubts the truth of those statements let him come to me and I will prove them. I have recommended Favorite Remedy to hundreds and with the same good results.

Yours, etc, WILLIAM WINSOR.

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made.

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

Criticism.

If others we would criticise,
We should be very sure,
That in the universal eyes,
Our characters are pure.

Sometimes we do neglect ourselves,
When if the truth were known,
That while we speak of others faults,
We've plenty of our own.

Should we look our own selves through,
We then would find, I ween,
That each would have enough to do
To keep his own yard clean.

On Wheels.

Only a girl on roller skates,
Only a female defying the fates;
Only a step or two out on the floor,
Only this, then something more.

Only a man on the backward glide,
With hands outstretched and feet spread wide;
Only a bold dash, then a dull thud,
Only a scream that would curdle her blood.

Only a mingling of stripes in air,
Only a shower of Auburn hair;
Then she sat on him by the ton,
Never was man so sat upon.

—[Courier-Journal.

AN EVENING PARTY.

Even if Tom Bayne did only get a salary of two hundred a year, that fact alone did not hinder him from mingling in the best society of the town; for he was not by any means engaged in any menial calling; on the contrary, he stood proudly at his desk in the bank-like office of a huge distillery.

"Position is everything!" cries a well-known adage, consequently T. B. took his place in society, and kept it because he had a position—a position in the fulfilling of whose duties he did not soil his hands. He was comely—comely applied to a man sounds queer—sleek-faced, a well-developed figure (the orders to his tailor regarding the quantity of padding for his coat were very liberal, his walk was pompous, and struck envy to the hearts of the admiring tapemeasures; and his conversation—gracious! how it terrorised the hearts of the helpless girls who felt themselves yielding to his persuasiveness?

Of course he belonged to the "Gentlemen's club," and had his share in the manifold expenses of that very expensive concern; he attended the same church as his employers, and contributed freely and ostentatiously to the poor-box. And, in spite of all this long-tongued people would insinuate that perhaps the balance of his bank account at the end of the year was like the number of days remaining in the year—infinitesimal short.

But when with John Hightone and Joe Abram the flowing bowl was quaffed, or the "champaigne, you know," his tongue dealt in flowery eloquence, and he was unanimously crowned laureate, because of his attractive, polished manners, and the abundance of spicy stories always at command. Often have his companions sat open-mouthed at these tales, to which the Arabian Nights sank promptly into insignificance, and Baron Munchausen shadowed away into nothingness.

But this divergence has been made as text to be, and as a base for the story of Tom's trouble and what came about through the evening party. And if the personal savors too strongly of a photograph—which is to be dreaded, because who ever knew a photograph album filled with strangers' faces and figures to be interesting?—the indulgence of an indulgent public is asked.

On this particular morning, at about nine o'clock, the sun broke through the veiling clouds, and a ray of his welcome light cutting its way down through the smoky atmosphere disclosed to Tom's eager eyes an envelope bearing the familiar monogram of a society belle lying before him on the dusty desk. It requested his company, &c.; but why enlarge?

"Are you invited?" "Mind your own business!"

These were the only remarks or replies of Mr. Tom for the customary salutations as follows. Then on a Thursday evening he made his glad way along and attending to the scene of action—to [illegible] party. He was attired in [illegible] of coat (although [illegible] inclined to seize on collat[illegible] reception room took [illegible] possession, and there were [illegible] at those who had [illegible] attired. And as ear[illegible] to the hospitable [illegible]

[illegible] "Won't [illegible] Smiling if he could [illegible] his dancing [illegible] marriage and blatant tales of [illegible] requirements? If she doesn't, I'll take the [illegible] out of his hands and rid her presence of the shallow-brained cub. What a miserable air of utterly-utter!"

"If that young jackanapes in the Tweed suit dares to approach Miss Agnes" thought T. B., won't she send him to the right-about! The idea of his daring to dance with her—she clad in white satin, he in that old business suit!"

A rustle of rich, heavy satin on the staircase, and through the half-open door our gentlemen witnessed the entrance of "the expected;" and with a little further description of Mr. Grayner we leave the amiable and well-wishing pair, and make the acquaintance of a few of the assembled—just to fill the corners of our drawing.

He wasn't notoriously well-to-do, but he came from a respectable family, and being a hard and willing worker, had rapidly risen in the estimation of his employes and acquintances. He was only an asistant in a wholesale crockery warehouse, but was studious and unostentatious in all things. Being such, he had gained Miss Barthomew's esteem, and the reciprocated feeling had become so intense that this evening was to be a red-letter evening to his young life, an assault on Cupid's battery (a forlorn and hopeless combat sometimes) having been resolved.

Now Agnes, if he only knew it; loved him and despised the the blatant Tom. Not knowing this, he felt the usual anxiety, and, poor fellow was trembling in his boots.

The corners and the background of the sketch.

Here are a couple trying to talk "blue stocking," literary, and they are—where do you think? In Macaulay's, Essays, and the topic Machiavelli. How they murder the famous author's meaning, and how well they are satisfied with the high sounding talk! We move on. It is too much. Next the Misses Dostey—whose father was a wealthy miller—ignorant and fond of display, and flirting desperately with two of the Gentlemen's Club. Then a liberal minded young clergyman; a bevy of bank clerks, surrounded with silks and overpowered frangipani perfume, and we come back to fill in the "black-and-white," and put on the finishing touches to the main figures.

I said that Tom made his "glad way" to the party, which was perfectly true. Now, if I had added that at the door of the entertainer's a shabbily-dressed girl had handed him a note, and earlier a gentlemanly-dressed person had handed him another, both concerning him deeply, I might have been thought to be again diverging. These notes disturbed but did not trouble the almost imperturbable Tom. What does it matter to him if he owes his washer woman for three months' work, and his tailor for a year's clothes? Why, nothing at all!

Owing to the division of the guests in their respective cliques, Fred Grayner was able to isolate Miss Agnes soon after coming; only to get the poor satisfaction that he must escort her home, the carriage to be sent on ahead.

But Fred had noticed, and so had T. B's, with fainting heart, that she detected the rose Bayne gave, and wore the humble spray of mignonette.

On finishing a waltz and promenading gaily over to an alcove, T. B's spirits rose, cheered with the exciting dance, and then he began. Why at this juncture should those notes that had been given him drop from his pocket, unfolded and open to the keen glance of Miss Agnes? This we cannot divine, and ascribe it, like all mysterious willings of the Unknown, to fate, cruel fate.

One glance sufficed her. "W. W. Fashion & Co., clothes, £20; Mrs. Murphy, three months' washing £2."

Mr. Bayne's protestations as to his entire independence of the mercenary world amply atoned for her breach of etiquette, and she determined to give him a lasting lesson then and there. A woman quickly decides with an impostor.

"What are those, Mr. Bayne?"

"Ah! letters from friends—invitations I suppose."

"Invitations, yes! to what?"

The dire truth was revealed to T. B.; his game was over; he saw ruin in her stern yet amused face; he was beaten; the flood-gates of shame opened, and hastily excusing himself he gained the open air, and vented his excited feelings under the cold and unsympathic light of the stars.

Father time has been busy for nearly two decades now since Fred Grayner and his inamorata took their gay, homeward walk under the sympathetic starlight. It is at least ten years since an entry opposite Tom Bayne's name in the clubbook read, "Unable to pay dues." And at least five since he was summarily discharged from the office of the great distillery. Then, after that "Black Friday" of his, he subsisted through the medium of miscellaneous jobs; forming all the while, however, the main figure of the group that every evening occupied the spacious arm[illegible] of a well-known [illegible] with its [illegible] form, [illegible] On this voyage of [illegible]

[illegible] self-respect. When he [illegible] wife in his arms, he [illegible] ing up the match with Agnes [illegible] lomew—marrying a woman [illegible] bags—united with one who loved him and would continue to do so [illegible] reached a pinnacle of fame [illegible] did the wisest of all possible things. He has reached that pinnacle, and thinks that had he married Miss Agnes and not acquired fame, there would have been an everlasting picnic in the household.

My sketch is now done, but the colors not having dried in, a few touches here and there seem to be in order. In writing it I did not propose the rendition of a homily on temperance—though I incline that way—but rather have endeavoured to show the effect of early companionship in the formation of character.

Many others have done so before me and maybe will again, but the fact remains and always shall, that the greater care a young man exercises in choosing his companions and occupation, the surer he is of ultimately getting a high place on a stout rung of the celebrated ladder we all climb more or less.

Roller Skating.

Roller skating has become a cheap and popular recreation. Rinks and assembly rooms where it can be practiced have multiplied both in New York and Brooklyn. The rates of admission and charges for the use of skates have been reduced, and the sport has been brought within the reach of classes that cannot ordinarily find enjoyment in active exercise. Habits of relaxation and a taste for recreation are to be encouraged in workaday world; and on this account it is to be regretted that the necessity exists for warning the public against the evils of roller skating. The first objection to this popular amusement is based upon the testimony of physicians. Roller skating has been pronounced a dangerous sport, injurious to health, by some of the most competent members of the profession. The exercise has been condemned as too violent even for boys; and the effects of muscular strain and rigidity of movement are represented as especially injuriour to young women. These physical results are apperent to the medical professionsin New York and Brooklyn, and the warning is too emphatic to be disregarded. The man who allows a daughter with a fragile frame and weak constitution to persist in roller skating is making a serious mistake. He is suffering her to play with her health, and may live to see her pay the penalty in chronic backache and "invalidism." Another drawback to unlimited roller skating will be apparent to any one visiting the assembly rooms where it is practiced. The commingling of boys and girls, young men and young women, more or less strangers to each other, in this violent and exciting sport offers alluring opportunities for the vicious. A busy man, who hears his daughters talking effusively about the frolics they have had in the rink, would better gō himself and get a glimpse of the interior and all that goes on.—[N. Y. Tribune.

Some New Geography.

Of what is the surface of the earth composed?

Of corner lots, mighty poor roads, railroad tracks, base ball grounds, cricket fields and skating rinks.

What proportion of the globe is water?

About three-fourths. Sometimes they add a little gin and nutmeg to it.

What is a town?

A town is a considerable collection of houses and inhabitants, with four of five men who "run the party" and lend money at 15 per cent. interest.

What is a city?

A city is an incoroporated town, with a mayor who believes the whole world shakes when he happens to fall flat on a cross-walk.

What is commerce?

Borrowing five dollars for a day or two and dodging the lender for a year or two.

Name the different races.

Horse-races, boat races, bicycle-races and racing around to find a man to indorse your note.

Into how many classes is mankind divided?

Seven—Enlightened, civilized, half civilized, too utter, not worth a [illegible] and Indian agents.

What nations are called enlightened?

Those which have the most wars and the worst laws, and produce the most criminals.

How many nations has the earth?

That's according to how you mix your drinks and which way you go home.

What is the [illegible]?

The lines passing between New York and San Francisco.

What causes day and night?

Day is caused by night getting tired out. Night is caused by everybody taking the street car going home to supper.

What is a map?

A map is a drawing to show the [illegible]

[illegible] buildings 50x250 feet each, [illegible] high, each [illegible] four or five apartments, [illegible] ing 75x170 feet, 3 stories, for a store [illegible] for finished work, besides a number of [illegible] buildings for various purposes. In their lumber yards and buildings they have [illegible] worth of lumber on hand, and have in their business [illegible] 000. They turn out about [illegible] wagons in a week and [illegible] 4,000 buggies and carriages, each year, of various descriptions from the value of $60 to $400. They send their work to all parts of the United States, Mexico, South America, Europe and Australia, and say they now send some of their work to Mr. Bristol of Fulton, and enquired very particularly about his sales. They run 125 blacksmith forges, all in full blast, and employ from 600 to 800 men. They get out their wood work by machinery and have it piled in store rooms two years before putting it together so as to have it perfectly seasoned. They have on hand thousands of wheels and other wood work to correspond, so as to put it together at short notice. They carry all their shavings and dust by machinery through hollow tubes to a large vault by the side of the engine room and use it for burning with coal in the furnace, and their shops and work rooms are free from shavings and dust. They have five engines in full blast continually and one large steam pump of the capacity of two powerful steam fire engines to run in case of a fire and a cistern under one of the main buildings holding water enough to flood the whole grounds. They pride themselves on their Hollow Axle Wagons which they say are superior to any in the market. They have spent several years in perfecting and testing these wagons, and recommend them as superior to any wood or solid iron axiles. In passing through the different rooms we could see the material in the rough. Iron in the bar, wood in the plank and then follow through the shops until we came to the highly finished wagon or carriage in the finishing rooms. They set the skeins in the arm of the axle by machinery, and when finished it fits exactly, filling it at every part more perfectly than it can be done by the most skillful mechanic. Before setting the tire they put it to as true a circle as can be scribed with a compass, and more perfectly than can be done by hand. To lift the heated tire from the furnace is but the work of an instant, and before it has time to burn the fellos, the plate on which it is fastened is revolving and running down the incline on which it rests, submerges the plate and wheel in water. They set the boxes in the wheels by hydraulic power and say "Our boxes will wear out in time, but never get loose in the hub."

There are many things that I could describe, such as the beautiful gardens and fine buildings and other parts of these grounds which are occupied by themselves and their workmen, but I fear my letter will be to long. The Toledo and detroit R. R. passes within forty feet of one of the main buildings, and they are continually bringing in raw material and carrying away finished work. The company took the highest award on their work at the Centennial exhibition in 1876, and the only award given at Sydney, New South Wales, 1877.

On my way back to the city I followed the rail track to the junction of the Chicago Air line R. R., saw the work shops of the R. R., visited the Toledo reaper and mower factory, the large wash board factory, and then passed through the beautiful city park, filled with shrubery, beautiful walks and summer houses &c. But must leave a further description until another time. I then wended my way home across and down many street, and saw a great many fine residences on the way. I arrived home quite weary and the first greeting I received was "Too late for dinner" but I felt that I was well paid for my long tramp of over six miles.

Fifteen hundred persons have already left Granada, Spain. The people generally are of the opinion the end of the world is at hand and are asking absolution from the priests. The village of Geievejar is slowly sliding downward into the valley. An opening has appeared in the mountain at Olivar, from which the smoke is issuing. The subterranean rumblings and detonations have been put forward as to the cause of the opening, which is considered by some due to the subsidence of the surface, owing to the great voids in the interior of the earth. Others attribute it to volcanic action. Parliament has authorized the provinces of Granada to raise a relief loan of $400,000, the payment of which will be guaranteed by the government.

FARMERS' FOLLY.

Some farmers adhere, even against the full light of fact and discovery, to the old fashioned folly of coloring butter with carrots, annato, and inferior substances, notwithstanding the splendid record made by the Improved Butter Color, prepaired by Wells Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. At scores of the best agricultural Fairs it has received the highest award over all competitors.

The low price in wheat and grain in the west is causing great distress among the farmers. In Kansas wheat has sold as low as eighteen and twenty-one cents per bushel.

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently proceeded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose that he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomash, etc. A moisture like prespiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a mommon attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching, and affecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, O. Sold by M. M. Williams. 29tf

THE Montreal carnival of 1885 was opened in grand style on Monday and will continue through the week. The programme if fully carried out will afford a vast amount of enjoyment.

GENERAL McCLELLAN will be Chief Marshal at the inaurugural ceremonies on the fourth of March. The position was originally assigned to General Hancock, but owing to the death of his son he prefers not to serve.

AT about 2 o'clock Saturday morning the splendid steamer St. John of the People's line, running between New York and Albany, caught fire at her dock in New York and was consumed. The St. John was one of the first vessels on the Hudson.

GOVERNOR SQUIRE of Washington Territory insists that that territory should be admitted as a state, as it has 150,000 inhabitants and 41,000 voters, of whom 9,000 and over are women who believe in the new dispensation of the far west, which recognizes their rights.

SULLIVAN the pugulist, is making himself very conspicious of late by his repeated rounds of dissipation. In Boston last week he busied himself in visiting the various saloons of the city, drinking, carousing and fighting. His sprees threaten to result in a tragedy.

THE Liberty bell was taken from Independence hall at Philadelphia last Friday and placed aboard a special car which carried it and guard to the New Orleans exposition. The truck on which it was hauled was handsomely decorated with flowers and flags, and was drawn by six horses.

SISTER THERESA, an inmate of the Catholic convent at Wilkesbarre, Pa., and a niece of James G. Blaine, died last Wednesday morning. Her mother was Eliza Blaine, sister of James G. She was educated at St. Xaver's Academy near Pittsburg, took the veil in 1869. Her mother is now dangerously ill in Baltimore.

FIVE weeks from to-day will occur the first inauguration of a Democratic president in twenty-four years. Great preparations are being made in Washington for this coming event. It is expected that the inaugural attendance will be unusually large. All political factions will be represented. The office seeker will be there "by a large majority," waiting to follow at Grover's command.

GONERNOR HILL has established an innovation that will be welcomed by society and will relieve visitors from unpleasant embarrassment. Heretofore callers at the executive mansion who desired to make a social visit have not been at all certain of finding the governor at home. Governor Hill will set apart each Wednesday evening for the reception of callers.

THE National Temperance society ask of President-elect Cleveland that which they surely know he will not consent to. They have adopted a memorial asking him to exclude intoxicating beverages from the White House during his stay in it. In making this request the temperance people show themselves to be in earnest in their endeavours to rid the White House of that which is both detrimental and demoralizing to any household and especially in a household where is gathered the heads of this great nation and where ought but morality should reign. But then, no one can expect that Mr. Cleveland will consent to such a thing, for did not the lamented Garfield refuse the society their request, and judging from the biography of both men we would have sooner expected a promise from Mr. Garfield than from Mr. Cleveland. It is gratifying, however, to think that one man has graced the presidential chair who was firm in his denunciations, and who excluded intoxicating beverages from the White House, and that man was Rutherford B. Hayes. We believe it had a wholesome influence on the nation.

A horse belonging to Dr. Snyder of Scriba ran away in Oswego, Monday night, demolishing the cutter and breaking the harness. The horse was found near Mexico Monday morning.

The dwelling house of H. Burdorf, at Gaysville, burned Sunday about 2 p. m. The fire is supposed to have caught from a defective stove-pipe. Most of the furniture was saved. Loss $2,500; insurance $1,200.

The Phœnix Paper company, which has the reputation of turning out the best manilla tissue of any mill in the country, runs exclusively on that class of goods, and have orders for six months ahead.

Warren E. Carpenter, who is charged with murdering his wife at Sandy Creek has transferred a piece of land in Sandy Creek containing thirteen and one half acres to D. E. Ainsworth, his attorney, for $550, and has given a mortgage of $3,000 on his homestead to the same person.

A few days since Mrs. Abner Wood died at Sodus Point at the advanced age of 91 years. Mrs. Wood was a former resident of Hannibal and Oswego. During her residence in Hannibal Mrs. Wood often fed Indians who called at her door, and she saw the first wagon which ever came through from Auburn to Oswego, which brought provisions to soldiers at Oswego.

THE EMPIRE STATE.

F. Remington & Sons of Ilion shipped 2,000 Lee magazine rifles last week.

Judge Lewis has rendered a decision at Mayville that the state game law overrides any law county boards of supervisors may pass.

The Oneida savings bank will buy the National State bank building. It has over $500,000 in deposits and a surplus of about $40,000.

The gold and silver mines that are supposed to have been found in Ulster county are causing much excitement and prospectors are examining lands all along the Hudson.

The Erie machine shops at Susquehanna put on full time Saturday, and 800 additional men will be employed, with a probability that a number more will be employed in the shops along the road.

Erastus Corning, of the Corning Iron works, at Cahoes, has given orders to his clerks not to collect rent from employes of the works living in the company's houses until such time as there is a revival of business.

The Rochester Post-Express says good, hard, earnest work is being done at present by many of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic in Western New York who advocate the election of L. P. Thompson of Phelps for the position of department commander of this state.

The Jones Car works at Schenectady, which have been idle a year, were on Friday leased to Walter A. Jones, one of the former company. He will resume January 27th. The announcement causes great satisfaction.

John Livingston of New York has been engaged by Farmer Livingston of Oswego, who caught the escaped murderer Meineke, in his barn, to prosecute Sheriff Black of Binghamton, for the $1,000 reward offered for the murderer's capture. Sheriff Redman and Deputy Putnam of Oswego are also claimants of the reward. The appeal case of Meineke cannot possibly be acted upon before the latter part of April next, and if a new trial is not ordered by the General Term the decision may be appealed to the Court of Appeals. If this court refuses the prisoner must be resentenced, and therefore he will escape the gallows for some time.

Cleveland's Possibilitues.

It is reported that a marriage is not improbable between President elect Cleveland and Mrs. John V. L. Prune of Albany. It was once reported he was to marry a Miss Humphreys of Buffalo, and that she had come down to select her trousseau. Then it was a Miss Folsom he was to wed, a young lady who is sister to the late Oscar Folsom of Buffalo, once a law partner of Governor Cleveland. Next it was Mrs. Cary of Buffalo, who was to be favored with his hand, a lady of wealth, at whose house was given the reception to the governor when he visited Buffalo just before the election. All these stories turned out to be quite baseless. Mrs. Pruyn is the widow of the late Chancellor Pruyn of Albany, a very distinguished citizen in his life, but much the senior of his wife. She is the daughter of Judge Amasa J. Parker of Albany, who long held a prominent position in New York politics, and who is [illegible]

[illegible] to have discouraged most men, but the good pastor could endure it all with an even temper and calm spirit. This was not the trouble. What had been gradually wearing him out and was undermining his constitution was the fact that their church music was in a frightful state. They had a wheezy old one horse organ that seemed to be a special agent sent by Satan to annoy the minister and his flock. It had broken out [illegible] bellows and that bellows made more noise sometimes than the organ itself, and then on cold days you were not sure about the notes, some would go and some would not, others would have a faint squeak [illegible] as though "possessed" some sounded as though they had a sore throat. It was a wheezy old affair. Every time it was patched it grew worse. The church people had been raising an organ fund for years. They had fairs and sociables and squeeze money parties and all such allurements but the fund did not seem to grow. People would not sing when that organ played. It seemed to put a blight on anything that was musical. So that Sundays the minister would read the hymn over, and then the organist would set the old affair a going, the congregation would rise but no one would sing except brother Getthere and sister Imwithyou, who always sang as the spirit moved and it always moved in one direction, that is, one tune for all pieces. It was evident that the minister could not stand the strain much longer; affairs were approaching a crisis. He took a vacation of a week and went to New York to see if he could not find relief. the next sabbath saw him in his pulpit radically changed. His face had lost its haggard look and was bright. His whole appearance was animated. After a short service without music, he stepped forward and said "Dear friends it has been a source of deep regret to me and to you doubtless, that God's service of song has been so neglected. I am happy to announce that hereafter we shall have no further difficulty on that score." During that week's absence he had investigated carefully the uses to to which electricity might be put and had concluded that it could be utilized in furnishing music for his service. His congregation was large and comprised many infant souls. In his church he had erected a large telephonic sound amplifier and directly behind it and out of sight, a key board. From this key board telephonic lines ran to the home of every member of his church that contained a baby and there smaller sound amplifiers were placed. After a couple of days of experimenting the key upon which each baby cried was accurately ascertained and recorded. Then all the lines connecting those babies crying upon a certain key as A, B, C &c., throught the scale, were joined together so that when all the babies were crying it made a complete musical scale sounding at once. The sound amplifier added great volume so that when all the babies were crying it filled the church with sound. There was a system of checks made so that the volume of sound of each note or of all, could be increased or diminished at will. The key board was cut off from comminication with the babies, but by pressing or playing the keys communication was at once restored. The checks were arranged as pedals under the key board. It was fixed so that an electric signal told every house with a babe when music was wanted. The work was finally completed and the sabbath following saw that church overflowing with people anxious about the result. When the preacher arose and announced the hymn and asked all to join in song of praise, there was no one but was determined to listen. Then the organist began to play on the key board and the invisible choir to breathe forth melody. Never had such music been heard. The fresh young voices in infant purity blended into harmony, filled the church with melody of seraphic sweetness; and as finally the whole congregation joined in song the walls of the old church fairly trembled with harmony. How pleased the good divine looked! Hardly a church member but that wanted to come round and shake hands with his neighbor. Success had crowned the work. Now the church flourishes mightily and the minister rejoices in spirit and health.

How to Get a Public Office.

There are one hundred and twenty thousand offices within the gift of the new administration, and now is the time for those seeking public employment to take proper steps to [illegible]

[illegible] forward every year. Then there are [illegible] school [illegible] and deputy [illegible] and women [illegible] among their members. So the struggle goes bravely on and the spark of hope is kept alive. In convention, they adopted resolutions rejecting as dogmas of Judaism the teaching that woman was an after thought in creation, that her sex was a misfortune, and that marriage was a condition of subordination. And further called upon the Christian ministry, as leaders of thought to enforce the idea that in true religion, there is neither male nor female, neither bond nor free, but all are one.

It was an interesting sight to observe the eager crowds that thronged the meetings just held here by evangelist Moody. High and low, rich and poor, saints and sinners, literally all classes and conditions of men and women went, or tried to go. And as one watched the sea of faces, one could not help wondering what brought them there. Primarily, of course, it was the man himself, who has made his name familiar to half the globe. But no one, however indifferent or prejudiced could listen to Mr. Moody long without feeling that he has power, or without understanding something of what it was that held and influenced the lowest and vilest people of Chicago or London, and the highest culture of Oxford or Cambridge. He is a man who feels that he has a message, and that nothing on earth is so important as to tell it. He is more than that. He is a man who feels that his message is greater than himself.

Congress has not accomplished much this week, the subjects that have come up for consideration have been dull, and both the Senate and the House devoted much time to obituary oratory over the late Senator Anthony of Rhode Island and Representative Evins deceased of South Carolina. Indian appropriations have been discussed in the House, and the Oklahoma-lands question has been before both branches of Congress. Thus the whole Indian question has been sprung and no question, probably, is more provocative of talk. The fact that the best use the Indian can make of land is to lease thousands of acres to syndicates of cattle kings at a few cents per acre yearly, while there are thousands of white people who would have no land and would like to get some, has impressed legislators with the idea that Congress must take hold of the matter. Not only for the purpose of taking care of the Indians, but for the purpose of taking care of the white people. Senator Vest of Missouri declares that Oklahoma belongs to the Red men and thinks the white settler should be made to go, while Rep. O'Neill of Missouri thinks there is no need of carrying the idea of sacredness of treaties to the verge of idiocy.

The favorite loafing place of Congressmen has been spoiled. The row of screens in rear of seats in the House, behind which Members collected in order to joke, tell stories and smoke, have all been taken away. The alleged reason was to promote ventilation, but the real object was to promote legislation. The next improvement will be electric bells connecting with each Member's desk and all the pages and officers of the House who now crowd around the Speaker's platform will be relegated to the space behind the seats, where there will be indicators to direct them to any member who rings.

Senator Garland of Kansas has left the city again, and Cabinet builders and aspirants are nonplussed by this second visit. Mr. Garland did not leave word that he was summoned to Albany; or authorize anyone to state the character of his errand, but it is "understood" nevertheless, that he was invited to confer again with Mr. Cleveland.

The work of preparation for the inauguration is being pushed along as rapidly as possible. The immense court of the unfinished Pension building, where the inaugural ball is to be held, is now the problem before the committee. There is nothing about it now to indicate that it will be a proper setting by the night of the fourth of March for plumes, beauty and brilliant costumes. The floor is now heaped with rubbish, the wind whistles through the gaping doorways and windows, and stirs the dirt and sand into motion. Still a large force of workmen will make wonderful changes in the next few weeks.

ST. NICHOLAS.

The frontispiece of February St. Nicholas, contains a life-like picture "Beggar Boys at Play" engraved after the noted painting by Murillo. E. P. Roe contributes the opening chapters of a new serial story "Driven Back to Eden," which gives promise of fully equaling his former efforts. "English Kings in a Nut Shell" by Gail Hamilton, gives the name and reign, with brief history of all the kings and queens from William the Conqueror to Queen Victoria, sung in pleading rhyme to be never forgotten and will take its place side by side with "Mother Goose Melodies," "Ralph's Winter Carnival" tells of a visit to Montreal, which is in full blast the present week. The illustrations of the Toboggan slide are so natural children all want to go and take a hand. In the serials, Trowbridge, Stockton and Mrs. Clement contribute articles in this number. As a magazine for boys and girls St. Nicholas takes the lead. It is most ably conducted by Mary Mapes Dodge.

Do You Know Him?

There was a man in our town, and he was wondrous wise, for when he marked his prices down, he then did advertise.

And when he saw his trade increase, with all his might and main, he marked still lower every price, and advertised again.

And when he advertised again, his rivals stamped and tore, to see folks rush with might and main, to patronize that store.

And while they sat in solitude, and saw him custom win, that man behind the counter stood, and raked the shekels in.

And when he raked the shekels in, and saw his fortune rising, he took a goodly lot of "tin", and kept on advertising.

Each day a generous sum he'd sink, and demonstrate full plain, the more one pays for printer's ink, the greater is his gain.

He got up boiling over with rage, and swore he would kill Lampkins. He followed him into Henry Dietchrich's grocery store, where he drew a revolver and fired. The first shot struck a pair of scales. Lampkins seeing that his assailant was dangerous, got in under the counter when Lamont reached over and fired a second time, causing the fatal wound. The wounded man tried to get out of the store, when a third shot was fired at him. He managed to get outside and fell when Lamont followed and fired at him for the fourth time. At this moment a constable arrived and Lamont was hurried off to the lockup. The fatal shot took effect in the abdomen and Lampkins expired in a short time. He was about 35 years of age and, it is said, leaves a wife and three children at Fulton, N. Y. The murderer claims Boston as his home. The murder causes no little excitement in the village. The prisoner on being brought before the justice this morning, cried like a child and evidently appreciated the terrible position in which he had placed himself by his madness and folly.

The news in Fulton of the murder of Lampkins was the occasion for considerable talk during Sunday. Lampkins' occupation was that of a laborer. He is well known here as a hard-working man. His wife lives at the Johnson house, where she has been employed as a waiter for the past three years. She is known as Mary London, her maiden name. Lampkins has not lived with his wife for 2 years. She, it is said, appears to manifest little concern over his death. They have a child about two years of age residing at the home of her mother in this village.

Masonic Installation.

The installation of officers of Fulton Chapter 167 Royal Arch Masons, occured last Wednesday evening. The services were conducted by High Priest C. H. Treadwell of Oswego, assisted by Col. A. Cropsy. A number of invitations had been extended to our citizens and a good sized audience was gathered not, withstanding the evening proved to be a most unpropitious one. The services were all of an interesting character especially so to the invited guests who were unacquainted with the regular formulated ceremony. The several officers were installed in the order of their degree each solemnly promising to obey the enjunctions and to administer the duties of his office in a just and upright manner. The counsel and advice administered to each one was most excellent the objects expressed being to make men just and true, kind and charitable and to live a purer life. The candidates wore the official robes of their stations. They are beautifully and richly wrought and presented an imposing specticle. The insigna and emblems of masonic faith which have been handed down from earliest history are to this order what the cross is to the Christian church and when inscribed upon the alter, the robe or the gold breast pin are held sacred and entitles the wearer to the the care and protection of the order. The exercises of the evening were enlivened by two solos from Mr. N. H. Gilbert "The Lost Chord" and "Thy Sentinel am I." Prof. Jones also gave a piano solo "Fanthsia on Playel's Hymn" and Mrs. Pratt and Mr. Gilbert sang the duett "See the Pale Moon."

After the installation exercises Col. T. B. White of Oswego made a short and eloquent address in regard to the Masonic Order and its objects and purposes.

The following is the list of officers installed: Dr. D. Pardee, M. E. H. P.; Dr. J. Watson, E. K.; J. H. Merton, E.S.; C. R. Nichols, C. of H.; S. Parmalee, P. S.; J. M. Campbell, R. A. C.; G. A. Berzee, M. of 3. V.; L. J. Parker, M. of 2. V.; D. T. Morfa, M. of 1. V.; R. E. Phillips, Treasurer; T. Ferris, Secretary; C. D. Branch, Tyler.

Two Indictments For Murder.

The grand jury at Oswego has indicted Warren E. Carpenter of Sandy Creek for murder. It will be remembered that Carpenter's wife was found dead in a tub of water at three o'clock on the morning of December 3d, by Mr. Carpenter and his son Charles. A coroner's jury rendered a verdict of accidental drowning. Afterwards, at the solicitation of Mrs. Carpenter's friends, the body was taken up and an autopsy and a second inquest ordered. Wounds were found on the head and other portions of the body. At this inquest the jury found that the woman came to her death from blows inflicted by some person to them unknown. Carpenter was arrested at his home Thursday night and taken to Pulaski jail. Friday morning he was taken to Oswego. His counsel, D. Ainsworth, is in Rochester, and he will not be arraigned until his arrival. Judge Huntington has been engaged to assist in the defense. The grand jury also found an indictment for murder against Mrs. Kate Meyer of Phœnix, who is charged with administering poison to her husband on New Year's day. A commission has been appointed to examine Mrs. Myer and to decide whether or not she is insane.

OBITUARY.

Mary, wife of John E. Dutton died Jan. 24th, at the advanced age of 87 years. She was born March 20, 1798, in Alsted, N. H., was a teacher for a number of years at Cooperstown and Gilbertsville, Otsego county, and for eight years afterwards in Norwich, N. Y.; was married October 1st, 1839 and came to Fulton, remaining here for nearly forty years. At the time of her death she lived at Corfu, N. Y. The remains were brought here for interment yesterday afternoon. The funeral which was held at B. J. Dyer's was attended by [illegible]

Lent begins February 18th.

Town meeting is near at hand.

The next meeting of the Ideal C. L. S. C. will occur Friday evening, Feb. 6.

A load of young people enjoyed the cold luxury of a straw ride to Hannibal last Monday evening.

Among the wills recently proved and recorded at the county clerk's office was that of John H. Woodin of this village.

The Young People's Literary society of the M. E. church will hold a meeting this evening January 28 at the residence of Mrs. Haviland on Oneida street.

The snow plow which left Oswego on the N. Y. O. & W. R. R., Thursday morning, jumped the track at Pennellville, and did considerable damage.

Miss Mary Bell formerly of Fulton was married to Mr. Allen Williams of Forest-Home, Penn. Dec. 22 in Syracuse by the Rev. Mr. Green of the Centinary church.

The "Red Bird," which took a load of visiting guests to the Silver wedding of L. B. Babcock, living a few miles east of Fulton on Monday evening, was capisized by the high wind and a number of ladies injured by the fall.

Messrs. Snow and Loomis, of this village, have purchased the hardware business of the late John Woodin of Fulton.—[Baldwinsville Gazette. Mr. Snow was formerly a resident of this village, where his parents now reside. His many friends in this place unite in wishing him success in his new enterprise.—[Central Square News.

The Rockwell's Mills correspondent to the Norwich Union of last week says: "Mr. Flaxington and family remove on Friday of this week to their old home at Fulton, N. Y. They have made many friends while living here, who will regret their departure, and wish them success in their future home."

An indictment for criminal libel has been found against I. G. Jenkins, a leading business man of Oswego. Jenkins published articles relating to the grain margin business of Pratt & Co. He published a letter in the Palladium Saturday night saying that some years ago he was nearly ruined by margin gambling and vowed to warn all young men against its temptations.

The Sandy Creek News says: The snow that has fallen during the week will enable the Littlejohn lumber company to bring the large quantities of lumber and pulp timber, which lay at Smartville, to the railroad. The pulp timber goes to the pulp works at Fulton. About eighty men are engaged by the lumber company at their mill in Redfield where they are producing 15,000 feet of lumber per day.

Mr. C. E. Russ, jr. of Palermo, a cousin of Supervisor Russ of this village has been having considerable trouble of late, One night last week one of his horses was stolen but on the following day it returned of its own accord. The next night some persons cut the tail from a valuable colt belonging to Mr. Russ, and then proceeded to set fire to the barn and also to an unoccupied house adjoining. The fires were extinguished with considerable difficulty. There is no clue to to the perpetrators and Mr. Russ cannot imagine why he is thus persecuted.—[Phœnix Register.

At a meeting called by Commissioner Metcalf of trustees and friends of Public schools held in No. 2 school house, Fulton, Jan. 24, 1885, Mr. A. Hanna was elected chairman and W. N. Osborn secretary. On motion Prof. Boothby was elected a committee for town of Volney to select a suitable physiology for this commissioners district. As it is very desirable that all the schools should adopt the same book. Meeting adjourned to meet at same time and place to be designated by the commissioner.

W. N. OSBORNE, Secretary.

Mr. D. Styles, of Fulton, in response to the desire of many of his friends, has finally consented to open a class for painting in this city. We understand that it is his intention to confine his instruction to students who have obtained some proficiency in the art. Among those who have already joined his class are Mrs. Frank Beard, Miss P. B. Smith, Mrs. Alexander McLean and Mr. Cahill. Mr. Styles has written that he will meet his pupils for the first time, at Miss Smith's studio in the Wieting Block, tomorrow afternoon. His influence will be a beneficial one, if his work continues here any length of time, and he is welcome.—[Syracuse Sunday Times.

Resignation of Miss Royce.

Miss Hattie T. Royce who has been for nearly ten years a teacher in the Academic department of School No. 2, has secured a position as teacher in Chicago. Miss Royce has been a very popular and successful teacher and the news of her resignation was received with the deepest regret by both teachers and pupils. On Friday afternoon, in place of the closing recitation, an interesting exercise took place. The students being assembled in the chapel, a member of the graduating class presented her in behalf of the school with several handsome volumes. Although completely taken by surprise, Miss Royce gracefully expressed her gratitude in a few earnest and fitting remarks. A large number of the pupils pleasantly surprised her by congregating at the depot as she was about to take her departure for the purpose of bidding their former teacher farewell. [illegible] Stevens [illegible] Woman.

[illegible] Stevens, of Oswego, [illegible] of whose divorce from his wife was made a few days ago, in hunting for evidence against her, traced her to a house in Auburn. The papers in the divorce case were served on her. She said she was not the person named in the papers after she had read them, and acting on the advice of friends paid no attention to the matter. She is now out with a statement that she can not be the woman. She is only nineteen years old, while the woman who was Stevens' wife is twenty-six. She was married in Ithaca, but to Charles Brown and not to Charles Burnett. A cousin of Mrs. Stevens, who was shown a picture of Nina Brown, while testifying at the trial of the divorce case, swore that it was a picture of the woman who was married to Stevens. An uncle of Steven's wife would not be positive that the picture was of his niece, but Stephens himself swore that it was a photograph of the woman he had married. On this testimony the divorce was granted. Now, however, it has been proved beyond any doubt that Nina Brown is not Mrs. Stevens and never was Mrs. Davy, Mrs. Bennett or Lida Fanny Creque, and Beecher Stevens has been divorced from the wrong woman.—[Utica Herald.

Oswego Falls C. L. S. C.

At the last meeting of Oswego Falls C. L. S. C. Friday evening Jan. 23d. Mr. J. Williams of Akron Ohio, rendered an admirable paper on mental growth. The gentleman is keenly alive to his subject, and treats it with very great earnestness. His life has been devoted to educational subjects, and he is well able to interest and arouse others. A keen stimulant was given to those present, and a bright and true way to a noble and earnest life was clearly pointed out. Following this paper was an essay on Pericles by Mrs. Swan, also one on Alexander by Miss. Alice Schenck, Next meeting will occur Wednesday evening, Jan. 28th. at Mrs. H. Schencks.

Polo Clubs.

Two Polo clubs handsomely uniformed have been organized in this village. The clubs are named "The Fulton Roller Polo Club" and "The reserves." The first named club is made up of the following gentlemen: John Hadcock, Capt.; C. Mace, F. Willard, J. Appelt, H. Collins, T. D. Lewis. The members of the Reserves are: E. C. Fralick, Capt.; W. Ayles, C. Willard, H. C. Markham, L. C. Foster, G. W. Hoff. The first match between these clubs was played at the rink Thursday evening last and was won by the reserves. To-morrow evening the second match will occur and as the defeated club is bound to redeem its reputation an interesting game may be expected. The boys make a fine appearance in their new suits.

Will Shut Down.

The (Cleveland) Lakeside Press of Saturday says: Information reaches us that the American Glass Works at Bernhard's Bay will stop operations next Wednesday. The proprietors have been unable to find a market for their product at remunerative prices. The market appears to be overstocked, and prices are badly cut. The manager states that in answer to requests to quote prices on glass, he would give the very lowest rate that it could possibly stand, only to be answered: "We can do better." And in view of this condition of affairs, they have concluded to cease manufacturing for the present.

A Large Audience.

It was a large audience that gather at the City Opera House Saturday evening to greet Beedle & Prindle's Pleasure Party. The entertainment was pleasing throughout and the audience was almost continually convulsed with laughter. Johnny Prindle, like wine, grows better with age, for never did he appear to better advantage before a Plattsburg audience, being if possible funnier than ever before. The other features of the entertainment are fully up to the standard, especially the cornet solo by Mr. Snow.—[Plattsburg, N. Y. Morning Telegram, Nov. 24, 1884.

Cricketers to Assemble.

A reunion of cricketers will take place on Monday, February 9, at C. H. Millward's in this city. This will probably be the largest gathering of past and present wielders of the willow ever held in Syracuse. As the game on this occasion will be played with knives and forks, the old 'uns are fully expected to come out ahead. In addition to all local players, invitations have been sent to Oswego, Oswego Falls, Utica, Ilion and Rochester, in all of which towns clubs are expected to be organized for the coming season.—[Standard.

Looking for Another Will.

The Meyer will was up for probate before Surrogate David in Phœnix on Monday. The will was made before the death of Meyer's first wife. Mrs. Meyer was represented by counsel and the case was adjourned for two weeks. It was intimated that a search would be made for a later will.

The monthly meeting of the Lawrence C. L. S. C. will be held at the residence of Mrs. Frank Ditts, Friday evening Jan. 30th, at 7.30 o'clock. A full attendance is desired as matters of importance will come before the meeting. Rev. Mr. Markham will give in addition a series of Bushnels "Character of Jesus."

Nagent & Gleason closed their series of entertainments in this village Saturday evening. They were greeted by good houses every night. Their performances are better than ever before. The company has hosts of friends in Fulton who will always give them a hearty welcome.

Printers are not mashed on the South. They don't like anything "solid."—Washington Hatchet. They prefer Cleveland because he is "fat."—Saratoga Eagle But what if he is "led astray" by the aggressive leaders of the confederate columns? It's a poor rule that won't work both ways.—[Chicago Sun. No danger, for Cleveland is of the Andrew Jackson "type" and will "stick" to his party.

I have engaged the the well know Beedle & Prindle Pleasure party to give two of their laughable and very enjoyable entertainment at the Opera House, Thursday and Friday evenings, December 29, and 30. They consented to reduce their price from 50 and 75 cents down to 25 gallery; reserve seats 35 cents. With this attraction and at these low prices the house should be packed. Yours very Respectfully,

H. HOWARD, Manager.

The barn of J. H. Loomis who resides south of the village, was burned last Thursday night, as well as most of its contents. It looks very much as though the work was that of an incendiary, as a horse and two cows, in the stable were turned loose. Mr. Loomis with several neighbors discovered fresh foot tracks about the barn and traced them as far as the village. The insurance on the barn and contents was $600.

Mr. J. C. Anderson, G. P. agent of the New York, Ontario & W. & Walkill Valley R R. is collecting advertising matter etc., for the reissuing of their Summer Home book for the season of 1885. The book this season will be far superior to any heretofore published. First-class artists are under contract to illustrate some of the "Up the Midland" views and will make the publication more of a work of art than an advertising medium. Those contemplating taking summer boarders during the summer should apply to Mr. Anderson at once for the necessary blanks for filling in their notices. This book has a circulation of over thirty thousand. It is distributed with the best people in New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Zion Church.

For the benefit of the communicants and friends of Zion church we publish the following letter, received this morning by Richard Carr, clerk of the vestry, which sufficiently explains itself.

CHITTENANGO, N. Y., Jan, 27, '85.

To Mr. Richard Carr.

Dear Sir:

Your letter acknowledging the mind of the vestry of Zion church to call me as its minister, duly rec'd and contents carefully noted.

Having received the permission of my Diocesan, I will accept the call and, God willing, will begin my labors among you as minister in charge on Sexagesima Sunday, Feb. 8th. With the prayer that, "in all our works begun, continued and ended in God, we may glorify His holy name." I remain Yours very truly in the Catholic faith,

HORACE B. GOODYEAR.

Night Train.

The night express, No. 5 on the New York, Ontario & Western railway is equipped with the latest improved Pullman palace sleeping cars and elegant day coaches making up as fine a train as any line running through the State, This company have recently placed on sale at their principal stations, a full line of tickets to Western and South-Western points and at the lowest cut rates.

This train connects at Oneida Castle with the West Shore & Buffalo express, west and also run coaches through to Suspension Bridge via Oswego and the Lake Shore Division of the R. W. & O. R. R., connecting at that point with the Grand Trunk Road at one o'clock p. m., arriving at Chicago the next morning at 8 o'clock. People who are contemplate going West will be glad to learn the O. & W. are competing for Western business and should call on their agent, Mr. R. R. Johnson, at Fulton, for lowest rates.

[illegible] by Sheridan Bros. & Co. as a hardware store. In a short time both buildings were in ruins. As the firemen were about to ascend a ladder to the roof of Wright's store, a quantity of powder exploded in the cellar, shattering the glass fronts and breaking the pavement on which the ladder was resting letting it through to the cellar. The firemen narrowly escaping. The fire next spread to the building owned by E. B. Collins, and occupied by him as a shoe store, by Steele as a saloon and billiard parlor and by Chas. H. David as a law office. The private hose belonging to the mills of Gardner & Seymour, G. W. Gage & Co., and W. S. Nelson now lent their aid to stay the flames. Many citizens who had turned out were busy removing the goods from Collin's store, also the furniture from the dental rooms of Dr. I. C. Curtis on the second floor of the post office block and from the rooms of Dr. Lee and Craine's barber shop on the same floor. The mail and contents of the postoffice were packed and removed, as well as the stock of goods in Mrs. Ney's news room. The building for some time seemed to be in great danger. Many books and valuables were removed from the First National Banking rooms adjoining the post office and placed in Bacon's store for safe keeping. The two story wooden structure east of Wright's handsome store, owned by D. W. Gardner and occupied by D. C. Draper as a grocery, was slightly damaged by water. Collin's store, though not wholly destroyed, was badly damaged by fire and water.

The damage to the post office block by water is quite extensive. The hard work of our gallant firemen is all that saved the entire block from being a prey to the flames, It was nearly 10 a. m. before the fire was fully extenguished. The wind during the afternoon revived the fire that was smouldering in the ruins, and the company was obliged to turn out again. The mercury during the morning stood five degrees below zero. The standing walls are enveloped in ice and present a polar appearance. The total loss is estimated at $40,000. As near as we can get at the facts at present, the losses are as follows:

Sheridan Bros. & Co., hardware stock. Loss, $12,000, Insured for $9,000 in the the followigg companies: Royal $3,000; North American, $2,000; Home $1,000; Imperial of London, $3,000; Fire Association, $1,000. With agency of H. E. Nichols and C. W. Streeter.

Schuyler Schenck, on building $5,500. Insured in Toledo, Ohio.

J. J. Wright, loss on stock, $5,000, insured for $3,800 in the following companies; Hamburg Breamen, $1,500; Niagara, of New York, $1,800. Insured with Streeter.

H. C. Beales, Loss on photograph gallery, $3,000. Insured for $1,500 in Ætna of Hartford, with agency of C. W. Streeter.

E. B. Collins, loss on building $3,000, damage to stock $1,000. Insured on stock in Springfield, Mass., $2,000, on building, $3,500 in the Continatal, and $1,500 in the Hanover, with agency of C. H. David, damaged by fire and water $300. No insurance.

C. H. David.

D. C. Draper, damaged by water, $500. Covered by insurance.

Steel's billard room, damaged by fire and water, $100.

J. J. Stephens, loss on building $5,500. Insured for $1,000. Also damage by fire and water, on post office building $1,000. Insured.

Dr. C. M. Lee, damage by breakage $50. No insurance.

Dr. I. C. Curtis, damage by water and breakage $25. Insured.

W. M. Craine, by water and breakage $20. No insurance.

A. K. Ney, by water $100. Insured.

Mrs. John Barry's dwelling house in rear of Sheridan's store was badly damaged by fire and water. Loss unknown. The Burden house was also damaged.

The origin of the fire is unknown. We are unable to learn as yet the disposition of the losses as to their plan for the future.

Fire Notes.

Considerable surprise and indignation was manifested when it was learned that No. 2 steamer was disabled at the begin ing of the fire and some one was so uncharitable as to remark "No. 2 was first rate at annual review and trial of distance thrown, but when a fire occurred it was always lame or disabled." In this case it was claimed that the water pipe was frozen up and the engineer could not readily get it thawed out beside it was a pretty "cold day" for him anyway.

[illegible] our own [illegible] the [illegible] from which [illegible] been so cheap [illegible] for the pro[illegible] as this, while [illegible] the disadvantage of be[illegible] from our markets, [illegible] transportation, and cer[illegible] to value if not in qual[illegible] make it pay or they would [illegible] continue, and constantly expand the [illegible]. The food on which many of [illegible] eggs are made is shipped across the ocean, paying two or three profits before it reaches the consumer, and the eggs after paying two or three more profits are sold in our markets at a price less than our own products, equivalent to still another profit. But still the complaint comes up from all over the country that farmers cannot afford to keep poultry and raise eggs! It is a question of grave importance to the farmers of the country, to consumers generally, indeed to the nation, whether this is really so.

Casting about for some sufficient reason for the prevailing condition of the poultry and egg industry of the country we find, first of all, a widely prevailing sentiment that the "hen business," as it is generally called, is beneath the dignity of men. The few city and suburban fanciers and specialists are generally looked upon as cranks who have intruded upon the domain of the grannys, and an attentive reading of the voluminous literature of the poultry literature of the time only tends to confirm the impression in many cases. It is not greatly to be wondered at that reading farmers should be disgusted with the fussy details which they are told are necessary to success in the business, and decline entering upon it. All these details may be well enough for the fancier and the suburban who has an established local demand at his own price for anything he can produce, but for the farmer whose products must go upon the general market through the regular channels of trade, they are a delusion and snare, and certain to run him in debt if he attempts their practice.

But there is a middle course, as far removed from the fussy detail of the theorists as from the much berated system of leaving the fowls to care for themselves and roost in the trees, which every tiller of the soil, large and small, may pursue with both credit and profit. Fowls have the instinct of self preservation as fully developed as any other animals, and we have but to furnish them the means of reasonably indulging it, under certain restraints which in their natural condition in life become necessary to their well being. They need about as much protection from the weather as other animals, certainly not any more; but like other animals they need that it be adapted to their natures. When kept in close apartments, though only for the night, the same principles of venerations should be applied as in the case of other animals. And so on down through the whole category of special requirements which go to make up the most elaborate system of poultry appliances. A little exercise of ingenuity tempered with a little dash of common sense will enable any farmer to fit up on the sunny side of the barn, or, better yet, in it, suitable accommodations for a flock of thirty or forty hens at a merely nominal expense.

When the flock is fairly domiciled and provided with suitable runways it is no more work to take care of them, and costs no more to provide for them, than for a single cow. The physiology of the organs of digestion in fowls shows that they are designed by nature for continuous feeders. They have but one mealtime in the day and that lasts from early dawn to set of sun, and they should have the freest possible range and be provided with food adapted to their use. They should never eat enough at one time to fill the craw. But many farmers object to letting fowls run at large at all, because, as they claim, they injure some crop, or get into the garden, or do some other mischief. All this is easily and cheaply obviated by the use of a few lengths of a cheap moveable fence that can be taken up and set down again at the rate of a length each minute. It is not always necessary that the crops be enclosed, but a short wing fence often answers every purpose. Fowls will not travel far when there is food and water [illegible] house, and they very rarely go [illegible] a ten-rod wing. No man can appreciate the advantages of having a few [illegible] of such fence till he has exper[illegible] them. But the subject of poultry [illegible] is too broad for our communi[illegible] and must stand over for a time.

[illegible] In a like manner with [illegible] tion, chemistry, by determining [illegible] positions of foods [illegible] bility, and, in connection with [illegible] logical studies, the necessary ration required by different animals, for maintenance or fattening, has been able to place the farmer upon an entirely new basis in regard to his stock. Chemistry has, in fact been the teacher of economy and it is in the the oldest agricultural countries that its greatest application is found.

The great practical benefits derived from chemistry have been so thoroughly appreciated in Germany that almost every branch of agriculture, in addition to its laboratories for general research, has its own experimental station, where the chemistry of the subject forms an important part of the work. In this country there has been, as yet, but a beginning, but every year makes more apparent the necessity for the extension of the experimental system over our country with facilities for chemical investigation. Enough has been done to show that the results obtained in Germany and other countries, while they may be relatively instructive, are not entirely applicable to this country. Our soils and climate is so different from those of the Continent and so varied among themselves, that particular studies must be made for the conditions around us. The experiments in feeding cattle by Professor Sanborn, and analyses of our forage plants by the Department of Agriculture, show how very different these conditions are, and the chemical investigation of the cereals of the United States, which has been conducted by the Department for the past few years, has shown the marked effect upon their quality, produced by environment and selection of the seed.

There can be no doubt but that there is an opportunity for the advancement of agriculture in this country, with the aid of chemistry, far beyond the appreciation of the casual observer; but our national conditions are so rich that it is in the East alone that a demand for this sort of investigation occurs. It is there that we find some of the most palpable evidence of the practical and immediate returns which chemistry has made to the farmer.

The fertilizer control, exercised by the Experiment Stations of the Atlantic States, is the means of assuring the farmer of the exact quality of the article which he purchases. He is, without doubt, saved thereby many millions of dollars yearly. It is able and does tell the manufactures the value of the sources of raw substance on which he draws, and decides whether new deposits are of real value. It is called upon daily to decide the value of waste products for feeding or fertilizing purposes and in connection with industries intimately connected with the farmer, it has been able, by improving the conditions of manufacture, to increase the market where he disposes of his crops, and furnishes him by selection, dependent on analysis, the most improved varieties.

The beet sugar industry in Germany is an illustration of what the chemist has done, in connection with the artisan, for the establishment of a new industry, both to the profit of the farmer and manufacturer. Chemistry then, may be said to be the science, which in its application to agriculture is one of the most important of investigating the economies of nature. Without it, to-day the farmer would be in a very different position and his future progress slow if not completely blocked.

It must, however, be remembered that many of the theories which are now well known and accepted have been built up by the work of a multitude of investigators, and the every day reader who cannot always see in the agricultural chemical publications of the moment any practical application to his own surroundings, must remember that it is only from the combination of the many small results that the larger and broader principles follow; and that these are often so gradually impressed upon one's mind as to make less marked what chemistry has done and is doing for the farmer than is really the case. In these days of such rapid advancement in science and the arts, only the more startling inventions make any lasting mark upon our memories.

OFFICEHOLDERS.

The office held by the Kidneys is one of importance. They act as nature's sluice-way to carry off the extra liquids from the system and with them the impurities both those that are taken into the stomach and those that are taken into the stomach and those that are formed in the blood. Any clogging or inaction of these organs is therefore important. Kidney-Wort is nature's efficient agent in keeping the kidneys in good working order order, strengthening them and inducing healthy action. If you would get well and keep well, take Kidney-Wort.

A correspondent of an exchange says [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] a monthly feeding of heavy grain. Would rather raise the money than raise cows when he can buy them for $40 or $50.

An aged farmer gave interesting reminiscences of sixty years ago. It was customary then for farmers' sons to hire out to neighboring farmers. The daughters thought it perfectly honorable to hire out in the same manner. They were treated as members of the family, and in many cases remained as permanent inmates, through marriage. He thinks city styles and city boarders responsible for this departure from the simple customs of the past, making our young people dissatisfied.

PENSIONS.

How the Payments Upon Them are Growing Year by Year.

The amount paid in the last five years for pensions exceeds $300,000,000. A bill is pending in the house, and is likely to pass, increasing the annual amount $35,000,000. There are also numerous private bills which in the aggregate, will increase considerably the gross amount. It is a notable fact that among the supporters of extravagant pensions are professed economizers and tax reformers. Under the laws already in force, and those that congress has manifested an intention to pass, the treasury will pay out in five years for pensions between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000.

Be it understood that no pension law is ever repealed. New ones have been added nearly every year for upwards of 10 years. The pensioning of every soldier who served in the war, taking the muster roll for proof, is a proposal not distant in the future. It will come sooner than is generally supposed.

Confessedly the frauds are enormous. They increase with each step in legislation. Without violating the truth, pension legislation might be passed under the title, To increase frauds in the treasury, under the guise of giving pension to ex-soldiers. It is noteworthy that scarcely any new steps to prevent frauds are taken as pensions are increased. Each new law is an expansion of the opportunities for committing frauds. Millions are paid out annually for disabilities that have no relation to service in the war. It is on the disability idea that pensions are swelled.

There is not wanting the proper sentiment regarding soldiers deserving pensions. But it does not ask for this enormous taxation. Did the money thus paid out go into the pockets of ex-soldiers, the case would be different; but it is an undeniable truth that no small part of it ever reaches them, and is got out of the treasury by systematic frauds. The late commissioner Bentley gave this as his conviction; and it has not been shown to be unfounded.

At the bottom of most of the bills increasing the amounts and scope of pensions is the demagogue idea of gaining the favor of ex-soldiers. It is largely the work of demagogues in congress, some of whom, as the record shows, are famous tax reformers, advocates of economy in public expenditures and honest government.

ONE BOTTLE INSTEAD OF A DOZEN

"And it took only one bottle to do it,' said a gentleman, speaking of Parker's Hair Balsam. I had a run of fever, and when I got well of that, my hair began to fall out so fast as to alarm me. I really didn't know what to do, until one day a friend said, "Try Parker's Hair Balsam. That was some months ago. What surprised me was the fact that one bottle was enough. I expected to use up a dozen." Clean, highly perfumed, not oily, not a dye. Restores original color.

WATCH THE KIDNEYS.

They are the most important secretory organs. Into and through the Kidneys flow the waste fluids of the body, containing poisonous matter taken out of the system. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained, the whole system becomes disordered and the following symptoms will follow: Headache, weakness, pain in the small of back and loins, flushes of heat, chills, with disordered stomach and bowels. You can thoroughly protect the Kidneys by BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, and when any of these symptoms manifest themselves you can quickly rid yourself of them by this best of all medicines for the Kidneys. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS are sold everywhere at $1 per bottle, and one bottle will prove their efficacy.

How Watch Cases are Made.

This process of manufacture was invented by James Boss, who started in business in 1854, and the methods and tools used in making these watch cases are covered by patents. This is the only watch case made under this process. For many years the introduction of these goods was slow, owing to popular prejudice against "plated" goods, but gradually the public learned that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case was not a cheap gold-washed or electro-plated article, but was made of genuine gold plates of standard quality and thickness. Conscientious adherence to the determination to make the best watch case ever put on the market, and the adoption of every improvement suggested, has made the James Boss' Gold Watch Case the STANDARD. In this watch case the parts most subject to wear—the bow, crown, hinges, thumb-catches, etc., are made of SOLID GOLD.

The Slow-to-Get Married Young Man.

The young man of Macon, Ga., who only last week asked to have his wedding day postponed, is one of many thousands who, with or without asking are constantly putting off the fatal day. And, naturally enough, the question arises in inquisitive minds: Why is this? The philosophers say that every event has its cause. And this state of things is a big event. All right-minded men agree with the Scriptures that whosoever getteth a good wife secures a treasure and a blessing. And the experiences of happily-married men in all generations confirm this view of the case. Unfortunately the records of divorce courts and the unrecorded conversations of the club rooms do not quite chime in with this beautiful view of the question and the knowing modern young man hangs his head and fails to come to time. The young men of the period say the girls do not now marry for love or because they want to provide cultured and happy homes for their husbands and families and so become the choicest aspirations of general society. They say the girls marry for money or for homes for themselves—that is, for surer center of social trivialty; that the idea of being a help-mate has vanished from the feminine mind, and of course young men do not want wives to drag them down. The girls tell a very different story and blame it on the miserable selfishness of men. It is hard to decide.—[Philadelphia Times.

A THRILLING STORY

As Told by a Merchant in Troy, N. Y.—A Surgical Operation Avoided—How A Father, Wife and Daughter Escaped an Awful Doom

Of the hundreds of accounts of remarkable cures wrought by DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, none have appeared so purely astonishing as the following: The persons mentioned are among the most highly respected in the city of Troy, and the story as told by the father will prove interesting to all our readers.—ED.

TROY, N.Y.

Dr. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: My daughter was afflicted with a severe growth of Fungus. To remove it we had resorted to almost every remedy and consulted the most prominent surgeons and physicians. Dr. —— of Troy, said that a surgical operation would be necessary, but fearing fatal results I hesitated. Some of the physicians claimed that it was caused by one thing and some by another. The Fungus was prominent and disfigured her looks. Having heard of Dr. Kennedys' FAVORITE REMEDY working so thoroughly on the blood I determined to try it, to see if this medicine could do what doctors had failed to do and surgeons had hardly dared to undertake. I can say in truth that the result of this trial was the complete cure of my daughter of this dreadful malady. Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY alone effected it. We used nothing else, for other things had completely failed. My daughter to-day enjoys vigorous health and to Favorite Remedy alone is the credit due. My wife also was very poor in health, due to some liver difficulty with which she had suffered a long time until she became very much reduced in flesh. A trial of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has resulted in a complete restoration of her health, which she had not enjoyed for years. She had gained in flesh and strength, and thus secured perfect health, and this is DUE ENTIRELY TO DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. As for myself, being engaged in the grocery and commission business, which makes it necessary for me to test the quality of different articles, like butter, etc., my sense of taste and my stomach were seriously injured. Everything seemed to nauseate me, and fearful of dyspepsia in the most severe form, I tried DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. The first bottle afforded immediate Relief, and from that day to this I can say that Favorite Remedy has restored me to perfect health. These are facts which I claim prove that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best medicine in the world for those afflicted with the above difficulties. If any one in the city of Troy doubts the truth of these statements let him come to me and I will prove them. I have recommended Favorite Remedy to hundreds and with the same good results.

Yours, etc., WILLIAM WINSOR.

IN PURSUANCE of an order of the Surrogate of the county of Oswego, made on the [illegible] day December, 1884, and duly recorded in the Surrogate's office of said county the undersigned administrator of the estate of Sarah J. Speed, late of the town of Volney in said county, deceased, will sell at public auction on the 14th day of February, 1885, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at the law office of Giles S. Piper, in the village of Fulton, Oswego county N. Y., the following described real estate to wit: All that tract or parcel of land, situate in the town of Volney, county of Oswego and state of New York on lot No. 17 of the seventeenth township of Scriba's Patent, and being one of five village lots laid out by Volkert VanBuren in his lifetime at Bradstreets rifts, and is the upper or most southerly lot and is 60 feet wide on the street in front, and extends back at right angles with the street 160½ feet and contains one-fourth of an acre of land.

Dated, Dec. 29th, 1884. DANIEL PARKER,
33t6 Administrator.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK: By the Grace of God Free and Independent. To Louisa Gilbert, Carrie Hamill and Josie Smith, an infant under 14 years of age and William Smith, her guardian, all of the village of Phoenix, Oswego county, N. Y., Edwin A. Gilbert of New York City, N. Y., S. Wright Gilbert, whose place of residence is unknown, Eldora Redfield, of Newell Buena Vista county, Iowa, and Frank T. Gilbert of Buffalo, N. Y., the widow, legatees and next of kin of Joseph Gilbert, deceased. You are hereby cited and required to appear before our Surrogate of the county of Oswego, at his office in the village of Phoenix, on the 9th day of March, 1885, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, then and there to attend the final judicial settlement of the account of the proceedings of James H. Loomis, as executor of the will of the deceased. And if any of the persons interested be under the age of twenty-one years, they are required to appear by their guardian, if they have one, or if they have none, that they appear and apply for one to be appointed, or in event of their neglect or failure to do so, a guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate, to represent and act for them in the proceedings.

In Testimony Whereof we have caused the seal of our said Surrogate to be hereunto (L. S.) affixed. Witness, Francis David, Surrogate of the said county, at the village of Phoenix, in said county, the 6th day of January, 1885.

MORTGAGE SALE. Whereas default has been made in the payment of the money secured to be paid by a mortgage executed by Sidney Dixon to James H. Langdon, dated the fifteenth day of November, 1873, recorded with the power of sale therein contained in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego, New York, on the 16th day of February, 1874, in Liber 101 of mortgages at page [illegible] given to secure the payment of $[illegible], and interest duly assigned by said James H. Langdon to Mary Fitzgibbons who is now the lawful holder and owner of said mortgage and whereas the sum of $395.50 is claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, being the whole amount unpaid thereon and no action has not been brought to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and said power to sell has become operative. Therefore notice is hereby given that by reason of the facts aforesaid and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided the mortgaged premises described in said mortgage as follows to wit.: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county and state aforesaid and known and distinguished as the north half of lots numbered one and two, on block number forty-nine (49) according to a map made by F. Schenck for the commissioners in partition for the heirs of the estate of Norman Hubbard deceased, dated Nov. 1844, will be sold at public auction at the law office of Giles S. Piper, in the village of Fulton, Oswego county, New York, on the 25th day of April, 1885, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day and said mortgage will be thereby foreclosed.

Dated Jan'y 28, 1885. MARY FITZGIBBONS, Assignee.

He got up boiling over with rage, and swore he would kill Lampkins. He followed him into Henry Dietchrich's grocery store, where he drew a revolver and fired. The first shot struck a pair of scales. Lampkins seeing that his assailant was dangerous, got in under the counter when Lamont reached over and fired a second time, causing the fatal wound. The wounded man tried to get out of the store, when a third shot was fired at him. He managed to get outside and fell when Lamont followed and fired at him for the fourth time. At this moment a constable arrived and Lamont was hurried off to the lockup. The fatal shot took effect in the abdomen and Lampkins expired in a short time. He was about 35 years of age and, it is said, leaves a wife and three children at Fulton, N. Y. The murderer claims Boston as his home. The murder causes no little excitement in the village. The prisoner on being brought before the justice this morning, cried like a child and evidently appreciated the terrible position in which he had placed himself by his madness and folly.

The news in Fulton of the murder of Lampkins was the occasion for considerable talk during Sunday. Lampkins' occupation was that of a laborer. He is well known here as a hard-working man. His wife lives at the Johnson house, where she has been employed as a waiter for the past three years. She is known as Mary London, her maiden name. Lampkins has not lived with his wife for 2 years. She, it is said, appears to manifest little concern over his death. They have a child about two years of age residing at the home of her mother in this village.

Masonic Installation.

The installation of officers of Fulton Chapter 167 Royal Arch Masons, occured last Wednesday evening. The services were conducted by High Priest C. H. Treadwell of Oswego, assisted by Col. A. Cropsy. A number of invitations had been extended to our citizens and a good sized audience was gathered not, withstanding the evening proved to be a most unpropitious one. The services were all of an interesting character especially so to the invited guests who were unacquainted with the regular formulated ceremony. The several officers were installed in the order of their degree each solemnly promising to obey the onjunctions and to administer the duties of his office in a just and upright manner. The counsel and advice administered to each one was most excellent the objects expressed being to make men just and true, kind and charitable and to live a purer life. The candidates wore the official robes of their stations. They are beautifully and richly wrought and presented an imposing specticle. The insigna and emblems of masonic faith which have been handed down from earliest history are to this order what the cross is to the Christian church and when inscribed upon the alter, the robe or the gold breast pin are held sacred and entitles the wearer to the the care and protection of the order. The exercises of the evening were enlivened by two solos from Mr. N. H. Gilbert "The Lost Chord" and "Thy Sentinel am I." Prof. Jones also gave a piano solo "Fanthsia on Playel's Hymn" and Mrs. Pratt and Mr. Gilbert sang the duett "See the Pale Moon."

After the installation exercises Col. T. B. White of Oswego made a short and eloquent address in regard to the Masonic Order and its objects and purposes.

The following is the list of officers installed: Dr. D. Pardee, M. E. H. P.; Dr. J. Watson, E. K.; J. H. Merton, E. S.; C. R. Nichols, C. of H.; S. Parmalee, P. S.; J. M. Campbell, R. A. C.; G. A. Berzee, M. of 3. V.; L. J. Parker, M. of 2. V.; D. T. Morfa, M. of 1. V.; R. E. Phillips, Treasurer; T. Ferris, Secretary; C. D. Branch, Tyler.

Two Indictments For Murder.

The grand jury at Oswego has indicted Warren E. Carpenter of Sandy Creek for murder. It will be remembered that Carpenter's wife was found dead in a tub of water at three o'clock on the morning of December 3d, by Mr. Carpenter and his son Charles. A coroner's jury rendered a verdict of accidental drowning. Afterwards, at the solicitation of Mrs. Carpenter's friends, the body was taken up and an autopsy and a second inquest ordered. Wounds were found on the head and other portions of the body. At this inquest the jury found that the woman came to her death from blows inflicted by some person to them unknown. Carpenter was arrested at his home Thursday night and taken to Pulaski jail. Friday morning he was taken to Oswego. His counsel, D. Ainsworth, is in Rochester, and he will not be arraigned until his arrival. Judge Huntington has been engaged to assist in the defense. The grand jury also found an indictment for murder against Mrs. Kate Meyer of Phoenix, who is charged with administering poison to her husband on New Year's day. A commission has been appointed to examine Mrs. Myer and to decide whether or not she is insane.

OBITUARY.

Mary, wife of John E. Dutton died Jan. 24th, at the advanced age of 87 years. She was born March 20, 1798, in Alsted, N. H., was a teacher for a number of years at Cooperstown and Gilbertsville, Otsego county, and for eight years afterwards in Norwich, N. Y.; was married October 1st, 1839 and came to Fulton, remaining here for nearly forty years. At the time of her death she lived at [illegible], N. Y. An indictment for criminal libel has been found against I. G. Jenkins, a failing business man of Oswego. Jenkins published articles relating to the grain margin business of Pratt & Co. He published a letter in the Palladium Saturday night saying that some years ago he was nearly ruined by margin gambling and vowed to warn all young men against its temptations.

The Sandy Creek News says: The snow that has fallen during the week will enable the Littlejohn lumber company to bring the large quantities of lumber and pulp timber, which lay at Smartville, to the railroad. The pulp timber goes to the pulp works at Fulton. About eighty men are engaged by the lumber company at their mill in Redfield where they are producing 15,000 feet of lumber per day.

Mr. C. E. Russ, jr. of Palermo, a cousin of Supervisor Russ of this village, has been having considerable trouble of late, One night last week one of his horses was stolen but on the following day it returned of its own accord. The next night some persons cut the tail from a valuable colt belonging to Mr. Russ, and then proceeded to set fire to the barn and also to an unoccupied house adjoining. The fires were extinguished with considerable difficulty. There is no clue to to the perpetrators and Mr. Russ cannot imagine why he is thus persecuted.—[Phœnix Register.

Mr. D. Styles, of Fulton, in response to the desire of many of his friends, has finally consented to open a class for painting in this city. We understand that it is his intention to confine his instruction to students who have obtained some proficiency in the art. Among those who have already joined his class are Mrs. Frank Beard, Miss P. B. Smith, Mrs. Alexander McLean and Mr. Cahill. Mr. Styles has written that he will meet his pupils, for the first time, at Miss Smith's studio in the Wieting Block, to-morrow afternoon. His influence will be a beneficial one, if his work continues here any length of time, and he is welcome.—[Syracuse Sunday Times.

Resignation of Miss Royce.

Miss Hattie T. Royce who has been for nearly ten years a teacher in the Academic department of School No. 2, has secured a position as teacher in Chicago. Miss Royce has been a very popular and successful teacher and the news of her resignation was received with the deepest regret by both teachers and pupils. On Friday afternoon, in place of the closing recitation, an interesting exercise took place. The students being assembled in the chapel, a member of the graduating class presented her in behalf of the school with several handsome volumes. [illegible] Woman.

[illegible] of Oswego, [illegible] of whose divorce from his wife was made a few days ago, in hunting for evidence against her, found her in a house in Auburn. The papers in the divorce case were served on her. She said she was not the person named in the papers after she had read them, and acting on the advice of friends paid no attention to the matter. She is now out with a statement that she can not be the woman. She is only nineteen years old, while the woman who was Stevens' wife is twenty-six. She was married in Ithaca, but to Charles Brown and not to Charles Barnett. A cousin of Mrs. Stevens, who was shown a picture of Nina Brown, while testifying at the trial of the divorce case, swore that it was a picture of the woman who was married to Stevens. An uncle of Steven's wife would not be positive that the picture was of his niece, but Stephens himself swore that it was a photograph of the woman he had married. On this testimony the divorce was granted. Now, however, it has been proved beyond any doubt that Nina Brown is not Mrs. Stevens and never was Mrs. Davy, Mrs. Bennett or Lida Fanny Creque, and Beecher Stevens has been divorced from the wrong woman.—[Utica Herald.

Oswego Falls C. L. S. C.

At the last meeting of Oswego Falls C. L. S. C. Friday evening Jan. 23d. Mr. J. Williams of Akron Ohio, rendered an admirable paper on mental growth. The gentleman is keenly alive to his subject, and treats it with very great earnestness. His life has been devoted to educational subjects, and he is well able to interest and arouse others. A keen stimulant was given to those present, and a bright and true way to a noble and earnest life was clearly pointed out. Following this paper was an essay on Pericles by Mrs. Swan, also one on Alexander by Miss. Alice Schenck, Next meeting will occur Wednesday evening, Jan. 29th. at Mrs. H. Schencks.

Polo Clubs.

Two Polo clubs handsomely uniformed have been organized in this village. The clubs are named "The Fulton Roller Polo Club" and "The reserves." The first named club is made up of the following gentlemen: John Hadcock, Capt.; C. Mace, F. Willard, J. Appeit, H. Collins, T. D. Lewis. The members of the Reserves are: E. C. Fralick, Capt.; W. Ayles, C. Willard, H. C. Markham, L. C. Foster, G. W. Hoff. The first match between these clubs was played at the rink Thursday evening last and was won by the reserves. To-morrow evening the second match will occur and as the defeated club is bound to redeem its reputation an interesting game may be expected. The boys make a fine appearance in their new suits.

Will Shut Down.

The (Cleveland) Lakeside Press of Saturday says: Information reaches us that the American Glass Works at Bernhard's Bay will stop operations next Wednesday. The proprietors have been unable to find a market for their product at remunerative prices. The market appears to be overstocked, and prices are badly cut. The manager states that in answer to requests to quote prices on glass, he would give the very lowest rate that it could possibly stand, only to be answered: "We can do better." And in view of this condition of affairs, they have concluded to cease manufacturing for the present.

A Large Audience.

It was a large audience that gather at the City Opera House Saturday evening to greet Beedle & Prindle's Pleasure Party. The entertainment was pleasing throughout and the audience was almost continually convulsed with laughter. Johnny Prindle, like wine, grows better with age, for never did he appear to better advantage before a Plattsburg audience, being if possible funnier than ever before. The other features of the entertainment are fully up to the standard, especially the cornet solo by Mr. Snow.—[Plattsburg, N. Y. Morning Telegram, Nov. 24, 1884.

Cricketers to Assemble.

A reunion of cricketers will take place on Monday, February 9, at C. H. Millward's in this city. This will probably be the largest gathering of past and present wielders of the willow ever held in Syracuse. As the game on this occasion will be played with knives and forks, the old 'uns are fully expected to come out ahead. In addition to all local players, invitations have been sent to Oswego, Oswego Falls, Utica, Ilion and Rochester, in all of which towns clubs are expected to be organized for the coming season.—[Standard.

I have engaged the the well know Beedle & Prindle Pleasure party to give two of their laughable and very enjoyable entertainment at the Opera House, Thursday and Friday evenings, December 29, and 30. They consented to reduce their price from 50 and 75 cents down to 25 gallery; reserve seats 35 cents. With this attraction and at these low prices the house should be packed. The barn of J. H. Loomis who resides south of the village, was burned last Thursday night, as well as most of its contents. It looks very much as though the work was that of an incendiary, as a horse and two cows, in the stable were turned loose. Mr. Loomis with several neighbors discoved fresh foot tracks about the barn and traced them as far as the village. The insurance on the barn and contents was $600.

Mr. J. C. Anderson, G. P. agent of the New York, Ontario & W. & Walkill Valley R R. is collecting advertising matter etc., for the reissuing of their Summer Home book for the season of 1885. The book this season will be far superior to any heretofore published. First-class artists are under contract to illustrate some of the "Up the Midland" views and will make the publication more of a work of art than an advertising medium. Those contemplating taking summer boarders during the summer should apply to Mr. Anderson at once for the necessary blanks for filling in their notices. This book has a circulation of over thirty thousand. It is distributed with the best people in New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Zion Church.

For the benefit of the communicants and friends of Zion church we publish the following letter, received this morning by Richard Carr, clerk of the vestry, which sufficiently explains itself.

CHITTENANGO, N. Y., Jan. 27, '85.
To Mr. Richard Carr.
Dear Sir:

Your letter acknowledging the mind of the vestry of Zion church to call me as its minister, duly rec'd and contents carefully noted.

Having received the permission of my Diocesan, I will accept the call and, God willing, will begin my labors among you as minister in charge on Sexagesima Sunday, Feb. 8th. With the prayer that, "in all our works begun, continued and ended in God, we may glorify His holy name." I remain Yours very truly in the Catholic faith,

HORACE B. GOODYEAR.

Night Train.

The night express, No. 5 on the New York, Ontario & Western railway is equipped with the latest improved Pullman palace sleeping cars and elegant day coaches making up as fine a train as any line running through the State. This company have recently placed on sale at their principal stations, a full line of tickets to Western and South-Western points and at the lowest cut rates.

This train connects at Oneida Castle with the West Shore & Buffalo express, west and also run coaches through to Suspension Bridge via Oswego and the Lake Shore Division of the R. W. & O. R. R. connecting at that point with the Grand Trunk Road at one o'clock p. m., arriving at Chicago the next morning at 8 o'clock. People who are contemplating going West will be glad to learn the O. & W. are competing for Western business and should call on their agent, Mr. E. B. Johnson, at Fulton, for lowest rates.

[illegible] spread to the two story brick building east, which was owned by [illegible] of Toledo, Ohio, and occupied by Sheridan Bros. & Co., as a hardware store. In a short time both buildings were in ruins. As the firemen were about to ascend a ladder to the roof of Wright's store, a quantity of powder exploded in the cellar, shattering the glass fronts and breaking the pavement on which the ladder was resting letting it through to the cellar. The firemen narrowly escaping. The fire next spread to the building owned by E. B. Collins, and occupied by him as a shoe store, by Steele as a saloon and billiard parlor and by Chas. H. David as a law office. The private hose belonging to the mills of Gardner & Seymour, G. W. Gage & Co., and W. B. Nelson now lent their aid to stay the flames. Many citizens who had turned out were busy removing the goods from Collin's store, also the furniture from the dental rooms of Dr. I. C. Curtis on the second floor of the post office block and from the rooms of Dr. Lee and Craine's barber shop on the same floor. The mail and contents of the postoffice were packed and removed, as well as the stock of goods in Mrs. Ney's news room. The building for some time seemed to be in great danger. Many books and valuables were removed from the First National Banking rooms adjoining the post office and placed in Bacon's store for safe keeping. The two story wooden structure east of Wright's handsome store, owned by D. W. Gardner and occupied by D. C. Draper as a grocery, was slightly damaged by water. Collin's store, though not wholly destroyed, was badly damaged by fire and water.

The damage to the post office block by water is quite extensive. The hard work of our gallant firemen is all that saved the entire block from being a prey to the flames, It was nearly 10 a. m. before the fire was fully extinguished. The wind during the afternoon revived the fire that was smouldering in the ruins, and the company was obliged to turn out again. The mercury during the morning stood five degrees below zero. The standing walls are enveloped in ice and present a polar appearance. The total loss is estimated at $40,000. As near as we can get at the facts at present, the losses are as follows:

Sheridan Bros. & Co., hardware stock. Loss, $12,000, Insured for $9,000 in the the followigg companies: Royal $2,000; North American, $2,000; Home $1,000; Imperial of London, $2,000; Fire Association, $1,600. With agency of H. E. Nichols and C. W. Streeter.

Schuyler Schenck, on building $5,500. Insured in Toledo, Ohio.

J. J. Wright, loss on stock, $5,000, insured for $3,800 in the following companies: Hamburg Breamen, $1,500; Niagara, of New York, $1,800. Insured with Streeter.

H. C. Beales, Loss on photograph gallery, $3,000. Insured for $1,500 in Ætna of Hartford, with agency of C. W. Streeter.

E. B. Collins, loss on building $3,000, damage to stock $1,000, Insured on stock in Springfield, Mass., $2,000, on building, $3,500 in the Continatal, and $1,500 in the Hanover, with agency of

C. H. David, damaged by fire and water $300. No insurance.

C. H. David.

D. C. Draper, damaged by water, $500. Covered by insurance.

Steel's billiard room, damaged by fire and water, $100.

J. J. Stephens, loss on building $5,500, Insured for $1,000. Also damage by fire and water, on post office building $1,000. Insured.

Dr. C. M. Lee, damage by breakage $50. No insurance.

Dr. I. C. Curtis, damage by water and breakage $25. Insured.

W. M. Craine, by water and breakage $20. No insurance.

A. K. Ney, by water $100. Insured.

Mrs. John Barry's dwelling house in rear of Sheridan's store was badly damaged by fire and water. Loss unknown. The Burden house was also damaged.

The origin of the fire is unknown. We are unable to learn as yet the disposition of the losses as to their plan for the future.

Fire Notes.

Considerable surprise and indignation was manifested when it was learned that No. 2 steamer was disabled at the beginning of the fire and some one was so uncharitable as to remark "No. 2 was first rate at annual review and trial of distance thrown, but when a fire occurred it was always lame or disabled." In this case it was claimed that the water pipe was frozen up and the engineer could not readily get it thawed out beside it was a pretty "cold day" for him anyway.

THE HILL FORCE PUMPS.

Our citizens again had an opportunity of realizing the value of the several streams which came from Gage's, Nelson's, Gardner & Seymour's mills and Taylor Bro's knife factory, for without the aid of these the flames on this frightfully wintry night must have spread far and wide.

[illegible]

[illegible] Quite a number [illegible] exposed from their hands and ears. Chief Gilbert finds both ears badly frozen. It was fortunate no accident occurred for such a night.

COLLINS YACHT RUINED.

After the fire seemed nearly spent, the high winds fanned it to a blaze and the roof over Collins' store fell in breaking in two and completely ruining the handsome yacht Herm Collins has been for some years building.

FOR REPAIRS.

Steamer No. 2 will be sent to Oswego to-morrow for repairs.

THANKS.

Sheridan Brothers & Co. return thanks to the fire department and others who so faithfully worked to save their property.

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other
In blackness of heart—that we war to the knife?
God pity us all in our pitiful strife.

God pity us all as we jostle each other;
God pardon us all for the triumphs we feel
When a fellow goes down 'neath his load on the heather,
Pierced to the heart; words are keener than steel,
And mightier far for woe or for weal.

Were it not well in this brief little journey
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Ere folding the hands to be and abide
Forever and aye in dust at his side?

Look at the roses saluting each other;
Look at the herds all at peace on the plain.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow-soldier down in the dust?
God pity us all! Time oft soon will tumble
All of us together, like leaves in a gust,
Humbled, indeed, down into the dust.

Wanted—A Little Girl.

Where have they gone to, the little girls
With natural manners and natural curls;
Who love their dollies, and like their toys,
And talk of something besides the boys?

Little old women in plenty I find,
Mature in manners, and old in mind;
Little old flirts, who talk of their "beaux,"
And vie with each other in stylish clothes.

Little old belles, who, at nine and ten,
Are sick of pleasure and tired of men,
Weary of travel, of balls, of fun,
And find no new thing under the sun.

Once, in the beautiful long ago,
Some dear little children I used to know,—
Girls who were merry as lambs at play,
And laughed and rollicked the livelong day.

They thought not at all of the "style" of their clothes,
They never imagined that boys were "beaux"—
"Other girls' brothers" and "mates" were they;
Splendid fellows to help them play.

Where have they gone to? If you see
One of them anywhere, send her to me.
I would give a medal of purest gold
To one of those dear little girls of old,
With an innocent heart and an open smile,
Who knows not the meaning of "flirt" or "style."

LOVE OR MONEY.

F. P. PENNINGTON.

John Wharton, the young country school master, with open book in hand, thoughts absorbed in the contents of its pages, and his head bowed low, was walking slowly along the narrow path that led in the direction of the quaint little log school house, which stood half embowered in bright green leaves and fragrant creeping vines just at the edge of a grand old oak forest. It was one of those balmy, delightfully invigorating mornings in early summer, the soft air redolent with the rich perfume of flowers, and golden shafts of cheerful sunlight penetrating every nook and corner. The birds caroled their sweetest songs in the leafy boughs of the trees, and even the tiny brook gurgled along gleefully, as it wound itself like a thread of silver under the rustic bridge, and flowed in his sinuous course through verdant meadows and grassy dells. But John, intent on mentally solving a perplexing mathematical problem, was utterly oblivious to his surroundings—even all these living, glorious, attributes of Nature which encouraged him, failed to awaken him to a realization of their presence. On, on he went, and not until a soft, delicate hand was laid gently upon his shoulder, and a sweet, musical voice called out to him, did he start suddenly and raise his eyes from his book.

"O,—good—gracious! I'm—nearly—out—of—breath! I—called—ever—so—loud! Didn't—you—hear—me—John?"

"Why, bless me, Bertie, is it you?" he said, turning around, observing a girlish figure, her face all aglow with smiles, and one hand placed instinctly upon her heart to quiet its quickened pulsation, engendering by an undue effort to reach his side. "Call, did you say? Why, no I did not hear you."

"No, of course not. How could you hear any one with your head almost burried in that whole arithmetic?" she said, reproachfully. "I always did abhor mathematics," she continued, emphasizing her remark with a vigorous stamp of her foot.

"Our situation's are different, Bertie. You see, I cannot escape it. If I am not proficient myself I certainly cannot expect my pupils to be perfect," he answered, philosophically. "Besides," he went on, constant application to study is necessary to meet the requirements of the directors and retain my position. And then, too, I'm building a house, and must have money to go on with the work."

Bertie placed a hand on his arm as they walked along, and raised her blue eyes to his.

Building a house," in a tone of surprise. "And pray for whom are you building it?"

"Why, for—for—"

And John's face crimsoned.

"O, yes," Bertie interrupted, "I recall a conversation I had with Sallie Atkins, who mentioned that you were building a house for your mother. You are a dutiful son, John, very."

"Don't tease me, Bertie," answered John, seriously. "Miss Atkins misinformed you. It's for—for—"

And John put out his arm to encircle her waist, but Bertie, her face suffused with blushes, anticipated his action, and with a merry laugh and a coquettish wave of her hand, bounded away from his side and darted down the path.

"Well," soliloquized John, when he recovered from his astonishment at being [illegible] unceremoniously deserted, "she's [illegible] little [illegible] but [illegible]"

[illegible] by the wayside, [illegible] where the [illegible] and [illegible] oak leaves [illegible] from the sun, she [illegible] and began weaving a garland [illegible] her flowers.

"I'm real mean for teasing poor John in such a manner," she soliloquized, "I'm sure he wouldn't serve me so. I cannot see why Aunt Helen should be so embittered against him. I'm sure I—I—" And here she paused, and putting her hand over her mouth as if to smother her words continued, "but I'll not say it. Now let me see," she mused, as she held up the wreath admiringly before her, "I think it is handsome; I'll put this bit of ivy just where it will show off prominently when he gets it. I wonder if he will comprehend its significance. O, what a strange thing love is, indeed. I'm sure—"

With Blanched features she started to her feet and gave utterance to a scream that re-echoed through the silent forest, and fell forward on her face.

When she returned to consciousness a strange gentleman was kneeling beside her, bathing her temple in cold spring water.

"You feel better now, miss?" he said, as he observed her open her eyes and gaze languidly about her.

"Yes, thank you," she replied, sitting upright. "Is the horrid thing killed?" she asked, a shiver passing through her frame.

"Yes; see." And the gentleman held the lifeless bulk of a hideous blacksnake up on the end of his cane.

Bertie turned her gaze from it with a shudder.

"I was fishing," he began, "down in the creek when I was startled by your scream, and hastened to your assistance, to find that loathsome serpent disengaging itself from the folds of your dress and I quickly dispatched it. It was a fortunate escape, miss, very."

"I owe the preservation of my life to you, sir. I am under many obligations to you, and I'm sure Aunt Helen will thank you ever so much," said Bertie, as picking up her hat and wreath, she prepared to go home.

"It affords me the profoundest pleasure to know that you escaped the poisoned fangs of that hideous reptile. This fact alone, miss, is abundant cause for congratulation on my part."

Bertie was now nomally herself again and as the two walked along she silently surveyed her strange escorts, found under such peculiar circumstances, and once or twice as their eyes met she felt her heart flutter and a strange sensation premeated her.

Thomas Admore, as he called himself, was the embodyment of vigorous manhood. Tall, well proportioned physically, with large, expansive eyes and heavy, silken jet black moustache to match his luxurious curls, he was a man of commanding presents. And, also, he was intelligent, polite, in fact he possessed all tne elements that contribute to make a polished gentleman. He was a man of leasure, who had come from Boston for a few weeks' recreation and rest in the country. Bertie had heard a great deal about him through his companions, and now she had met him—and village girls looked and wondered as they saw them walking along together through the streets that morning.

They were seated at the little sewing table in the cozy sitting room, Aunt Helen and Bertie, the one knitting stockings and the nimble fingers of the other marking out embroidery.

"Why, do you know Bertha Seymour," said Aunt Helen, excitedly, laying down her knitting and looking straight at Bertha, "do you know that stupid, awkard John Warton, is the butt of ridicule for the whole village, while Mr. Admore———"

"Invidious comparisons are not necessary aunt," interrupted Bertie, quietly "they never decrease my respect for John nor agugment my admiration of Mr. Admore."

"You must admit however, that Mr. Admore is superior to John Warton," persisted Aunt Helen.

"I confess his superiority intellectually. Morally that characteristic is yet to be determined."

Aunt Helen changed her tactics. Not one disparaging word against John could she force from Bertie. She rested uneasily in her chair. There was evidently some delicate subject she desired to communicate to Bertie.

"Well, well, young girls are never invested with common sense until it come to them through stern practical experience," she at length ventured to suggest.

"That is the reason, I presume, you made so many mistakes in your early life," retorted Bertie.

Aunt Helen's face flushed as she answered:

"Maybe so: perhaps if I had listened to wiser heads———"

A knock at the door abruptly determinated the conversation. Aunt Helen arose to admit Mr. Admore.

* * * * * * *

They were strolling along, arm in arm, Bertie and Mr. Admore.

"Yes, Mr. Admore, I'll promise to be your friend," said Bertie, placing her head in his.

"How strangely coincident with the ivy in the wreath you gave me our romantic meeting," answered Mr. Admore. "I've proved my fidelity by giving up all for you. I have wealth, character, and yet there is a void in my heart which must be filled to complete my happiness."

"And how may that void be filled?" Bertie [illegible] looking demurely off into the [illegible]

[illegible] Bertie [illegible]

[illegible] "Say [illegible] we discard the [illegible] ivy—friendship [illegible] age?"

"No, no! I cannot [illegible] matter of so serious a nature. I [illegible] again time for reflection."

For a while Mr. Admore stood in profound meditation. At last he broke up saying:

"I grant you time, Bertie. [illegible] meet again let me hope I shall be made happy by claiming you as my wife."

* * * * * * *

A drowsy afternoon in August. John Warton, during his leisure hours (for school had closed for the summer,) often wandered off to the old, deserted mill. Here we find him on this particular afternoon hidden away behind the silent and decayed mill wheel, his feet dangling in the waters and a book opened out on his lap.

Suddenly he was startled by tramping feet and voices above him. He listened.

"Well," said the first speaker, "the prospect, you say is good."

"Of course. Why, a more simple set of people I never associated with. As to the old bank, why its going to be the easiest job we ever took. It's a mighty delicious nut to crack. I have studied it thoroughly, and know just how to get in and out."

"The sooner the better. I am terribly short of funds, Lee.

And he turned his pockets inside out to give emphsis to the truth of his statement.

The other laughed.

"Suppose we make the attempt tonight," suggested the first speaker.

I accepted the proposition. Suspicion will never attach to me. We will not leave the town for two or three weeks after the job is done; that will throw the simple fools off the scent.

John Warton heard no more of the arrangements, so the two men moved off, but as soon as he had satisfied himself that he could get away unobserved, he ran swifty toward the village and, ran going to the bank, communicated what he had heard to the preisdent.

"Will they? Well, we'll see about that," answered that official, as John finished his narative.

* * * * * * * * *

"Up and at them boys!" came the command.

And before the two burglars could recover their surprise they were bound tightly and the gleaming barrels of four formidable revolvers were pointed menacingly at them. The lights were turned up, and four men started back in astonishment.

The taller and handsomer of the burglars was—Thomas Admore!

Daylight found the whole village in a furore of excitement.

"Misses Helen, Misses Helen!" exclaimed one of the servants, rushing excidedly upstairs and pounding vigorously on that lady's door, "de bank has been robbed an' Massa John Walton he done help to grob one of the robbers, an' it's Massa Admore."

This startling announcement brougt Aunt Helen out of bed in a single bound and she made the servant repeat the news slowly over to her. She threw up her hands in astonishment.

Bertie received the news quietly.

"Young people are never invested with common sense until it comes to them through stern, practical experience."

There was a tinge of sarcasm in her speech that cut deeply to the heart of Aunt Helen. She threw her arms about the neck of her niece and silently wept.

And as Thomas Admore sat in his gloomy prison cell, he heard the joyous wedding bells calling the people to witness the celebration of the neptials of John and Bertie, who retired to the furnished house with the blessing of Aunt Helen and the congratulations of the whole village.—[Philadelphia Call.

Alden's Juvenile Gem.

A large extra sheet containing a number of fine illustrations accompanies number Two of this juvenile weekly. Grown folks as well as young folks will find a good deal of amusement as well as wisdom in the "Fables" which the pictures charmingly illustrate, and in the contents of the paper generally. The large beautiful type in which the paper is printed and the form and size of page make the whole appearance delightful to the eye. There is abundant variety of story, anecdote, history, facts in nature and science, biography, and poetry, and all so invigorating and healthful in tone that parents and teachers will give the paper hearty welcome into homes and schools. The price, 75 cents a year, with large inducements to clubs, places it easily within reach of every home—and surely there ought to be such a paper in every home where there are children. A specimen copy is sent free to any applicant. John B. Alden, Publisher, [illegible] Pearl Street, New York.

[illegible]

[illegible] 7:30 on the morning of the [illegible] of December, but as it was desirable the excursion trains to be [illegible] it was 9 o'clock before we finally began our journey.

The excursionists consisted chiefly of teachers, over half of whom were ladies. Soon after we started a "census" was taken which showed that there were [illegible] persons on the train, representing nearly every state and territory in the Union. All had come to enjoy themselves, and a jollier crowd would be hard to find.

For the first mile or two the road lay near the Mississippi River, and we had an excellent opportunity to see the famous New Orleans levee, and the enormous shipping interests of the city. Vessels of all kinds from the man-of-war and gigantic ocean steamers, down to the oyster boats, and tugs, could be seen. Along the levee every available space was occuped, and in many cases vessels were moored three or four abreast.

The stevedores, who were mostly negroes, moved with a lazy deliberation which would be maddening to a northern merchant, but as all the people here are languid, no fault was found. The levee, which in many places is several hundred feet wide was nearly covered with the various articles of commerce. Here were huge piles of of cotton bales ready for shipment, each bale weighing about 600 pounds; there a cargo of sugar and molasses just unloaded from the transports, while on the smaller docks were piles of oysters, fresh from the Gulf of Mexico, and wagon loads of oranges, raised just across the river.

Leaving this busy scene, our train passed through some of the principal suberbs of the city, and then leaving the city behind, we rode for miles through swamps of wild rice and cane brake with here and there a cypress or live oak, with its funeral drapery of Spanish moss. Whenever the train stopped the crowd of "relic hunters" would rush out and pick anything green which they could find, and soon the interior of the cars was hung with an assortment of palmetto leaves, cane brakes, live oak boughs, golden rod, and Spanish moss.

We reached Mobile at 2 p. m., and were given an hour to visit the city. My friends and I had the good fortune to meet a reporter who, in return for the information which we gave him of the excursion, became our guide through the city.

Like New Orleans, the main streets are extremely wide (from 100 to 200 feet,) while the side streets are scarcely wide enough for two carriages to pass abreast. As we walked up town from the depot, the first building which attracted our attention was the city hall. It has a dilapidated appearance, owing to the plaster which originally covered the exterior, falling off in large patches, and showing the brick beneath. A little further on we passed through a park shaded with magnolias and live oaks, and having in the centre a handsome fountain.

The churches of Mobile are all old, but the ivy-covered Jesuit cathedral is particularly worthy of note. Like many similar edifices it was not all built at once, having been commenced at the close of the last century, and scarcely finished even yet. The exterior shows the different deposits of brick very plainly, and looks very dingy and old, but on passing through the broad, pillared porch, however, we found the interior to be really beautiful, as the decorations are chiefly handsomely carved marble pillars, and statues.

The public schools, which accomodates 2,200 pupils, were next visited. The rooms are very different from those of our Northern schools. They are very large, the ceiling is low, and in some cases have seats for 200 pupils. Several teachers hear recitations at the same time in different parts of the room.

On our return to the train we passed many handsome residences [illegible] in [illegible] whitewashed house to the modern Queen Anne [illegible] however [illegible] of the Southern [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Davis' son who was killed at Vicksburg during the war, we started for the [illegible]

The [illegible] returned laden down with the inevitable "relics." Two men came carrying a large log covered with [illegible] which they had found on the beach, and many had brought specimens of sand which were common in the yard, one man remarking that the only things missing were a piece of Jeff's petticoat, and a branch of the original "sour apple tree" with which the name of Jeff. Davis is so frequently connected.

Soon after six o'clock we reached Pass Christian, where we were to take supper. This village is situated on the gulf, at the mouth of the Bay of St. Louis, and nature and art combined have made it one of the most noted watering places in the South. There are several hotels, the largest of which is called "The Mexican Gulf Hotel". The bathing facilities are unusually good, as the beach of smooth, white sand slopes very gradually for several hundred yards. Before the hotel mentioned above, a long pier extends out into the gulf, and at the outer end is a large, covered pavilion, thus forming a delightful promenade during the hot days of summer.

Along the edge of the beach extends one of the famous southern shell roads, the surface being made entirely of small shells. On either side is a row of magnificent live oakes, where widespread branches in many cases meet and form a complete arch over the road. On the north side of the road are many fine, summer residences, each having a nicely kept yard, and having its own private pier, which stretched out like a huge black arm, and finally disappeared in the moonlit waters of the Gulf.

The night itself was perfect. The air was as warm as in June. The moon was full, and seen through the slight haze appeared like a disk of moulten silver. In the hotel some of the company had organized an informal dance, and mingled with the music of the waltz came the frequent snatches of song from the excursionists who were enjoying the hammocks hung up under the live oakes, or were promenading upon the piers, or along the beautiful avenue.

We were reminded that "Time, and trains wait for no man," by the shrill whistle of our locomotive, so taking a last look at the glittering waters of the Gulf, we left Pass Christian lying quietly in the moonlight, and were soon rushing towards New Orleans, arriving there shortly after midnight, tired, but well satisfied with our days journey.

HARD TO BELIEVE

It is hard to believe that a man was cured of a Kidney disease after his body was swollen as big as a barrel and he had been given up as incurable and lay at death's door. Yet such a cure was accomplished by Kidney-Wort in the person of M. M. Devereaux of Ionia, Mich., who says: "After thirteen of the best doctors in Detroit had given me up, I was cured by Kidney-Wort. I want every one to know what a boon it is.

Gentlemen's trousers are now cut very much the shape of workingmen's overalls, straight up and down. There is about as much style and elegance to the prevailing fashion as there is in a stick of pine wood in its native State.—[[illegible] Observer.]

[illegible] 200 pounds in his prime. He wore number 11 shoes, and had [illegible] as large as the [illegible]. His hands were so large that they were a curiosity, and his whole frame was bony and large jointed. He had a broad chest but not a full one. [illegible] and he was troubled in his last days with a cough. His mouth was firm and his lower jaw gritted the upper with a determined grip. In later years he lost his teeth, and the false ones he got did not fit well and pushed out his lower lip. He had eyes of cold light, gray, which could look stern and angry upon occasion, and which seldom smiled. He was as wide at the hips as at the shoulders, and kept his straightness to the last. He had large legs and was a good rider and runner. You have heard stories of his wonderful length of arm and how he threw stones wide distances. His nose was rather thick and coarse. He was rather fastidious as to his dress, though he wore plain clothes when not on military duty. He always shaved himself, but had a servant to comb and tie his hair every morning. I have heard Mr. Custis say that he rose early at Mount Vernon, often before daybreak, and as early as 4 a. m. He would, at sunrise, go to his stables and look at his blooded horses. When he came back he had a light breakfast of corn cakes, honey and tea, or something of that sort, and then he ate nothing more until dinner. I am speaking of his later years. After breakfast he rode over his estate, and at three had returned and was dressed for dinner. Dinner was a big meal at Mount Vernon, and Washington ate nothing after it. He usually drank five glasses of Maderia wine at desert, but I have never heard of his being drunk. He was not opposed to a moderate use of liquor, and when he was first elected to the house of burgesses of Virginia, among the items of his election expenses were a hogshead and a barrel of whisky, thirty five gallons of wine and forty three gallons of beer. In the Virginia house he did not cut a great figure. He was not much of a speaker, but he was popular, or he could not have held his place for fifteen years as he did. I have understood that he treated his slaves very well, but that he made them work and would allow no foolishness among them. Washington liked the theater, and he was fond of dancing in his early life."

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently proceeded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose that he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomash, etc. A moisture like prespiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a mommon attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching, and affecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address The Dr. Bosonko Medicine Co., Piqua, O. Told by M. M. Williams. 29tf

Four girls were married out of the Treasury Department in one week since the election. They may fondly imagine that they are preparing for a rainy day and have escaped the Democratic grand bounce; but it is safe to wager that they will never again handle so much money.—[Norristown Herald.

TRY IT YOURSELF.

The proof of the pudding is not in chewing the string, but in having an opportunity to try the article yourself. M. M. Williams, the druggist, has a free trial bottle of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup for each one who is afflicted with coughs, colds, consumption or any lung affection. eow

A bright wife whose husband had contracted a club fever hit upon a brilliant scheme recently. She procured a partly worn gentleman's glove and left it on the parlor sofa when she retired, after sitting up until 12 o'clock for her derelect lord. He does not go out in the evenings now.

NINE PHYSICIANS OUTDONE.

Mrs. Helen Harviz, No. 331 Dayton St. Chicago, Ill., is now in her sixty-etghth year, and states that she has suffered with consumption for about ten years, was treated by nine physicians, all of all of them pronouncing her case hopeless. Seven bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption cured her. Doubting ones, drop her a postal and satisfy yourselves. Call at R. E. Phillips drug store and get a free trial bottle.

THE outlook for another postage reduction is very promising. An effort is being made to have letters and letter packages go for two cents an ounce, instead of half an ounce as now, and newspapers to be taxed a cent a pound from the publication office.

MRS. GRANT has finally consented to Mr. Vanderbilt's proposition to secure to the Government the perpetual possession of General Grant's war relics and souvenirs of his journey around the world. Mrs. Grant has been appointed trustee of the relics and will hold them until her husband's death.

THERE was a general dissolution of membership of "The Darcy Comedy Troupe," in Syracuse last Friday evening. The leading actors of the company indulged in a general fight behind the curtains at the end of the first act. No matinee or evening performance was given Saturday as was advertised and it looked as though the company was hopelessly stranded.

IN response to invitations extended by Mr. Cleveland, Vice-President elect Hendricks and Speaker Carlisle of Kentucky, visited him at his residence in Albany the later part of last week, for the purpose of discussing matters of party policy and the incoming administration. It is believed they talked freely with reference to the new cabinet. This was Mr. Carlisle's first meeting with President Cleveland. He says: "It was the first time I had every met him and I was forcibly impressed with him. He is a man of force, conviction, and of strong common sense."

WILLIAM M. EVARTS fell in love with his wife when she was 16, and he a green boy at college. She was the daughter of Treasurer Wardner of Vermont, and was as pretty as young Evarts was homely. They became engaged at her home in Vermont and Evarts went away to New York, promising to return when he had made enough to warrant his marrying. At 25 he had made a name for himself as a lawyer, and was a member of one of the chief New York law firms, of one making, it is said, a total of $60,000 a year. At this time he married, and his wife, after bearing him 13 children, is still well and happy.

SENATOR OTIS has again introduced into the legislature his bill of last winter prohibiting private bankers from using on their signs and bill heads the word "bank," which apparently gives them corporate character. The bill is favored by the Bank Department, and Attorney General O'Brien has examined it and pronounces it constitutional. It is claimed that innocent depositors are liable to suffer loss, as they did in the failure of the Patchouge bank last year, through confidence in a private firm believeing it to be a corporation, subject to all the laws governing banks. The bill applies to institutions like the Bank of Antwerp, Jefferson county, the Bank of Castile, of Wyoming, the Bank of Delhi, of Delaware, the Bank of DeRuyter, of Madison, the Brewster's bank, of Hannibal, Oswego county, the Central bank, of Oneida, of Madison county, the Chemung Canal bank, of Elmira, the Farmers' & Merchants' bank of Watkins, the Farmers' Exchange bank, of Cleveland, Oswego county, the Hamilton bank, of Clyde; the Herkimer bank, the Juleamee bank, of Greene, Clienango county, and in all about 100 similar private banking institutions.

The Schenectady Hollow Ware and Stove Works are to be moved to Freeville, Tompkins county. A brick building 155 feet long is to be erected for their accommodation and about 100 men will be employed.

At 2 o'clock this morning a fire occurred at Geddes, which destroyed the Spaulding block, the Pharis block and a one story building occupied by Shumway. The total loss was about $15,000, which was partially covered by insurance.

At the semi annual meeting of the Union college trustees Thursday, the finance committee reported the financial condition of the college was better than it had been for some time. A proposition was made by Judge Landon, acting president, to issue guaranteed bonds to cover all liabilities. No definite action was taken.

The village of Angola was threatened with destruction by fire Thursday night, but by prompt action the flames were confined to the hardware store of W. H. Ryneck and two adjoining stores. A lamp that upset started the fire. Loss, $8,800. William Thompson, aged 66, became greatly excited and dropped dead.

Over a thousand feet of bank of the Erie canal in Buffalo have been carried away by recent storms, which sent the Niagara river waters over the harbor wall. The break is a serious one, for the wind and water carried the stone work and earth into the canal, which will have to be removed by dredging as soon as the ice breaks.

Chittenden Rogers a noted bicyclist and polo player, while engaged in a game of polo at the Pioneer rink at Binghamton Saturday evening fell with such force that he died from his injuries before morning. The young man was the son of a retired merchant and was himself a prominent manufacturer of that city.

Two explositions of natural gas occured at Pittsburg Pa., on Saturday morning last at about 10 o'clock, but a short time elapsing between the two. The first explosion took place in the celler of a butcher shop and the second in a saloon on the opposite side of the street. Many people had assembled on the scene of the first explosion only to be the victims of the second which was more terrific than the first. About twenty-five people were burned and otherwise injured in a horrible manner. Two were killed outright and some will die from their injuries. The destruction of property is enormous.

A slight shock of earthquake was felt in Westchester county, Saturday.

There are twenty-five cases of smallpox at Tompson, Ga. Many families are leaving.

A Cincinnati fire Saturday night damaged the wholesale drug store of J. S. Burdsall & Co. Loss $4,500.

Baron Thomas O'Hagan, member of the house of lords; formerly Lord High Chancellor of Ireland, is dead at London.

The Montreal carnival closed Suturday, with a promenade concert in the skating rink and the snow-shoe races.

All the telephone wires on Staten Island were cut Saturday night. A few days ago the salaries of employes were largely reduced.

It is estimated at the Treasury department that the public debt statemenet for January will show a reduction in the debt of between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000.

At St. Louis, Wm. H. Bender, deputy clerk of the Probate Court, while passing through the court house Saturday, was knocked senseless and robbed of $800. No clew.

In Pittsfield, Mass., William Cavanagh, who stoned a Republican procession of Irish Blaine men in October last, and was sentenced to thirty days imprisonment, appealed his case and Saturday was sent to the house of correction for a year by the higher court.

Fifty pounds of dynamite, placed in a house at Washington, Pa., to thaw out, exploded Saturday, blowing the building into kindling wood. Many other houses were damaged. No one was injured. The report was heard eight miles.

The prizes have been awarded in the dairy products division of the New Orleans exposition. Iowa took most of the first premiums, the remainder being divided between [illegible]

It was nearly four feet long and would weigh probably fifteen pounds. The head and arms looked [illegible] man, [illegible] but at the point where a [illegible] worn, the body widened, and took on the character of a fish, with fins [illegible] and forked tail. The [illegible] body was covered with a tough skin resembling parchment, and a few long black hairs grew from the top of the head. The face—half demon—half hog—was not pleasant to gaze on, and reminded me of Egyptian mummies.

Only two specimens are known to exist, and as this had been in the hands of the taxidermist, one could hardly judge what it had been in life. It was called the——, but no! I won't trouble you with the name, for it's one of the longest found in the books on ichthyology.

The funeral of Owney Goeghegeu (pronounced Ga-geu) this week was a fit ending for his crooked life. When the hearse started for the ferry, his reputed wife, and his sister fought for first place in the line, and men and women ran along the street, and threw frozen mud, and snow at the hearse and carriages. Goeghegeu has lead an evenful life. He started out as a prize fighter, and spent the past year in prison.

At one time he gained notoriety as a ward politician, and heeler, and has always been known as a bruiser, and desperado. He has killed his man, and in various ways injured many people. Of late years he has presided over the worst dive in the city, and it was here in Hester street that he was convicted of some offence and sent to the penitentiary for a year. Under the restraint of prison life he broke down, and when released he went to Hot Springs, where he died. He was worth forty thousand dollars when he left New York, but not a penny of this sum can be found, and it is supposed that some of his late friends have made away with it.

Since Fitz John Porter was appointed Police Commissioner the gamblars have had hard lines to travel, and the Sunday liquor law has been rigidly enforced. But whether this is an example of "a now broom" etc., I am not able to say, but surely the gamblers have laid their tables in pasture green for the time being, and the city is graced with fewer black-legs than it has had in years. And on Sundays the little back doors, and "family entrances," are clesed and, bolted, and the men who will drink must get a doctors prescription or else get a supply on Saturday night.

The new board aldermen has by popular vote placed its self on the side of "Sundays free from religious restraint for the working people," and advocate "free beer," and next summer I suppose the two factions will be at war. The Law & Order league in one side, and our noble aldermen on the other.

While on this subject I want to say a few words about the beer and liquors sold at the present day.

I have a friend in the drug line, who is quite intimate with an agent for most of the celebrated foreign and domestic beers, and sometime ago this agent asked him the price of nux vomica beans in large quantities; but as his house did not handle them he could not give him the figures he wanted. My friend asked him what he used them for, and without hesitation he said, beer!

"Why I ship tons, I was going to say, to the west and sell a large quanity here in the city. They give to the beer the bitterness of the hop, but not the body, and they are much cheaper. We know they are injurious, but anything to make a cheap article." Nux Vomica is the bean from which the alkaloid stryehnia is produced, and is placed among the most violent poisons. Cocculus indicus (fish berries) is also used, and when you add to the the glucose, sulphuric acid, blue vitriol and copperas you have a mixture that is surely fearfully, and wonderfully made.

Copperas and blue vitriol is used to to give the beer the heavy "bead," and the glucose adds body, but I can't say why the sulphuric acid is used, but I do know that it is used. This same friend came to me a few days after he had told me of the nux vomica, and handed me a bunch of four nick'es firmly fastened together. "Well" what's this?" I asked. "Beer," he said.

"Please explain."

"Well, last night I drank some beer in a saloon, and paid for it with a quarter. The change came back all right and I picked it out of a pool of beer, that had been left on the counter and put it in my pocket. This morning I was fishing around for car fare and found this." "We soaked them in water, and found each coin black and badly discolored. My friend does not drink beer now, for he learned his lesson from the discolored coins. And this is "the health giving beverage" that the poets have so often sung about, and "the juice of the hops" strengthing and nourishing. How do you think an old German poet would act with a mug of the beer brewed at the present. Strangely I should say! And now for the liquors. I am so placed that I often see orders for oil of cognac, fusil oil, oil of potato, essence of port, sherry and Maderia wines, Holland gin, and oils of New England and St. Croix, rums. Then comes a long list of fruit flavors to make up "the bouquet" of the different liquors. [illegible] called) [illegible] alcohol, water, [illegible] and [illegible] make up the great [illegible] of our "imported and fine domestic liquors." And the [illegible]

[illegible] to succeed in whatever walk of life they be chosen. The [illegible] to be idle, [illegible] hidden power, [illegible] men for his lack of [illegible] There is no predestination here; each man is allowed to go about as he will and to exert his energies if he has any. Too many men are content to be carried along by the tide, to be mere nonentities. There are those whose lives might be characterised as written in common type, too few having the desire or energy to have theirs written in italics. The earnest man is the leader, the one always on the frontier, whatever be the enterprise.

Earnestness overturns, rebuilds, rings out the old and rings in the new. The genuine man is not content with being a mere addition to the census, where all men are measured just alike. It is not all of life to breathe and exist. He lives who thinks most, does noblest, acts best. The path of progress is marked by great drops of sweat. Work is the power that moves the universe. In work there can be no corners, no bulls, no bears, no millionares. Business comes to those hands which are ready to handle it. You can not break the earnest man down nor the lazy man up. The best things of this world are hidden away, and the key to the treasure house is found in work. Thus earnestness begins at home like charity—and is contageous. Men are to apt to gaze wonderingly at the stars trusting for something to turn up, and to neglect the the many opportunities right at home. You must bear in mind noise is not earnestness. The hollow thing is best adapted to produce noise, and so the hollow mind. Foresight is necessary to success. A man has but one chance in this world and that chance comes to him now. The present is the time for you to consider and let, "Act, Act," be your motto. Earnest men to be successfull need not be strained all the time. The great thing to learn is when the occasion demands this earnest work, and then bend your energies to the task set.

Work has two levels—the common level and your level best. The latter is essential to success. Do nothing by halves; Be earnest, energetic and concentrate your efforts. Here is one of the success. Find the weak spot in what ever you have in hand and attack that with all the force you possess. Then back set it. Persevere in what you undertake; this is the price of true growth. Keep-at-it-ive-ness should be a trait of your character. Don't be a mediocre, but place yourself in italics, and make your presence in this world felt.

At the conclusion of Prof. Dowd's remarks of over 45 minutes, he was warmly cheered, and on behalf of the audience was heartily thanked by Prof. Davis.

O'DONOVAN ROSSA SHOT.

An English Woman Shoots the Great Dynamiter on the Streets of New York—His Wounds not Dangerous.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—At twelve minutes after five o'clock, this afternoon, Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa, the notoricus Irish agitator, was shot by a woman on Champers street near Broadway. At that hour the streets were full of people, making their way toward Brooklyn bridge and up town, and the excitement over the shooting, although Rossa was recognized by very few, was intense. The first shot fired took effect in Rossa's body and he fell to the sidewalk. The woman continued to shoot until she emptied her five chambered revolver, but only the first shot took effect. City Marshall James McAuley was present at the time, and breaking through the crowd that collected, even before the shooting was over, he seized the woman who still held the smoking pistol in one hand, and told her that she was under arrest. The woman offered no remonstrance, but allowed herself to be palled through a mass of citizens and taken to the city hall station house. George W. Barlow, a merchant, and Peter Y. Everett, an ex-journalist, who witnessed the shooting, accompanied the captor and captured to the station saying that they would be witness of the assault. When the woman ceased firing Rossa arose to his feet and made an effort to find his way back to his office on Chambers street, which he had just left. He said, "I am shot," trying to place his hand on his back under his shoulder blade. After a few steps somebody in the crowd suggested that he should go to the Chambers street hospital. A couple of men lent their arms and the Irishman changed his mind, turning his steps toward the hospital. He walked all the way there, a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile. He bled considerably on the way. Once there, he was disrobed and examined by the attending physicians. [illegible]

[illegible] Capitol [illegible] proposed to [illegible] Still, he thought there was something in society worse than dynamite, namely "The guilt and the wrongs that made dynamite possible. Helpless, hopeless, poverty, and the oppression of centuries were the ingredients of dynamite." He thought that these [illegible] should teach the lesson that for nations as well as for men there is nothing so unprofitable as injustice. The junior Senator from Virginia, who has enjoyed the distinction of being called the handsomest man in the Upper House, assumed for the second time this session the role of the lone Senator. He spoke and voted against resolutions that could be construed as sympathy and fellowship with England, referring to her as a government of cruality and tyranny, and he earnestly championed the cause of poor, oppressed, struggling Ireland. Senator Hawley referred to the two occasions when the American people had solemn experience of assassination and from every tribe and nation, savage and civilized, came indignation. The crimes of dynamiters were far worse than those—they were "an insensate dash at humanity." He did not know what good the adoption of resolutions would do, but it did him good to curse these crimes. It does every part of the world good to hear denunciation from all other parts.

While this explosive subject was being agitated, there was an alarm of fire at the Capitol, and a rush for the doors. For a moment, everybody seemed to expect an explosion and a repitition of the scene in the British house of Parliament. The fire proved to be in the file room of the House of Representatives. Many valuable records narrowly escaped destruction.

While combustables were in order, Congressman White indulged in an explosion intended to blow up the Speaker of the House. He claimed that Mr. Carlisle had discriminated against him in ruling that certain matter should not be printed in the Record, referring to the Speaker as "that creature of the House." The popularity of the Speaker with both parties forbade any disrespectful allusion, and the Member from Kentucky was hissed from all parts of the Hall with a vehemence that is unusual even in that demonstrative body.

Captain Eads has been spoken of as the most successful engineer of schemes through Congress that the world has produced. His strong point has been thought to be his ability to talk men over to his way of thinking. He has just failed, however, to carry everything before him in the matter of the Galveston harbor improvement. The wharf owners ring, who have been co operating with him were made happy by the promise that he would get an eight and a half million bill through.

The River and Harbor committee propose to grant about $750,000 for a beginning of the work and pay Captain Eads a salary of $5,000 a year to superintend it, and $3,000 for each foot of water gained. In the room of the Senate Committee of Naval affairs, for some weeks Captain Eads displayed extensive models of ships, railways, and other appliances proposed to be employed in his Nicaraguan ship canal.

Only Senators, Members of the House, and others directly interested were invited to see the models in operation. This was the alleged trap to get Congressmen in a committee room to talk over the harbor scheme, for the railway bill was soon withdrawn.

The occupation of the lobyist is gone this session. Members of the "Third House" hang around, but are not making enough to pay their cigar bills. The session is too short for their methods, and besides the Congressional mind is not inclined to legislation this winter. It is directed rather to what is brewing in the air; to the political outlook; to the new order of things that the fourth of March will bring. The lobby is a thing of the past and of the future.

By SAMUEL HOUGH TERRY. 12mo, clo., 186 pp.

The Crowning Discovery of the 19th Century.

The proofs cited will satisfy the reader that this great mystery is revealed. There are 300,000 surplus women in the Atlantic States, shut out from wedlock from want of men enough. Think of it! And every single woman afraid that she may be one of the surplus; crying daily as she fights the rough world for a living, "O, that I had been born a boy instead of a girl." Reader have pity on your prospective offspring. Study this book, and do not add to the surplus ignorantly. The law also readily applicable to farm stock. [illegible]

[illegible] which he [illegible] about [illegible] for the [illegible] January. The facts of the case are as follows: During the middle of December, Lewis, to make room for the new buildings which he was about to erect, destroyed a wooden structure situated in the rear of the Lewis House and used by Pratt as a woodshed and which, he, Pratt, claims was included in the property rented, belonging to the Lewis House. Counsel was taken on the matter and it was found that by the removal of this building Lewis had disturbed Pratt's peaceable possession of the premises. Lewis demanded of Pratt the rent for December which Pratt refused to pay upon the ground that he had not been in possession of all the property during that month. Lewis thereupon restored the building and upon the last day of January, Pratt tendered to Lewis the amount of the last month's rent. This Lewis refused to accept, demanding rent for the two months' and hence this action has been commenced. The case will be brought to trial to-morrow at 10 a. m., before Justice Rice. W. H. Kenyon of Oswego will appear for the plaintiff and Messrs., Piper and Stranahan for the defendant. The case creates considerable interest.

Decision Reversed.

Some months ago Thomas Pool, while riding on the omnibus between the D. L. & W. depot, at Oswego Falls and the village of Fulton, was thrown from the top of the omnibus by one of the wheels running upon the iron arch at the canal bridge, and so badly injured physically that he commenced an action against the D. L. & W. R. R. company for damages. The ground upon which action was brought, was that the ticket upon which Pool rode was issued by the D. L. & W. R. R. and signed by its proper officials and carried from Oswego to the village of Fulton. The case was tried and a verdict rendered against the railroad company. The company appealed to the General Term and the General Term reversed the decision and ordered a new trial, costs to await event.

After the Fire.

In a letter from Dr. J. J. Stephens of Washington, he states that as soon as the weather will permit he will proceed to rebuild his block which was burned last week. Mr. Stephens will visit Fulton shortly to make preparations. Mr. Schuyler Schenck will also rebuild as soon as possible. He was insured for $3,000. Representatives from the different insurance companies are in town adjusting matters. Mr. Wright informs us that he will resume business. Sheridan Bros. & Co. are yet undecided. Mr. Collins will repair the damages done to his block. The safe belonging to Sheridan Bros. & Co. and the one owned by J. J. Wright were removed from the ruins. The books and many valuables which they contained were in a fair condition.

Here is what some of our leading citizens and cities says: "The character of Joshua Whitcomb has been created by Denman Thompson and is as much a part of the man as Hamlet is of Booth, Virginius of John McCullough, Rip Van Winkle of Joseph Jefferson or the Two Orphans of Kate Claxton. Others have attempted to portray Uncle Joshua but there has been no second Denman Thompson. The character of Joshua Whitcomb is one of the best ever seen on the stages. He is one of our honest, energetic Yankee farmers, bustling with common sense and humor. Probably no more pathetic or funny scenes ever occurred than are found in this play.

To see the play once is to see it every time one has the opportunity. More than this, it is abundant in wit and humor and the character of Joshua is such as to leave you with a wholesome respect for the Yankee farmer. The whole play has an elevating influence. If you appreciate anything truly first-class in this line, go and see him at the Opera House Tuesday evening next.

Surrogate's Court.

Phœnix Register: The cases returnable before Surrogate David at Fulton, on this 27th day of Jan. last, were disposed of as follows:

The will of Louisa Schenck late of Fulton, was proven, and letters issued thereon to Hannah Schenck of Fulton, the executrix named in said will.

About twenty-five of the young friends of Lea Emens, youngest daughter of Dr, Emens, gathered with her at her home on Oneida street Friday evening and assisted in celebrating her eleventh birthday.

Jacob Baker, a well-to-do German farmer, residing at Baldwinsville, was swindled out of $500 by two bunco men in Syracuse, Thursday. The police succeeded in arresting one of them who gave the name of Olis. The sum of $1,650 was found on him.

The third entertainment of the star lecture course came off at the opera house last evening. Rev. E. P. Roe, the novelist, delivered a lecture entitled "Secret Service, or Scout and Scoutings." He gave some interesting accounts of the valuable service done the Union army by our "spies." Altogether we considered the lecture as very tame.

The ladies of Zion church will hold a valentine festival and apron sale Saturday afternoon and evening, February 14, 1885, at No. — on Oneida street. All ladies in the parish are requested to contribute either to supper or sale contributions to be sent to the, store Saturday morning.

The second game of polo between the reds and the blues, was played at the rink last Thursday evening, and was closely contested match, creating considerable excitment among the spectators. The game was won by the reds, who were so badly defeated in the first game. The third game which will undoubtedly decide the superiority of these two clubs, will be played at the rink on Friday evening.

Wayne county farmers are in financial straights on account of the low price of tobacco. Many tons were raised and have been held with the expectasion of an advance in the market, but the tendency is still downward, and many farmers will be unable to meet their mortgages and so will probably lose their property. Many are being forced to sell tobacco at the present prices. This result will, however, doubtless have a salutary effect in inducing farmers to vary their productions.

South Scriba.

SOUTH SCRIBA, Jan. 32st, 1885. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather and the bad roads about one hundred friends and neighbors assembled at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hirt Wednesday evening, Jan. 27, to witness the marriage ceremony of their daughter Mattie, and Mr. Ansel Hubbard. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Weatherbee, of the Scriba Baptist church. The presents were beautiful and too numerous to mention. Miss Hirst is known through this county as a very popular teacher and her many friends congratulate her in her new enterprise. Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard will spend a few weeks with friends abroad and return and make Scriba their future home.

Mr. Linus Parker is seriously ill, but little hopes are entertained for his recovery.

Sale of the Phœnix Road.

The Phœnix railroad, or what there is of it, was sold at Phœnix yesterday morning on a judgment to Thomas Gale for something over thirteen thousand dollars. It was bid in for eastern parties by Mr. George Potts, of Ocean Grove, New Jersey, a former resident of Phœnix, and it is understood that it is to be completed immediately. An enthusiastic resident of Phœnix offers to bet $500 that cars will be running from Syracuse to Phœnix by the first of June. The road bed is said to be in excellent condition, ready to receive the track at once. Iron has already been contracted for the bridge at Three River Point, and ties for the track are to be bought at once. The road will connect with the N. Y. O. & W., making another route to Oswego.—[Syracuse Sunday Times.

The Palladium says that Max B. Richardson, who was a director in the old company and is also a stockholder in the new, told a Palladium reporter that the new company would proceed soon to iron the roadbed from Syracuse to Woodward, connecting with the N. Y. O. and W. at Fulton.

A Fulton Sport Knocked Out.

Syracuse Standard: Quite a large crowd of sports and pugilists gathered at Meier's sporting place on East Washington street Saturday evening to witness the contest between Foss Peters of Fulton, and George Meiers, of this city with soft gloves. The first round was closely contested, neither man seeming to gain any advantage. In the second round Meiers struck his opponent several telling blows and received one or two pretty severe ones in return. The round closed with some advantage to Meiers. The third and last round was an exceedingly lively one. Meiers seemed to let himself out, and gave his antagonist a terrible drubbing, to the great delight of the crowd. When time was called for the fourth round Peters failed to come to the scratch and the fight was given to Meiers.

The Pulp Mill Enterprise.

The work of repairing the old stone mill which is to be converted into a pulp mill, is about completed and the machinery is being placed in shape for running under the supervision of a skilled millwright from Rochester. Messrs. Weeks & Redhead expect to commence operations about March 1st, As soon as the weather will permit, work will be commenced on the large mill which these gentlemen propose to build. Plans are now under way for its construction. It is to be hoped that this grand water privilege which is now approachable will be utilized to advantage as rapidly as possible.

They Want Coffee.

At the fire on Oneida street last week it was maliciously reported that some of the firemen who were present indulged too freely in intoxicating beverages. It was discussed at the last meeting of Mutual Hose and steamer No. 1 and they decided to ask the citizens of the village to contribute hot coffee on such occasion and thereby avoid any excuse for drinking intoxicants of any kind. Who will furnish coffee?

Wife Number Three.

The Lyons Republican says that William E. [illegible] known in this town and in many respects was a remarkable woman. She was a woman of great religious fervor and was earnest in her convictions and what her hands found to do, did it with all her might. She was a woman with strong sympathy for the suffering, poor and for all who were struggling for the better way and higher life. Frank, generous and always earnest, she found much she desired, and hoped to do. In every cause that promised to make humanity better, in every effort to do good, she was in the front rank. The cause of temperance was near her heart, and not soon shall the influence she exerted be forgotten and her pathetic appeals fade from the memory of those who heard her. Blest be her memory, and as kind words and good deeds never die, so shall it keep green in our hearts for aye.

> "Ah, well! for us all some sweet hope lies,
> Deeply buried from human eyes;
> And, in the hereafter, angels, may
> Roll the stone from the grave away."

The funeral took place from her home on Sunday at 2 p. m. Rev. J. O'dell and Rev. A. M. Roe conducted the services. Her remains were deposited in Mt. Adnah.

Erastus Kellogg, a well-known citizen of Oswego Falls, died Tuesday morning to Skaneatelas, his former home, where the funeral services will be held. Mr. Kellogg was for many years an active business man in Baldwinsville, and afterwards in Skaneatelas, being largely interested with Mr. Pardee in the manufacture of woolen goods. He came to Oswego Falls in 1861, when he conceived the idea that the great water power would give greater scope for his operations, and soon after bargained for the site of the present factory buildings. The following year he built the large, four-story factory farthest west. He was joined in finishing it by Bradford Kennedy, brother-in-law, and Abram Howe. The basement and first story were used to manufacture army goods, and the upper three floors were rented to Holroyd & Potter. The second factory was built by Johnson and Kennedy in 1864. Mr. Kellogg lost all interest when in 1870 Hoyt & Sprague of New York took control. He was one of the first to propose a stock company to buy and work the famous peat bed, where large sums of New York capitol were sent for investment. In 1866, when a new charter was granted, whereby the village presidents were elected directly by the people, Dorastus Kellogg was chosen the first president. He was the first to discover Brown stone and urge the formation of a company to quarry it from the river bank, and was instrumental, in opening, a few years since, the lower quarry. He was in no sense a wealthy man, although at times living in opulent style. He was liberal and generous to a fault. He was the prime mover in building the factories, and always took a deep interest in the prosperity of the village where he spent the closing years of his life.—[Standard's Fulton Correspondent.

At a few minutes past 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon Charles Wilson one of Fulton's most highly esteemed citizens died at his late residence on Second street after a brief illness in the thirty-eighth year of his age. Deceased was born in Fulton where he has always made it his home. He was employed in the bakery of T. A. Thayer for twenty years. Four years ago to-day he started in the bakery business for himself and has been a very successful business man. Deceased was a brother of the late Mrs. Smith Davis whose death we announced two weeks ago. Deceased leaves a wife and two small children. The funeral services will take place to-morrow at 2 p. m. at the M. E. church under the auspices of the G. A. R. and I. O. of O. F., of which societies he was a member. Rev. Mr. Markham will officiate.

Martha A., wife of J. T. Owen, died at her home in this village last evening, at 11 o'clock, aged 76 years. Deceased was born in Woodbury, Conn., coming to Onondaga county when 10 years of age, thence removing to this village where she resided for 52 years. She was a member of the Presbyterian church for 42 years, but some ten years ago she united with the M. E. church of which she was a loved and respected member at her death. Three children and a husband are left to mourn her loss. The funeral will take place Friday afternoon at 2 p. m., from the house. Rev. Mr. Markham will officiate.

John Ogram died at his home on the corner of Pratt and Second street in this village Saturday night at the age of 79 years. He was born in England and came to this country about 54 years ago. Deceased moved from Hannibal to this village about one year ago. The funeral took place from the Free Methodist church yesterday at 2 p. m.

Arthur Dugan, a prosperous farmer of Palermo died on Saturday last aged 60 years. He leaves a wife and three children. The funeral was held yesterday at 1 o'clock from his late residence.

Linus Parker, brother of James Parker, an old and respected resident, died Monday morning. He lived some four miles east of this village. He was about 73 years of age. The funeral will take place to-morrow.

TO-N

[illegible] many things can be done.

When the earth is frozen hard or covered moderately deep with snow, it is favorable to all kinds of teaming. The frozen roads without snow are macadamized by an invisible process which art cannot equal, while a coat of snow is still better as a matter of convenience. Of course it is wise and just to make the most of such opportunities, whether for business or sociability. But since the era of threshing machines, the farmers find less occasion for teaming in the winter than they did. Much can be done at home. Grain being low, and meat and poultry products high, it is a good time to look into these questions. A careful manager can succeed without doubt. He will not, however, expect to do it by inattention to the lessons of recent years concerning comfort to his animals or poultry, or the age which brings profit. The profit lies in right methods and adaption of means to end.

When circumstances favor we desire again to remind the farmers about a supply of swamp muck. There should be a pile of it always near the barn, as it has many important uses. It is of special value to fill in about newly planted shade or fruit trees, or as a deodorizer for privies and stables, or as a mulch for flower beds. Freezing and thawing pulverize it and fit it for use, and as it holds moisture in the soil and is an excellent mulch on the surface, there is no danger of using too much.

The filling of the ice house, in case it was not done in December, should be attended to. There is no certainty that the weather will be favorable for it in February or March, hence it had better be done at the earliest possible moment. But in case there is no ice house on the premises, would it not be wise to have one? A proper and prudent use of ice in summer is a great convenience, and indeed almost a necessity in house keeping.

When the snow falls deep in the orchards, the field mice are driven to desparation for food, and often attack the bark of appletrees. To prevent it, tread down the snow about the trunks, or shovel it away in part, so that the earth will be exposed next the trunk. A tree girdled by mice in the winter is ruined, and this will happen where the snow is deep and the weather cold.

Every farmer should have a work bench and a tolerable good set of carpenter's tools: and with these he can do a good deal in winter to fit up his farm tools and machinery, and get them ready for spring and summer use. Many odd jobs at "tinkering," for farm or household use, can be done with such conveniences, and to carry it on in defiance of cold a stove can sometimes be set up and used in the farm "shop." Many plans relating to spring and summer work can be figured out during the long evenings of winter, and the farm book keeping attended to. This last should secure more attention than it generally receives. Farming is business, or ought to be, and business requires account keeping when worth the name. The idea that a man shall buy and sell year after year, for half a century more or less, and never have at the year's end any vouchers or entries to show the extent of his transactions, his profits or losses, is a just cause of reproach. It is no wonder that real business men sneer at farmers who do this as men of narrow minds and unfit for responsible public stations. The habit in most cases comes from dislike of the little mental discipline that account keeping requires, the same reason that impels thousands to shun correspondence with their friends at a distance. They are untrained in the work and look upon it with aversion and dread; and it constitutes one of the many reasons why farmers have so little influence in the body politic, and why they should have a good practical education when young. The idea that a man should find it a hardship to keep his own accounts or write letters to friends is absurd.

The social part of farm life is still in order during this month; in fine it is usually about the best of the winter months, and let it be imporved. We are not of those who think that the aspirations of the young folks for "company" and society should be repressed. Instead, it should be encouraged, but under regulations that insure good society. Train the boys and girls up right at first, and there will be little danger; though at the same time, as to party giving and "sociables," young and old should mingle freely together. The parents should always desire to secure the confidence of their children, whether sons or daughters, and to learn promptly from them every important step taken in the direction of love or matrimony. If the intercourse between parent and child is really tender and sympathetic, confidence will generally be given, and then advice can be tendered and an influence exerted that may avert improper or clandestine marriages.

Impotency.

One of the most troublesome animal [illegible] with which the breeder has to [illegible] is lack of sexual vigor. Impotency may be total or partial, but in either [illegible] is sure to prove vexatious. It [illegible] detected without a practical [illegible] thus incurs a damaging delay. [illegible] time for breeding is the time [illegible] profit, and any deviation [illegible]

[illegible]

It is a significant fact that impotency has been [illegible] as our live stock has been improved. While it is quite frequently met with among fancy animals, it is rarely found among scrubs. This may be a valuable clue in our search for its causes.

As our live stock has been improved and animals have become more valuable the temptation to breed them at an early age has increased, and the practice has become more common—in fact, almost universal. It is one of the plainest laws of nature that immature animals can give being to only weak and vigorless progeny, and that the proper age for breeding is later than the period of puberty. This natural law is embodied in the municipal law of nearly every civilized nation, yet in direct defiance of it, animals belonging to all classes of farm stock are bred almost as soon as a sexual desire is manifested, and before the complete developement of the sexual organs. As like produces like, the sexual organs of the progeny of such animals must be weak and verging upon impotency; and as this practice is continued from genertaion to generation, making the weakness cumulative, we can hardly expect any other results than occasional total lack, and frequently partial lack, of sexual efficiency.

But the practice is also destructive of general vigor. It is becoming a general complaint that as our live stock has been improved in other qualities, it has deteriorated in vigor. The various organs of the body are so closely related that they may be said to form a sympathetic system, and the functions of one are not altogether independant of the condition of the others. If all are weakened, the sympathetic influence will surely argument the feeble action of the sexual organs, and lead to partial, and perhaps total, impotency.

The breeding of immature animals is not alone responsible for this general weakness. The treatment usually accorded our farm animals would tend towards such a result. They are to frequently pampered, and kept under hothouse condition from birth. They are given all the rich, concentrated food they can be made to consume, and deprived of the exercise essential to health, which would wear off an ounce of precious fat. The effect of such treatment has accumulated for generations, and must result in a general body feebleness, affecting the vigor of the sexual organs. Already our breeders have recognized the foolishness of such treatment, and are, abandoning it, to a certain extent. But it will require years to get rid of its effects, and while in the show ring obeseness constitutes the first essential point we must expect the good results to be slow in coming.

Doubtless partial or total impotency is often produced by a mechanical obstruction, and not by any fatal defect in the sexual organs. One investigator has found that heifers have frequently been condemned as barren when the cause was a super-abundance of fat. The same cause may lead to the impotency of the male. It is certain that, aside from this, a surplus of fat is destructive of the highest utility of such an animal.

This course of high feeding and little exercise leads to general lassitude and indolence. This proposition is proven beyond contradiction by facts apparent every day. The result is to weaken greatly, and in some cases almost to obliterate sexual desire. This is often noticed in high-bred males; and the absence of this indifference among mongrels and scrubs is conclusive of the cause. No physiological fact is better established than that a strong sexual desire is essential to breeding purposes. Organs for which no use is felt become weak or impotent.

Other causes may exist; but if we avoid those here pointed out we may feel reasonably certain of escaping this defect of males.

Good shelter [illegible] feeding [illegible] providing warm shelter. Not only will stock be in better condition, but less feed will be required to keep them growing. The principal secret in profitable stock-raising and feeding is to keep the animals growing, and yet to do it with the least possible expense.

Nor can we reasonably expect stock to thrive in the best manner without grain during the winter. The amount, of course, depends upon the quality of the other feed. The best guide is their condition. They must not under any circumstances be allowed to run down. It costs too much to regain what is lost. I am aware that the old custom was to keep cattle until they were three or four or even five years old. Hogs were not expected to attain sufficient growth to fatten until they were from eighteen months to two years old. Of coarse improved stock has considerable to do with early maturity, but not all. Good stock, in order to grow, must be well fed. It is as easy a matter to stunt a full-blooded animal as a scrub, and good feed from the start will aid wonderfully in bringing out a scrub.

Experience has taught us that in order to receive the most profit we must push stock right along. Give them a start to grow, and then keep it up by good feeding and good care. During the winter as often as possible give them a change, as they soon tire of one kind of food, and a change is beneficial. Generally corn is the main reliance, and as a whole it is one of the best, if not the best stock feed we have. Yet with all this in its favor a change to something else is better.

Cleanliness should not be overlooked. To thrive well stock must have clean quarters, and when confined during the winter this requires work; it will pay. See that they have plenty of litter, and that their quarters are kept as clean as possible.

See also that animals have a good supply of water, and not half ice. It is a poor plan to go to the expense of building warm sheds, and feed the stock well in order to keep up animal heat, and then to take them out two or three times a day and force them to drink ice-water. They need a good supply but it should be moderately warm. The new stock salt rollers make salting an easy task, and each animal should have access to one. Watering, feeding and salting regularly is the principal care to be given after they are provided with warm, clean quarters.—[N. J. Shepard.

How Watch Cases are Made.
A plate of SOLID GOLD 14 2-10 karats fine is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this plate the various parts of the cases—backs, centers, bezels, etc. are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving, and engine-turning. The composition metal gives it needed strength, stiffness and solidity, while the written guarantee of the manufacturers warranting each case to wear twenty years proves that it contains all the gold that can possibly be needed. This guarantee is given from actual results, as many of these cases have been worn perfectly smooth by years of use without wearing through the gold.

A Very Conscientious Reporter.

It is a breach of confidence for a member or an officer of the senate to disclose the transactions of a secret session, until the removal of the injunction of secrecy by a formal resolution of that body. Still, newspaper correspondents generally manage to find them out, in some way. So well known was their accomplishment in this direction, that senators would sometimes go to the reporters for information as to what had been done in secret session, instead of the reporters to the senators! Once, a senator, going to the senate rather late in the afternoon, met a corrrespondent coming from the capitol. The law maker asked what was being done in the senate. "Oh, nothing important," was the answer. "They have just gone out of executive session and are now discussing the subject they had up yesterday." The senator was evidently interested in some nomination or other business, and so he persisted and asked the correspondent what action had been taken in executive session. The newspaper man coolly eyed the senator for a few moments, and then cautiously remarked: "Well, you congressmen are getting to be such free talkers, I think I'd better not tell you!"—[From "Among the Law Makers" by Edmund Alton, in St. Nicholas for February.

A THRILLING STORY
As Told by a Merchant in Troy, N. Y.—A Surgical Operation Avoided—How A Father, Wife and Daughter Escaped an Awful Doom
Of the hundreds of accounts of remarkable cures wrought by DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, none have appeared so purely astonishing as the following: The persons mentioned are among the most highly respected in the city of Troy, and the story as told by the father will prove interesting to all our readers.—ED.
TROY, N.Y.
Dr. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:
DEAR SIR: My daughter was afflicted with a severe growth of Fungus. To remove it we had resorted to almost every remedy and consulted the most prominent surgeons and physicians. Dr. —— of Troy, said that a surgical operation would be necessary, but fearing fatal results I hesitated. Some of the physicians claimed that it was caused by one thing and some by another The Fungus was prominent and disfigured her looks. Having heard of Dr. Kennedys' FAVORITE REMEDY working so thoroughly on the blood I determined to try it, to see if this medicine could do what doctors had failed to do and surgeons had hardly dared to undertake. I can say in truth that the result of this trial was the complete cure of my daughter of this dreadful malady. Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY alone effected it. We used nothing else, for other things had completely failed. My daughter to-day enjoys vigorous health and to Favorite Remedy alone is the credit due. My wife also was very poor in health, due to some liver dificulty with which she had suffered a long time until she became very much reduced in flesh. A trial of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has resulted in a complete restoration of her health, which she had not enjoyed for years. She had gained in flesh and strength, and thus secured perfect health, and this is DUE ENTIRELY TO DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY. As for myself, being engaged in the grocery and commission business, which makes it necessary for me to test the quality of different articles, like butter, etc., my sense of taste and my stomach were seriously injured, Everything seemed to nauseate me, and fearful of dyspepsia in the most severe form, I tried DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, The first bottle afforded immediate Relief, and from that day to this I can say that Favorite Remedy has restored me to perfect health. These are facts which I claim prove that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is the best medicine in the world for those afflicted with the above difficulties. If any one in the city of Troy doubts the truth of these statements let him come to me and I will prove them. I have recommended Favorite Remedy to hundreds and with the same good results.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO'S IMPROVED
BUTTER COLOR
A NEW DISCOVERY.
For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.
But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.
It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,
And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.
BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.
If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

[illegible] I wonder what my wife would say [illegible] only thought about her.)

Since I had seen her seven years had passed.
(And since I've loved four times and once have married;
[illegible] I've changed this last,
A lost flirtation that I had miscarried.)

Our eyes met once, I almost think she blushed.
(She, too, is married, for she had three babies;
It might have spoken had the youngest hushed—
A squalling infant drives me to the rabies)

I wonder if her heart has ever changed?
(I well remember when she said it couldn't.
I'm glad that from me she became estranged—
'Tis odd to have to marry when you wouldn't.)

And, too, I wonder is she happy now
As I in matrimony would have made her.
If she is not, upon my life I vow
The fates have most confoundedly betrayed her.)

I worshipped once her face, her eyes, her hat,
(There never was a more angelic figure,
But she has grown unbeautifully fat,
There's no Dutch fish wife that's a scruple bigger.)

That first love's shadow still is in my heart.
(That heart of mine is in a mysterious packet—Why that policeman's very sudden start!)

The row across the street, the basement under,
She lives down there and with her doting mate.

Sturdy little farmer boy, tell me how you know
When 'tis time to plow the fields, and to reap and mow.
Do the hens "with yellow legs"
Scold you when you hunt for eggs?
Do you drive the ducks to drink, waddling in a row?
Do the pigs in concert squeal
When you bring their evening meal?
Tell me, little farmer boy, for I'd like to know.

Nimble little sailor boy, tell me how you know
How to navigate your ship when the tempests blow.
Do you find it pretty hard
Clinging to the topsail-yard?
Don't you fear some stormy day overboard you'll

Do they let you take a light
When you go aloft at night?
Tell me, little sailor boy, for I'd like to know.

Little boys of every kind, tell me how you know

Does the pain increase so fast
That 'tis terrible at last?
Don't you quickly convalesce when too late to go?
Do you think I am a dunce?

MIRIAM'S FLIRTATION.

"It is frightfully dull here," exclaimed Miriam Creswick with her "Diana bow" of a mouth stretched in a most pretentious yawn. "Is there nothing here but crochet work, wild strawberries and tea parties?"

Miriam was the very impersonation of her Jewish name—tall and dark with creamy complexion and eyes that seemed to melt and swim like stars hiding away in shady springs. And she wore soft, sweeping robes that fell around her in statuesque folds, and moved with the slow, royal grace of a Hewbrew Queen, so that Constance Dale looked upon her with girlish admiration as the incarnation of all that was radiant in womanhood.

"But I thought you came here to rest and recruit after the winter's dissipation, Miriam," said Constance.

"So I did. but I don't mean actually to stagnate if I can help it."

Constance looked puzzled. Miss Creswick laughed.

"The dear, unsophisticated little fairy!" she cried, gayly. "The sewing circle and a portfolio of embroidery patterns may be enough for you, but won't suffice for me. I must have a flirtation or two to spice the monotony."

"But I thought, Miriam, that Judge Dalton's son—— "

"Stuff and nonsense!" interrupted Miriam, with good-humored imperiousness. "Of course I'm to marry Percival Dalton some day—or at least so the elders say—and I've no doubt he's a very fine young man."

"Oh, Miriam, do you mean that you have never seen him?"

"Why are you so horrified at that?" asked Miss Dreswick, half turning, so as to fasten a spray of rosebuds in her midnight dark hair. "We arn't engaged, nor shall we be, probably, until it is ascertained whether or not I shall suit my lord. He's rich and he's handsome, if report be true, and that's pretty much all I care for."

"And when does he return from Europe?" asked Constance, in breathless interest.

"In September, I suppose. Come, Conny, don't you want to walk down to the Postoffice? I'm so tired of doing nothing."

The two girls had just emerged from the shady lane upon the quiet country road, when a tall young man of the fair-haired Saxon style of face passed them carelessly doffing his cap to Constance Dale.

"Who is that, Con?" whispered Miss Creswick, turning her stately head to look after the vanishing figure.

"Mr. Egerton's nephew, Percy Wylde."

"The parson's nephew? How handsome he is! Why didn't you introduce [illegible]"

"Shall I call him back?" asked Miss Dale, laughing.

"[illegible]. Is he a villager?"

"He is here for a few weeks, enjoying [illegible] scenery and [illegible]"

[illegible] said Miriam, nodding her [illegible]

"Of course not," flashed out Constance, with flaming cheeks; "only I do not like to see any creature, whether brute or human, cruelly hunted down."

"It won't hurt him," said Miriam dryly.

And true to her word, she did not allow twenty-four hours to elapse before she got acquainted with the parson's good-looking nephew.

Apparently Mr. Wylde was quite ready for a flirtation—and speak the truth it would have been difficult to avoid falling into Miss Creswick's enchantingly spread snares. Picnics, boating parties and dreamy rambles up the mountain side, all conspired to aid the siren's plans, while Constance looked on, grieved and troubled, and sorely anxious to warn Percy Wylde against the pitfalls he was so surely nearing.

"But what can I say?" sighed poor little Constance Dale. "Miriam is so beautiful and fascinating, while I am nothing but a country girl!"

So the passed on, until the time ripe, full beauty of the summertide was at its hight, and Miss Creswick was packing her trunks to join her aunt at Cape May.

"Of course, it has been very charming here," she said, as she sat on the old farm-house piazza in the moonlight the night before her departure; "but one can't dream on in Arcadia forever."

Percy Wylde sat silently by her side, and she fancied that his face looked unwontedly pale in the moonlight.

"Then you are determined to go, Miss Creswick?"

"I must," she answered infusing a bewitching softness into her voice. "My future fate is to be at Cape May next week."

"Your fate?"

"The man whom I suppose I am to marry," Miriam added, carelessly.

"Miss Creswick!"

"Mr. Wylde!"

"Then I am to understand that you have been deceiving me all this time?"

"Deceiving you, Mr. Wylde? Indeed, I am at a loss to comprehend——"

"Stop, Miraim," the young man interrupted, speaking in a low, measured voice, which awed the coquette more than any burst of fervid passion or overpowering rage could have done. "So you mean to tell me that you have deliberately enticed me on all these weeks, knowing that at last you would cast me off as a plaything of which you have grown weary? Miriam Creswick, I should scarcely have believed this of you."

Miriam Colored scarlet, and tapped her foot indignantly.

"It was your own fault, Mr. Wylde."

"It was—and I accept the consequences of it," he answered, calmly. "I would rather be myself than you, Miss Creswick. A disappointed man may yet find some sweet drops in the cup of life, but a heartless flirt can never respect herself or [illegible] respected by others."

Miriam bit her lip. It was not such fun, after all, to be lectured after this fashion by the man she had befooled so delightfully. Nor did she regret the soft sound of Constance Dale's footfall on the porch floor—a sign that her tete-a-tete was at an end.

"One would really think I had been committing a state crime?" said Miss Creswick to herself, her cheeks still flaming and her eyes sparkling in the moonlight. "Conny may entertain him now if she pleases—I'll have nothing more to say to him."

And altogether it was a decided relief when Miss Miriam Creswick and her trunks departed for Cape May.

"Has Mr. Dalton come, aunty?" was her first eager question, when she arrived at the huge, swarming hotel, and began to unpack her guaze, crape and lustrous silk.

"This morning," Mrs. Creswick answered, with self-satisfied pride. "So stylish and distingue he is too—the handsomest man in town, I think."

Miriam smiled proudly—how long ago those moonlight evenings at the old Dale farm seemed to her now. Poor Wylde—but what else could he have expected? Who can play with edged tools without incurring the risk of cut fingers?"

"Do you suppose he'll send up his card aunt?" she asked, "or wait for a less formal introduction?"

"But Mrs. Creswick could only leave the answer to this question for fate to develop.

And it happened that Miss Creswick and Mr. Dalton met that very evening.

Miriam was standing in the doorway, a fleecy cloud of white, with roses in her hair and corsage, when suddenly the color deepened somewhat in her cheeks.

"Aunt," she whispered, "he's here."

"He, child? Whom on earth do you mean?"

"Don't you remember?—the parson's nephew, out at Edgedale, that I told you about?"

"Where?" asked Mrs. Creswick, putting her gold eye-glasses to her eyes.

"There—by the door! See, he's coming this way. Why, auntie, he's bowing to you!"

But Mrs. Creswick, without hearing her niece's last words, rushed forward, all smiles and graciousness.

"So happy to meet you, Mr. Dalton. Allow me the pleasure of presenting you to my niece, Miss Creswick."

And Miriam found herself involuntarily courtesying to—Mr. Percy Wylde.

Aunt Creswick, the only one who was entirely unconscious, smiled and simpered as only a well-seasoned dowager can.

"[illegible] did you arrive from [illegible]?" she inquired, [illegible]

[illegible] Dalton, with a [illegible] head.

"Miriam!" cried Mrs. Creswick, "you never told me."

"Because she herself did not know," said Mr. Dalton, smiling. "At Edgedale I go by the name of Percy Wylde, in adherence to a fancy of my uncle, who never loved my father's name or family. And if Miss Creswick told you anything about me she should have merely mentioned me as one of those 'country hearts' it was her pastime to break ere she returned to town."

He bowed, and turned calmly away, while Mrs. Creswick was still in a maelstrom of perplexity.

"Miriam, I don't understand this at all," she cried.

But Miss Creswick did. She understood that her own folly had lost her a rich husband. And when Constance Dale married Mr. Dalton she was forced to be content with the very secondary position of first bridesmaid.—[Chicago Herald.

Our Toledo Letter.

Toledo, O. Feb. 4th, 1885.

Editor of Fulton Times:—

I have been a hard-working farmer for many years and never found much time for idleness, but since I have been here I have much leasure time, and spend a part of the time traveling around the city and (having the benefit of a large old library) I have much time for reading, and in my researches I found two little stories which are very old but very beautiful. They have been told in many words and told in few, and will bear retelling as long as ingratitude exists and sympathy is needed, and with your permission, Mr. Editor I will send them for the benefit of your many readers.

A certain man gave a dinner to all the visitors. The company assembled in the banquet hall, the fairest, the goodliest, the lovliest beings who ever sit down to feast together. In looking over from his place at the head of the table, he discovered that the two most beautiful women seemed to be strangers to each other. Even he knew them not. "Who are they?" he asked of the guests, and was much astonished when told that they were Benevolence and Gratitude, and that they had never met.

A young girl who had married and gone to a new country was very unhappy. She wrote to her mother, that she was miserable, and had no one to tell of her wretchedness.

"Oh, my daughter, replied the mother, "tell your sorrows to the walls of your dwelling, to the stones upon the street, to anything within the sound of your voice; but do not carry them unspoken in your heart, or it will break.

H. V. Spencer has appointed [illegible]

"Oh, my mother," answered the [illegible] daughter. "I told my woes to the stones and the stones melted, and to the walls of my house and the walls split."

I also enjoy the reading of the many letters from the Boys who wore the "Blue" in the time of the rebellion, to the "Camp Fire" editor of the Toledo Blade, and could give many extracts which no doubt would be interesting to the "Boys in Blue" in Fulton, but perhaps you. Mr. Editor take the Blade in exchange and could give them directly from the paper, so will omit giving any for the present.

February Weather.

E. J. Couch, the weather prophet, writes The Argus from Humphrey, Neb. giving the following forecast for February:

February, 1885, will open with cold, westerly winds, clouding by the 2d. The 3d will present, marked phenomena. Higher temperature, violent storms, earthquake activity and rain or snow, 3d and 4th; followed on the 6th by a cold wave, with snow 6th and 7th and drifting by the 8th. A period of storm will set in by the 10th, with a cold wave, continuing 11th to 13. Mars will be opposite the earth the 11th. The 14th will bring a change in the character of the weather. The tendency will be warmer days. The 16th Saturn will become stationery, resuming his direct motion. The temperature will be higher, but a squall of wind will sweep across the 17th producing damage unawares, possibly cyclonic south, with earthquake activity. The earth is nearing Jupiter, passing him the 18th and 19th. There should occur, by force of atmospheric and etheric compression, a high temperature for winter. The thermometer marks the degree of compression. The barometer marks the weight of the atmosphere. Westerly winds should set in by the 20th. Mars will pass, being opposite, Jupiter from the sun the 24th. There will arise on the 24th a cold wave from north, sweeping across the land, with heavy snow. The sky will become settled, but clouding again by the month going out stormy. Changes of temperature and the atmospheric currents are produced by varied attractions and compressions, being part of the grand mechanism of the universe.

Short velvet and broche mantles in dolman style will be worn in the early spring.

For silk and wool dresses a little velvet used as a collar and cuffs is a great improvement.

Silk, satin and cashmere are, after cloth and velvet, the most dressy black fabrics.

Silver and gilt threads in the braids worn on cashmere suits make them stylish and dressy.

Black cashmere dresses are trimmed simply by stitching or rows of narrow soutache.

The newest cloth basque are short and round behind, without pleats, and lengthened to a point in front.

Hooks buttons, imported, are the latest novelty in dress-making. Button-holes are thereby entirely done away with.

Figured goods are now used in plain lengths that display the pattern, instead of being massed into gathers and pleats.

A small collar band and separate cuffs of fur now complete many cloth suits and in the spring these can be dispensed with.

Evening gloves are as long as ever, and always of unglazed kid or Suede, and the preferred colors are beige and tan in various shades.

The initial, or monogram in the corner of the handkerchief is the only decorative embroidery permitted, and that should be only on those for every day use.

Buckles both of handsome cut steel and of antique silver, are very popular, and small ones are much used on short straps, holding in place the jacket front worn above the vest.

A band of fur forming a fichu around the neck, and stopping at the point of the bosom, is considered very chic, worn with cloth suits, when only a jacket or no wrap is demanded by the weather.

CLAIMS OF THE NORTH-WEST.

Some Reasons Why Washington Territory Should Be Admitted As a State.

Watson C. Squires the newly appointed Governor of Washington Territory, was formerly a student in Falley siminary in Fulton. He was afterwards graduated at the Wesleyan university. He married a daughter of Philo Remington, of Ilion, and was sent as the Remingtons' agent to Europe to solicit orders for the Remington fire-arms. Some six years ago he settled in Seattle, near Olympia, the capitol of of Washington Territory. He has caused a fine town to spring up around his lands, and has already become rich in western lands and products. Owing to his knowledge of the territory and his ability as a business man and politician, he was named as acting governor, receiving his appointment last year from President Arthur.

In a recent letter to your correspondent Governor Squires speaks of the effort being made to have the territory received into the sisterhood of states. He is certain that it has great resources. It is the only territory open to the sea that has not become a state. It has sufficient population. It is on the eve of a wonderful era of growth and development. A great tide of emigration has been pouring into many parts of the territory. "Our rapid growth," he says, "is a strong reason why we should become a state. The financies are very healthy. We are out of debt, and have a balance in the treasury of $40,000." Among the reasons given by Governor Squire for an early admission are the following:

Our school system will be greatly aided by the allotment of large tracts of land for its support. Ample appropriations will be made for the improvement of our magnificent water-ways and harbors. We can better manage our internal affairs, as, in exercising and important influence and control our railroads and state traffic. Our mines will be made to turn out a greater income, our grazing lands will swarm with herds of cattle, our commerce would be increased, and soon our great state would be traversed in every direction by railroads." The substance of these papers originally appeared in the the Princeton Review, and attracted wide attention. His views then characterized as "broad, comprehensive, scholarly, and statesmanlike," and as "the most thoughtful and conclusive arguments upon the subjects yet presented," are here published with added material.

Analysis of the Bible.

To the Editor of the Fulton Times.

Dear Sir: The following analysis of the Bible may be interesting to some of the readers of your paper:

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently proceeded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose that he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like prespiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a mommon attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching, and affecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address The Dr. Bosonko Medicine Co., Piqua, O. Told by M. M. Williams. 29tf

"Are you going to the party this evening, Maud?"

"No I guess not; I am afraid that horrid Smith girl will be there."

"Oh, no, she won't; she said she wasn't going."

"Why not?"

"Because she was afraid you would be there."—[Boston Post.

A sociable man is one who when he has ten minutes to spare, goes and bothers some one who hasn't says an exchange. This item is correct except in respect to the number of minutes the sociable man has to spare.—[Burlington Free Press.

Out-door Life.

Man seems planned for an out-door life in a mild climate, with just a leaf or two of shelter for a rainy day. His nature will bend for a time to the conventional burdens of an artificial civilization, but replant him on first principles in the out-door garden of life and his recuperative forces will rebound with the elastic energy of steel springs relieved. Our fashionable friends would lose caste were they to use their neighbor's second-hand clothing, but they will daily try to purify their own blood with their neighbor's second hand or ten-times used breath, poisoned as it always is, even when exhaled by young and healthy persons. Man in common with other warm blooded creatures, generates a surplus of heat within his body. Out-door sleepers find that no matter how cold the surrounding air may be, if dry, enough of the outflowing heat may be dammed back and retained by suitable clothing to sustain the vital functions in health and comfort. Until domestic art can supply our lungs with cool, first mortgaged air, in warm rooms, its votaries will have an important [illegible] In the mean[illegible] which excludes the idea that the grant [illegible] land a mile [illegible] problem to solve. [illegible] time out-campers and hovel dwellers will wear the best aerated blood in the land.—[American Home.

JUST AS GOOD.

Many unscrupulous dealers may tell you they have remedies for Coughs and Colds, equal in merit and in every respect just as good as the old reliable Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup, and unless you insist upon this remedy and will take no other, you are liable to be greatly deceaved. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

IN THE SOUDAN.

The latest despatches show the condition of the English army in the Soudan to be most unfortunate, and the belief at the English war office is growing stronger that General Gordon is dead. The English people who have for years gloated in the title of "Empress of the Sea" and pointed to their exploits in warfare with proud satisfaction, are justly enraged at the management of the Soudan campaign. The cabinet seems to have awakened to the fact that the capture or death of the intrepid English general in the fort of their semi-civilized opponents is a disgrace to the English army, and the British nation which can only be removed or palliated by a vigorous prosecution of the war to a final termination and it is possible that any request for reinforcements by Lord Wolseley will be readily accorded regardless of numbers or expense.

Later—Colonel Wilson and Wortley bring news to the effect that Gordon was stabbed and killed by one of Mahdi's troops during a tumult in the street during the capture of Khartoum. On the 26 or 27 of January.

MR. CLEVELAND spent Sunday very quietly at Greystone the guest of Mr. Tilden.

THE Republicans of the Illinois legislature have nominated Logan for United States senator.

A PASSENGER train on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Road went through a bridge near Creston, Iowa, on Sunday. Seven persons were killed and 16 injured.

THE ship "Alert" was given to the United States by England to be sent on the Greely relief expedition. The President has directed that it be returned, and it is said that his action will be confirmed by Congress.

IN the sculling match which occurred at Sidney, Australia, last Thursday between Hanlan and Clifford, the former won by six lengths. Both men were in excellent condition. The contest was witnessed by an enormous crowd.

THE President has transmitted to the House a communication of the Secretary of State relative to the Japanese government offering to donate a valuable piece of land at Tokio to the United States in fee simple for legation purposes.

VICE-PRESIDENT-ELECT HENDRICKS is in attendance at the New Orleans exposition. He received a very cordial greeting and in reply to an address of welcome he expressed thanks for the cordial reception. He hoped that the exposition would strengthen the bonds of union and result in increased commercial exchanges with other nations.

DURING President-elect Cleveland's visit in New York last week he met many of the most prominent men of his party for the first time. All seemed to be well pleased with his cordial manner and general appearance. Considerable interest is shown in regard to Mr. Cleveland's cabinet. It is generally believed that Senator Bayard will have first place.

THE Metropolitan Telephone and Telegraph Comyany has issued an order prohibiting roller skating by operators. Manager Eckert says: "I do not want any operators to attend any skating rinks, as it interferes with our business." He says that roller skating is a violent exercise that tires the girls out, keeps them up late, brings them late to their offices in the morning and is a constant drain upon them.

The whereabouts of Mr. [illegible], the missing journalist, is still as much a mystery as ever, but that he visited Coney Island is not doubted. His son obtained the watch Monday and identified it as his father's.

The trial of the case of Charles Webster against the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg railroad to recover for injuries received at the Carlyon accident, resulted in a verdict of $4,500 for the plaintiff.

While John W. Hunter, president of the dime savings bank of Brooklyn, was talking to one of two gentlemen who called upon him the other day, the other took a roll of bills from the desk containing $500.

The indications are that there will not be so many hop yards in the Mohawk Valley as there were last season. The growers did not obtain the prices for their hops that they anticipated, and accordingly many of them will plow up their yards.

At the annual meeting of the women's auxiliary missionary society of the fourth missionary district of central New York, Thursday, at Syracuse, the following officers were elected: Mrs. T. G. Jackson of Cazenovia, president; Miss Mary T. Lathrop of Oswego, vice-president; Mrs. E. N. Wescott of Syracuse, secretary.

The trades unions held an indignation meeting, Saturday night, over the treatment the stone cutters had received at the hands of the Messrs. Haven, who have the contract for the stone work on the government building. Certain merchants who had refused to contribute to the aid of the striking stone cutters were denounced, and it was suggested that they be boycotted.

Charles Townsend, a cigar-maker of Weedsport, is under arrest, charged with using the United States mails for fraudulent purposes. It is claimed that he sent out circulars engaging persons to act as agents for the "Morris Detective Agency," forwarding to such as bite a German silver badge, charging two dollars for it. Townsend says he has violated no law, and has been advised by John M. Steele and Geo. W. Lamb, attorneys of Rochester that he had the right to establish a detective agency.

The ice harvest along the Hudson was completed Monday and proved as fine and full a yield as we ever gathered. During the past two weeks several thousand laboring men, and many of whom with their families were in a starving condition a month ago have found work on the ice fields and in the ice houses at from $1.25 to $2 per day. The outlay at Marlboro, where 225 men and boys are employed, will amount to nearly $5,000, and as nearly that entire sum goes into the pockets of laboring men the relief is timely, and is looked upon in the light of a blessing.

A Redfield, Oswego county, correspondent says: "John Sheldon sold his farm in the northern part of the town to two German brothers for $14,000. The boys paid $8,000 in cash. The farm is capable of feeding 100 cows, summer and winter, and a large amount of other stock besides."

The Phoenix Register says that the ice block in the river below the village still continues, causing high water and thereby preventing the operation of several manufactories, including the oil stone works and Loomis & Son's box factory thus causing them to get considerably behind in filling their orders.

Oswego, beginning last Sunday, is to have a Sunday night mail, which will leave at six o'clock. There is some opposition to it, chiefly among clergymen and other church people. A deputation of clergymen called upon the postmaster Friday and protested against the arrangement as a violation of the sanctity of the Sabbath; but the postmaster replied that he had no discretion in the matter. It was decried in the pulpits Sunday.

Band of Hope this evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wedman rejoice over the advent of a son.

On Thursday evening last a party of about thirty gathered at the residence of F. Ballou on First street to surprise Miss Spitzley. It was a complete surprise, and the time was passed very pleasently. About midnight a bountiful repast was spread and after doing it full justice the dining room was cleared, and such as wished "tripped the light fantastic." It was late ere the party dispersed, and the occasion was one to be long remembered.

KANSAS.

Frank Bascom, the commissioner for this state is always busy with multitudinous duties. In educational matters Kansas has 6,299 school houses, 8,420 teachers, 381,366 pupils. The motto of the state Ad astra per aspera, is conspicuously pointed beneath a beautiful agricultural design. Its statistics as a stock country represent 1,879,611 head of cattle; 1,288,671 sheep; 1,962,429 hogs. John Wear, of Eureka, exhibits fine large corn in the ear, while wheat, oats, barley, brown corn, vegetables grasses and hay are well displayed; even cotton has been successfully grown by southern immigrants. In minerals it excels in lead, zinc and iron ores, while soft coal is produced in inexhaustable quantities. A fine display of building stone is made; special attention is called to a centennial store vase and pedestal five feet high. Fort Scott sends a lot of earthenware, E. V. Boissere, of Silkville, contributes an elegant case of cacoons and raw silks. Three Mills sends specimens of sorghum syrups and sugars. The most creditable display of evaporated fruit is shown by a farmer, who grew and prepared it all on his farm. Lawrence is quite a manufacturing city as shown by organs, chemicals etc. There are 120 varieties of native herbs and extracts in a glass case. Flour is made of winter wheat grown thereabouts. Saddlery is a great enterprise in this middle state. Fruits are much cultivated, and the drying or evaporating process is a leading industry. The statue in this space is a feature; it is 33 feet tall, and trimmed with agricultural products, buffalo heads, birds and other articles native to the state.

MISSISSIPPI.

Commissioner S. A. Jones deserves cred for the representative display of his state. It is on the west side in Government building. Every county sends specimen of wool; P. B. U. Wait, of Tate county, sends samples of Cotswold wool 18 inches long; Warren county is noted for the fine Merino fleeces and cashmere goats hair; the Arizona goats are successfully propogated in this state. An agricultural pagoda covered with corn, sided with oats, contains a large case of 116 birds of 63 species, representing the burial of Cock Robin. It was made by Miss Carrie Poole, of Natchez. One of the finest artistic works to be seen is that of Miss Blanch McManris, of Woodville, which is a large map of Wilkinson county handpainted on rich silks and cocoons from Corinth, Jackson and Wicksburg are worthy of notice. The state of Mississippi is made of elegant silk patch work handsomely embroidered by a lady of Natchez. Each county is represented by different pieces of silk cut the exact shape of the county. Cotton is shown from the field to the loom in every manner of manipulation. Here in a show case will be seen a postal card on which are written by a civil engineer of the state 7,300 legible words—to be read under a magnifying glass. 199 varieties of wood are exhibited; on polished pannels an artist has painted the leaves and berries of the different trees. Staves are sawed in shape for cooperage. A board four feet wide is from a pecan bearing tree. The Tombigbee wood-working factory of Columbus, makes a fine display. Yellow cypress from Bolivar county, is six feet wide. An attractive object here is a pavillion made entirely of cotton lint, and covered with cotton in the ball or pod. Corn, wheat, oats, tobacco, potatoes, sugar cane, vegetables, etc., are produced in great quantities. A native corn crib filled with grain is a curiosity, it is made simple, and cheap—a poor man's barn. The state has several health and pleasure resorts. In fruits it won eight prizes at the late pomological competition.

No Trouble in the Fulton Catholic Church.

Father P. J. Kearney publishes the following card which should set at rest an idle rumor, which has been noised about Oswego and Fulton for the past two weeks:

There is no trouble in the Catholic church at Fulton.

There is no trouble between the Rt. Rev. Bishop and Father Kearney.

The only trouble is the neglect of the Canadian French in and about Fulton; they require more music and singing to save their souls, which they can get by the Rt. Rev. Bishop authorizing Father Kearney to incur heavy expenses therefor but not otherwise.

The union between the Fulton Catholic church congregation and its pastor is well-known to outsiders.

There is at present no debt upon the Catholic church or church property in Fulton.

[illegible] with banter, fun and personalities. Mr. Springer of Illinois asked to have the rules suspended and a very little bill passed for the benefit of his constituents. Mr. White, of Kentucky objected. I knew some crank would object to this, said Mr. Springer. Whereupon Mr. White went into a white rage. Fillibustering continued upon various motions, and finally Mr. Hiscock asked. What can we accomplish? You know it is impossible to accomplish anything. Mr. Collins retorted that all things were possible in a sensible assembly. Another hour had dragged its slow length along and the friends of the bankruptcy bill succeeded, after many efforts, in having a call for the House ordered. The sergeant-at-arms sent his deputies forth through the city, in search of truant Congressmen, and first one batch and then another was brought in to give an account of his absence. The same threadbare excuses, which have done duty on similar occasions for years, were offered. They were as usual greeted with bursts of derisive laughter but were in every case deemed satisfactory. The new recruits voted of course, for the next motion to adjourn and carried it.

NOTES.

It can not be denied that Congress has been worshiping the rising rather than the setting sun in its "do nothing policy." Not knowing Mr. Cleveland's views on certain important questions and fearful of embarassing him by action, the majority has sought safety in inaction. There will be no further seclusion or repose on Mr. Cleveland's part however, and from this time on his influence will be felt on legislation.

The Democratic pilgrimage to New York commenced on Wednesday evening; quite a little party of Congressmen having started to see the President-elect. A gentleman who has seen Mr. Cleveland several times since his election, told me it was a great mistake to assume that he does not know all about prominent party men, simply because he has not been in positions which brought him contact with prominent Democrats of the country. The gentleman mentioned that Mr. Cleveland was not so much in need of advice as many seemed to think. He has been an active Democrat ever since he has been old enough to have any part in politics, said he, and has taken deep interest in the party and all its affairs. He can to-day measure party men more accurately than many others who have long been in national public life.

It is said the Civil Service Commission will strongly recommend that naval cadetship shall be acquired by Civil Service examinations instead of through Congressional selections. There is a popular impression that relationship or acquaintanceship with a legislator is not the highest qualification for an embryo navigator. It is thought possible that among a dozen applicants in a district the one who could pass the best examination might prove worthy of the appointment more so than the one who could bring the most pressure to bear upon the member of Congress.

Owing to the part taken by the Rev. Henry Ward Becher in the late Presidential campaign, some curiosity was felt to know what character of audience would meet him at his lecture here, on Tuesday evening. It was a fair one as to numbers, but was not overflowing. There was a large number of Democratic Representatives and Senators present. The subject of the lecture was "The reign of the common people." When he appeared on the platform he was greeted with applause. In his discourse he rambled through nineteen centuries and touched on as many topics.

Milk is served at a certain stand in Main building, where a facsimile Alderny cow produces the lacteal by being milked by a pretty maid. The boys who never drank fresh milk before pass in their nickles for a glass.

Particular attention is called to the space in main building occupied by the Pullman car company. It represents the city of Pullman with its myriads of [illegible] company.

Never Eat An Orange With a Spoon.

I beg of you to implore your friends never again to insult such noble fruit as to eat it with a spoon! Let them adhere strictly to the following directions as to how to eat an orange: Place the orange on a nice clean white plate, then quarter it with a silver knife. Take one of the quarters in your fingers and loosen the peel from each end at the same time, until there is but a quarter of an inch of the peel adhering to the center of the section. Then seize the two points of peel with your left thumb and forefinger and hold it as you would a tuberose; with the right hand draw the blade through the center of the fruit, as far as the peel; if all the seeds do not drop out, why just pick them out with a knife. Then raise the fruit gently to your mouth, nip off one of the little juicy lumps, and you never will say spoons again!—[New Orleans Letter in Hartford Times.

Fond Father: "See here, my daughter, this will never do. You must not invite those young ladies to your wedding."

Daughter: "And why not, pa? They are particular friends of mine. There can certainly be no objection to them socially. Their father is a bank president."

"Exactly so my child, and that's just why they must not come. His bank is the only one I have an account with, and they might tell their father about that $100,000 check which I am to give to display among your wedding presents."

"But suppose they do pa?"

"Can't you see? He knows I never had $500 there at one time in my life."

THE examination of Cunninghan and Barton, the alleged dynamiters began in London on Monday, in the Bon street police court. Poland who opened the case for the crown created a sensation by immediately announcing that he would withdraw the charge of conspiracy and substitute that of high treason and felony against both prisoners jointly. He indulged in extended details in trying to prove that the head quarters of the conspiricy was in America. The prisoners were remanded until next Monday, when testimony will be brought to convict them of complicity in the Gower street explosion.

OBITUARY.

Charles VanBuren, an old resident of Volney, died at his home on the eastern bank of the river about one mile north of this village on Saturday, aged 60 years. Deceased was the owner of "VanBuren's Island," a popular and pleasant resort for Fultonians during the summer. He leaves a large number of friends and relatives to mourn his loss. The funeral will take place today at 2 p. m. from the house.

On account of the stormy weather the funeral has been postponed until Friday at 2 p. m.

Andrus Althouse, an old and respected citizen of Volney, died Friday evening, at the age of 83 years. Mr. Althouse came to this place from Herkimer county when about five years of age and has since resided here. He leaves many dear friends to mourn his loss. The funeral services took place from his late residence at 1:30 p. m., on Monday.

Louise, widow of the late Darwin Fay a former resident of this place, and mother of E. B. Fay of Auburn, died at the home of her daughter Mrs. William [illegible] of Canandaigua on Friday last at the age of 87. The remains were brought to Fulton on Monday and placed in Mt. Adnah vault.

Church and Society Notes.

Rev. Mr. Richards occupied the Presbyterian pulpit again last Sunday.

The Universalist social at the Lewis House last Thursday evening was liberally attended and proved a very enjoyable affair.

Rev. H. B. Goodyear, the newly elected pastor of Zion church delivered two excellent discourses last Sunday which favorably impressed his congregation.

Our churches, providing Rev. Mr. Smith accepts the call, will be once more supplied with pastors.

At the meeting of the Presbyterian society last Thursday evening to vote for a pastor, it was decided to extend a call to Rev. Chas. H. Smith of Cooperstown at a salary of $1,200, he being the only candidate presented.

The ladies of the M. E. Society, are to have a fair and festival at S. of T. hall commencing Friday evening with a New England supper and continuing through Saturday.

THE PHŒNIX ROAD.

The Conditions Proposed by the Owners Most of the Money Needed Subscribed.

Phœnix Register: The gentlemen engaged in finishing the Phœnix road, which has lain dormant so long, and for which this town has been bonded for $50,000 and the village of Phœnix for $20,000, are Senator A. S. Low of Middletown N. Y., E. W. Page of New York city and George Potts of Ocean Grove, N. J. They have examined the old railroad, have calculated the expense of the venture, and have promised, upon certain conditions, to have the road in operation at the expiration of four months from the time of signing the contract.

These conditions are that the towns of Schrœppel and Clay shall subscribe for 100 shares of stock at $100 a share, or $10,000, said stock not to be paid for until thirty days after the completion of the road.

A clear title to the property was obtained by the sale of last Friday, and the only link to be added to the chain that will insure a railroad to Phœnix is the subscribing of the $10,000 in stock, when the contractors will immediately commence operations on the new road, under a new charter known as the Syracuse, Phœnix and Oswego Railway company.

The new road will have an independent line from Syracuse to a point about a mile and a half from Fulton, from which point it will use the track of the New York, Ontario & Western railroad to Oswego. It is understood that a large share of Oswego and Fulton business is sured to the new road should it be completed. It is the verdict of those directly interested, those who must assume the responsibility and suffer should the scheme prove a failure, that the road will do an excellent business and undoubtedly prove a grand success. About $5,600 has already been subscribed in Phœnix, which leaves a deficiency of $4,400 necessary to be raised before operations will be commenced.

Politics in Granby.

A number of candidates have developed in Granby for the office of Supervisor, prominent among whom are Charles Dexter, O. J. Jennings, John C. Wells and Thomas R. Wright. If all remain in the field the caucus bids fair to be a lively one. Those who are on the "inside" predict that the three last named gentlemen will withdraw before the caucus and that Dexter will be nominated by acclamation. On the democratic side Daniel Gilbert, Edgar M. Baker and C. C. Wilcox are spoken of with the chances that Gilbert will take the prize if he desires it without much effort.

Granby Sunday School Union.

The monthly meeting of Granby Sunday School Union will be held at Bowens Corners, Sunday Feb. 15, at 10:30 a. m. Good speakers are expected. Also a recitation by a scholar of the primary class at Dexterville. Let every one consider, we contribute something by our presence even, in helping on the great work of reform among the youth. Every one, a regular scholar or not; who may desire, may have one of David C. Cook's "Sunday School Weekly Papers" to take home with him or her.

Monday morning, says the Oswego correspondent to the Standard the well known name of Gordon was taken down from the dry goods store of Gordon Bros. and that of James McCarthy substituted. Inquery revealed the fact that Mr. McCarthy had bought out the stock of Gordon Brothers and will conduct a dry goods store in addition to his large crockery business. Mr. McCarthy has long desired to try the dry goods trade, and the opportunity for him to so was too much for him to resist. Oswego people will miss the name of Gordon, with which they have been familiar for a quarter of a century, from the business firms of the city.

Among several letters from prominent firemen, published in the Sandy Creek News of last week in reply to inquiries as to the advisibility of purchasing a steamer in preference to a hand engine, we find one from Chief Gilbert of our village in which he strongly advocates the purchase of a steamer, giving the relative cost of maintenance etc. He says: "Our No. 1 steamer bought fifteen or twenty years since, paid for herself ten times and more before she had been in town three days, and only Monday night she saved us thousands and thousands of dollars by doing what no human beings on earth could have done with a whole village of hand engines."

[illegible] the Reds (the first [illegible]) in short order. This aroused the Blues to unusual activity and some very good plays were made, in which they won the second goal. They were loudly cheered by the audience who seemed mostly in sympathy with this club. After a close contest the Reds won the next goal and at this point many of the spectators were so interested in the game that they rose from their seats. The next two goals after hard fighting were won by the Blues, the last by an unfortunate stroke from one of the Reds thus giving the Blues the game. Fralick of the Blues, is an excellent player and made many telling hits.

A Pleasant Party.

One of the most pleasant dancing parties of the season was given by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rose, at their pleasant residence on Cayuga street last Monday evening. About fifteen couples received a most hearty welcome and nothing was left undone to make the evening an enjoyable one for all present. It afforded a very pleasing picture to gaze upon the merry faces of the assembled guests as they whirled through the spacious rooms keeping time to the enchanting music executed by Prof. F. K. Jones in his usual enlivening manner. During the evening a repast of many delicacies was served in handsome style. At a late hour the party dispersed, well pleased with the pleasant evening they had spent.

Denman Thompson.

The largest and most select audience of the season gathered at Stephens' Opera House last evening to see Denman Thompson as "Joshua Whitcomb," and the fact that the weather was cold and disagreeable is a sufficient test that our people will give their presence at a first class entertainment. Mr. Thompson is a good actor and is supported by a strong and well selected company. The audience seemed highly delighted with the play throughout. The large house of last evening is a clever inducement to the manager to secure more entertainment of like standing.

[illegible] acres of land, situate, lying and being in the town of Granby, county of Oswego and known as being part of lot three (3) in the original township of Lysander lying southerly or south-easterly of Fish Lake in Granby aforesaid and commonly called "the Fish Lake lot," supposed to contain sixty-seven acres, be the same more or less.

In the spring of 1880 John Ouderkirk, son of Mrs. Dexter, by her direction went across the lake and began to build a fence along the north line of lot No. 3, and cut a few small trees upon the seven acres in dispute. For this Mr. Case sued Mrs. Dexter and John Ouderkirk for trespass. The action was tried in June 1882, at Pulaski, and Judge Churchill directed the jury to find a verdict against Mr. Case. By this decision Mrs. Dexter has title to the whole of lot 3 including the seven acres and the lake lying between. Mr. Case appealed to the General Term of the Supreme Court.

After the decision by Judge Church ill, Mrs. Dexter brought two other actions against Mr. Case, one for the use of the seven acres for six years then last past, and the other for trespass upon the premises after the commencement of the first. These last two suits were commenced in Justice's court were each carried to the County Court and finally to the General Term of the Supreme Court. The General Term sitting at Syracuse on the 29th, of January, handed down their decisions in all three of the actions deciding them all in favor of Mr. Case.

In the action brought by Mr. Case, decided by Judge Churchill they grant a new trial with costs to abide event. Justice Follett writing the opinion of the court after reviewing the facts among other things says: "It cannot be said as a matter of law that under these deeds Mrs. Dexter acquired title to the whole of lot three—Six hundred acres instead of sixty-seven acres. In the deed to Mrs. Dexter and in the preceeding deed the words used are "and being on lot three" which do not naturally embrace the whole of lot 3. In exhibits A. B. C, and D. the words are "and being known as lot No three." In all of the deeds constituting defendant's chain of title, the words of general description are followed by words of particular description, to wit: "Lying southerly or south-easterly of Fish Lake in Granby, aforesaid and commonly called "the Fish Lake Lot, supposed to contain 67 acres of land, be the same more or less." Those words particularly describing the location of the subject of the grant, locate it sotherly of Fish Lake which excludes the idea that the grant embraced seven acres of land a mile away and north of the lake, though it is in the same great lot. As to adverse possession it not appearing fully who had occupied the premises for the past twenty years. The Judge says: This question need not be now decided. On the next trial, how, and by whom this land has been occupied will (if that is made an important question) be more fully developed." While not involved in the present litigation. Mr. J. B. Sheridan claims to own all of lot 3 except the the seven acres on the north side and the sixty-seven acres on the south side of the lake—that is all of the lake lying upon lot 3, which is about 500 acres of lake. Sheridan obtained his title from the Dewy heirs whose father once owned all of lot 3.

The main action decided by Justice Churchill of Oswego and reversed by the General Term will probably be carried to the Court of Appeals by Mrs. Dexter.

South Scriba.

SOUTH SCRIBA, Feb. 7, 1885.—Linus Parker, an old and respected resident died at his home Monday, Feb. 2nd, 1885, after an illness of five days of congestion of the lungs. Deceased was born in Pittsfield, Mass., March 16, 1809. He came to this county with his parents when a small boy and has lived in the town of Volney and Scriba since. In 1831 he married Miss Martha R. Crooks of South Scriba who died in May 1864. He married for his second wife Mrs. Marriam Hale, who survives him. Mr. Parker was the father of Ira and George Parker of Waterford, James L. Parker of Fulton, Mrs. Monroe Hubbard of South Scriba and Mrs. J. N. Peck, of Cohoes, New York. The earlier part of his life was spent at Fulton as a lumberman, moving to this place in 1856 since which time he has followed the occupation of a farmer. When a young man he became a member of the M. E. church and is known as a zealous worker for its cause. The funeral was held from Mt. Pleasant church Thursday Feb. 5, the Rev. Charles Miller officiating. The remains were taken to Mt. Adnah cemetery for interment.

Married at the M. E. Parsonage, Mt. Pleasant Feb. 3d, 1885 by the pastor, Rev. Charles Miller, Mr. William Lathrop and Miss Matie Crooks South Scriba.

Mrs. J. N. Peck of Cohoes is spending a few days with friends here.

Mrs. Matthew Conner is seriously ill. Doubts are entertained of her recovery.

Clean straw, well cured [illegible], with a fair proportion of fine hay, will see the sheep through the winter in good shape. Be it remembered that a good man to see to the stock is almost as important as good feed.

By this time the good housewife is complaining that butter won't come, the weather is so cold, and she and all the rest of the family, notably the boy who does the churning, are disgusted with winter-butter making. We want to say that one of the most useful pieces of dairy furniture made is a cream thermometer worth 25 or 50 cents. With a good one in the dairy there need be no trouble from "hard churnings." Don't churn at hap-hazard, with cream cold or cream warm as may be the case, but bring it to the temperature of about 64° F, in winter and 62° in summer, and thus a thermometer will determine for you. It is lost time to churn when cream is much above or much below the points indicated.

In breeding and training colts the matter of the walking gait is almost wholly ignored. If a man can come into possession of a horse that can make a mile in 2.35, and upwards, he believes he has a prize. Even good, steady farmers have been known to exult over such a feat, and never for once consider how much more important it is that the team they own should be fast walkers rather than slow trotters. The team that can walk fastest with the plow, the reaper or the loaded wagon, is the team the farmer should seek to possess. It makes a vast difference whether a plow team has an on-gait or not. Fast walking, which is the result of training, not of continued over-exertion, insures economy of time, and in the busy season "time is money" with a farmer. Who hears of a race at our agricultural(?) fairs for fast walking horses? It is always for slow trotting. Our breeders should be encouraged to breed with this in view, the improvement of the walking gait, and purchasers of farm teams should insist on this qualification when they buy.

[illegible] so that the hot air may [illegible] from it on summer nights. The fowls suffer more from intense heat on a sultry night than from bad smells.

Some green food should be provided for fowls in winter. Cabbage heads are excellent or any part of them. When a whole head is given hang it up so that the birds can easily reach it, and let them peck away at their leisure. If it swings about some of it will give those hens on the outside of the circle a better chance.

Income and cost should be carefully noted in poultry keeping as in other pursuits. Farmers perhaps cannot be as exact as these who buy all their feed, but the habit of observation with regular feeding will enable them to make a very close estimate. But—sad to say it—the uneducated farmer hates the mental disciplin of exactness—and it is a serious fault.

Saw-dust is sometimes recommended for filling in the space of a hennery made by sealing the joists on both sides. Saw-dust will keep out dampness fairly well, but it will gradually waste away, and makes a hiding-place for vermin. Sand is better, clean, sharp sand, and it will not rot away, nor burn. If you can get it use sand in preferance to saw-dust always.

"Times are hard; we cannot get profitable prices for our produce, and we must economize." Yes, that's so, We know it all bravely. And yet, we feel sure we are right when we advise farmers, in planning for next season's campaign, to arrange a full amount of labor. Practice rigid economy at all possible points, but let it be economy of the economical sort. Remember "There is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." On the farm this may well be applied to the item of labor. All farm profit comes directly from work well done, and done at the right time. A farm will no more yield increase without labor than will a mill or factory. Either will do its best only when "worked" to its fullest capicity, under a wise management. One-man power is no more powerful and effective in the one case than the other. So do not curtail the labor item in the estimate for next season's expenses. Labor will undoubtedly be cheaper, wages lower, and possibly a little cramping in some other direction will make it possible to put on one more hand, instead of one less, and the certainty thus furnished of having all the work done at the right time, and in the very best possible manner (pre-supposing, of course, that the farmer understands his business and how to manage labor to the best advantage,) may make all the difference between profit and loss in the year's operations in field, stable, dairy, orchard, vineyard and garden.—[Our Country Home.

To Measure an Acre.

A handy thing to have on a farm is a measuring cord with which to measure off acres. To make one, secure sixty-seven feet of strong rope, one inch round make a loope or fasten a ring or bar at each end and make these exactly sixty feet apart. This is four rods. Then tie a piece of red rag in the center. One acre of ground wil be a piece four of the cords (chains) long and two and a half wide, equal to sixteen by ten rods, making one hundred and sixty square rods to the acre. The advantage of the ring or loop is that one person can measure alone by driving a stake in the ground to hold the rope while he stretches it out. The rope should be soaked in tar and dried, which will prevent its shrinking when wet.

It is Easy to Live Well.

The bill-of-fare on many farmers' tables is very monotonous through the winter. This is not only disagreeable but is not best for the health. Can't you sell some of the potatoes and pork and buy such things as will make a wholesome variety? It is very burdensome planning and preparing three meals a day every day in the year, and the farmer's wives who have been doing this, ought, now that the pushing work is done, to have a vacation from household care, making a visit somewhere that will change the current of their thoughts and relieve them for a week or so the usual routine. If it is at all possible let them not fail to have a vacation trip.

How Watch Cases are Made.

It is a fact not generally known that the James Boss' Gold Watch Cases really contain more pure gold than many "solid" gold cases The demand for these watch cases has led to the manufacture of a very poor grade of solid gold watch cases—low in quality, and deficient in quantity. These cases are made from 4½ to 10 karats, and a 5 or 6 karat case is often sold for 12 or 14 karats. It is NOT economy to buy a watch case so poor in quality that it will soon lose its color, or one so soft that it will lose its shape and fail to shut tight, thus letting in dust and damaging the works, or one so thin that a slight blow will break the crystal, and perhaps the movement. It IS economy to buy a James Boss' Gold Watch Case, in which NONE of these things ever occur. This watch case is not an experiment—it has been made nearly thirty years.

[illegible] ON THE ENGINE.

Running a Locomotive While Deathly Sick—Something the Passengers did Not Know—A Physician Saves an Engineer.

TAUNTON, MASS.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY, RONDOUT, N. Y.:

Dear Sir: I am an engineer on the Old Colony Railroad, and run the Fall River and Lowell, residing in Taunton. For ten years I suffered everything but death from dyspepsia. Often I had such blinding sick headaches that I could scarcely see. I think this was due partly to irregular habits of eating, and partly to the jar of the engine. Sometimes my head would ache like neuralgia, and again the pain would settle in my eyes, which would feel as big as a man's fists. My breath was very offensive, and my food soured as soon as it entered my stomach. In fact my stomach felt as though it were a great raw and sore surface, and what agony it gave perhaps you can imagine.

In the summer and fall of 1876 when we had the heavy centennial travel, the constant jar brought on acute attacks nearly every week and I thought I should have to leave the road. But I kept at work until the next spring, when I grew so much worse that I could virtually eat nothing, and concluded that my labor, and my life too, were about over.

Remember that I had tried every medicine I heard of, and had been treated by some of the best physicians in Taunton and Lowell. At this critical time DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, was recommended to me. It was new to me, and with my experience of medicines, you can easily forgive me for saying that I had not a particle of faith in it.

I had taken it but a few days when I began to get better. The raw and sore feeling left my stomach, and the snapping pains left my head, and soon I was all right, and have been ever since. It is the only thing that ever did me the least good, and it drove every ache, pain and discomfort completely out of my body. Now I keep KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY with me on my engine, and it goes wherever I go.

Why, I believe FAVORITE REMEDY will cure anything. One night, a while ago, John Layton, an engineer who runs the main line boat train from Boston, came on my engine sick as death. He was worn out with work, had a high fever, and was so nervous he almost broke down crying. "Nonsense, John," I said, "cheer up, I've got something on my engine that will set you up in a jiffy." I took out my bottle of FAVORITE REMEDY, lifted his head and gave him a good dose. He went to bed. Two days after I saw him looking healthy as a butcher. "Dan," he said, "what was that stuff you gave me the other night?" "It was DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y." said I. "Well, I don't care whose remedy it is, it's the thing for a man on the railroad." So say we all.

Yours, etc., DANIEL FITTS.

This preparation goes to the root of disease by purifying the blood and rousing every organ into healthy action. It is useful at home, shops, in office—everywhere.

MORTGAGE SALE. Whereas default has been made in the payment of the money secured to be paid by a mortgage executed by Betsey Dixon to James H. Langdon, dated the fifteenth day of November, 1873, recorded with the power of sale therein contained in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego, New York, on the 16th day of February, 1874, in Liber 101 of mortgages at page 58, given to secure the payment of $253, and interest; duly assigned by said James H. Langdon to Mary Fitzgibbons who is now the lawful holder and owner of said mortgage and whereas the sum of $306.50 is claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, being the whole amount unpaid thereon and an action has not been brought to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and said power to sell has become operative. Therefore notice is hereby given that by reason of the facts aforesaid and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided the mortgaged premises described in said mortgage as follows, to wit.: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county and state aforesaid and known and distinguished as the north half of lots numbered one and two, on block number forty-nine (49) according to a map made by F. Scheck for the commissioners in partition for the heirs of the estate of Norman Hubbard deceased, dated Nov. 1844, will be sold at public auction at the law office of Giles S. Piper, in the village of Fulton, Oswego county, New York, on the 25th day of April, 1885, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day and said mortgage will be thereby foreclosed.

Dated Jan'y 28, 1885. MARY FITZGIBBONS, Assignee.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Mortgagor Ephraim D. Mowry, mortgagee Frank Dilts, assignee Joseph W. Butler, mortgage dated August ninth, 1877, and recorded in Oswego county clerk's office August 3d, 1877, in Book 114, of mortgages at page 127. The amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, is $306.52. The mortgaged property is substantially described in said mortgage as all that tract or parcel of land, situate in the town of Richland, county of Oswego and State of New York, and being part of Lot No. [illegible], of township No. 21, of Scriba's patent as follows: beginning on the west line of said Lot [illegible] chains and [illegible] links from the north-west corner thereof, at a stake 20¼ links 8.18° west of center of large [illegible] maple, and run thence easterly along the [illegible] line of lands sold by John Tyler to Charles [illegible] er, to a stake [illegible] links north 81° west of the [illegible] west corner of the grist mill, thence [illegible] along land sold to said Springer to the [illegible] the highway running easterly and westerly [illegible] school house in district No. [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] glances of bliss,
[illegible]

And, royal tie of purple and showy tie of red,
[illegible] a fair, sandy head,
Whose tresses of gold once the charm of my life,
[illegible] on the head of another man's wife.
And [illegible] of satin, oh, dainty tie white,
[illegible] for my wedding night,
[illegible] have been laid aside,
[illegible]—but where is my bride;
[illegible] you all in gay, colored heap,
[illegible] fire you shall go with a sweep!
Like my dreams, I am sure you will never come back,
And henceforth my neckties shall only be black.

Our Lives.

BY EDGAR E. SALTUS.

As one who to some long-locked chamber goes,
And listens there to what the dead have said,
So there are moments when my thoughts are led
To those dull chronicles whose volumes close
[illegible] repose
[illegible] the past o'erspread,
And [illegible] may tend the dead
Or prune the ivy where once grew the rose:
And, as there to me from their pages streams
The incoherent story of the years,
The aimlessness of all we undertake,
I think our lives are surely but the dreams
Of spirits dwelling in the distant spheres,
Who, as we die, do one by one awake!

ANOTHER LOVE MATCH.

"So! This is your sole business with me here to-day, young sir?"

It was surely not a very promising manner in which the words were said; but then what could one expect? Surely the young barrister had been wildly presumptuous when he, with his moderate income, his trifling practice, had come to ask the wealthy banker for the hand of his only daughter. The young man's face flushed hotly, but he kept his self command, replying with admirable coolness:

"This is my sole business with you today, Mr. Forrester. I have come to you, hoping for the consideration which man owes to man, independent of position, social difference, the world's opinion or anything outside this one bare fact. I, with all the force of my manhood, love your daughter, and ask your permision to go to herself and tell her of it. You have not answered me yet, sir."

"Oh, it won't take long for me to do that;" the banker's tone was rather ironical. "I have but one daughter, and—I have very different plans for her future. You understand me?"

"I cannot fail to do so." The young man's face was white now and had a little sternness in it. "May I ask you whether or not you speak in this man ner solely because I am not wealthy? Would you speak differently were I—well, not a struggling barrister?"

"Oh, I have no personal objection to you," Mr. Forrester said, carelessly, playing with a paper knife on the table beside him—a costly toy, all ivory and gold, one of the curiosities brought by him from Egypt some years before, when he had taken his now deceased wife for a trip on the Mediterranean.

"You do me no injustice, I am confident," Dick Alvon pursued, a sort of dignity on his fine, blonde face. "You understand fully that Miss Forrester's position, your own reputed wealth, have had nothing to do with this interview. I have hesitated to speak because of them; but I fancied that even I—poor and obscure as I am—had the right to make a trial for the happiness I craved. I have come to you solely as a man, Mr. Forrester, hoping to find in you the sympathy of man for man, casting aside all other considerations."

"That is quite sufficient, sir." The banker spoke indifferently, still playing with the pretty toy. "It is of no consequence what you fancied. You will understand that Miss Forrester is henceforth a stranger to you."

"If it is her desire, sir."

"She will have nothing to do with it; she will not even know of your—your presumption. I am fully capable of judging for my daughter." He was not quite so indifferent now, and the young lawyer arose from his seat.

"And I for myself, Mr. Forrister, having reached the age of discernment. I will have one interview with Miss Forrester, with your permission, should you kindly give it."

"And should I withhold my permission?" The banker was becoming angry, and his eyes were very cold as he surveyed his visitor. The young man bowed.

"You will not do so, lest I find myself constrained to find a means of having one without," he said, quietly. "I am still under the impression that a man should allow no other to speak for the woman he loves; that he should try to win her, let what may stand in the way, and I take my final dismissal from her alone."

The banker pushed aside the toy, and [illegible]

[illegible] eyes, [illegible] forehead, and [illegible] hair coiled low on the [illegible] head; a girl with ready smiles, but with enough of her father's iron will showing in chin and eyes, and in the curves of her pretty lips to make one understand that she would hold her own in a struggle.

She had known the young lawyer for six months; had met him here and there, for he was received in the best society; she had danced with him and found him a good dancer; she had talked with him and found him perhaps a trifle more than agreeable, being, unlike most of the men who conversed with her, earnest and frank, rather than inane and complimentary. It had dawned upon her that of late he had sought her before others, had seemed to care for her society, and with the dawning of the knowledge had come a new pleasure to her. Unlike most young ladies of the present day, Leola Forrester did not value a man either by his ancestry or his bank account.

"You wished to see me, papa?" she said, in a pleasant, clear voice, through the music of which one caught a ring of self-confidence; then she saw Dick, and, smiling, held out her hand to him.

"Mr. Alvon," she said, pleasantly, "I am pleased to see you." Her father frowned haughtily as he stepped forward in time to prevent the young man's touching the offered hand.

"Leola," he said, half sternly, "I sent for you that you might assist me to convince this—this gentleman that you still obey me."

She looked from one to the other with open, wondering eyes; the young man was deadly pale and his lips were firmly set; indeed, he looked very unlike a lover, but very handsome for all that.

"You will kindly cling to facts, Mr. Forrester," he said, quietly, and the banker flushed angrily.

"What do you intend to imply? Have you more insolence to offer?" he asked.

"I offer no insolence," Dick answered, now recovering himself sufficiently to draw forward a chair for Leola, for which she thanked him. "I simply asked your——"

"My permission to make my daughter an offer of your hand—and fortune, was it not?" the old man broke in witheringly, "and I declined the honor in her name. Doubtless you would like very well to woo and win an heiress, Mr. Alvon, but, as I told you, I have other views for my daughter."

"Papa"—Leola had not taken the chair Dick offered her, but stood near it, one hand resting on the back—"for shame, papa!" she cried; "is it necessary to insult a gentleman who pays your daughter so great a compliment—who is deserving at least of your courtesy? Since you have spoken so rudely to Mr. Alvon, perhaps it would be as well for him to speak to me on this subject; I will answer him as a woman can answer such things, papa; I——"

"You will tell him then that the presumption is insufferable," her father said, still angrily. You will tell him that you and I can manage to exist without counting a beggarly lawyer among our acquaintances!"

"I do not think I will quite say that, papa," the girl said, her cheeks flushed, her eyes glowing. "I will say solely what my heart prompts. I am listening Mr. Alvon," turning to him, a slight tremor in her voice.

Dick had been very patient, considering that he was not usually slow to anger. He was rather pale still as he lifted his head and addressed Leola.

"I am what I have just been called, Miss Forrester—a beggarly lawyer," he said, calmly; "but I am a man for all that. It may seem as strange to you as it does to your father that one in my circumstances should think of love or a chance of happiness, being unable to purchase it; and yet, I wrong you! You will listen patiently, believingly, while I tell you that I have grown to love you with a man's best love; that I would fain tell you of it, and ask if there may not be a chance of my winning you. Not now, not while I can offer you but my empty hand and my honest love; but some day when I have won a way and drawn success to me by the efforts I can make and will make with such a hope before [illegible] If there is a voice in your [illegible] that would speak to me do not silence it. I am saying this to Leola Forrester, the woman I love—not to Miss Forrester, the belle and heiress. Will you answer me now, here in your father's presence? I would take no answer from him; I would take an answer only from your own lips. What will it be?"

His words, which had made the veins on the banker's forehead swell with indignation, moved Leola strangely; she flushed and paled and the hand on the chair back began to tremble.

"And I have told you she wants none of your love," Mr. Forrester broke out impatiently; but his daughter turned to him with a sudden gesture which silenced him.

"How much you were mistaken, papa," she said clearly, "for I do want it —all of it! I quite understand you," turning to Dick, "and I honor the frankness of your manhood; I take your love, oh, so willingly, so gladly! I have long respected you beyond all, and now I love you [illegible] I will go with you; I will help you in your every [illegible] I will not [illegible] you from after I will—"

"You are mad!" her father cried. But she had held out her hand [illegible]

"I'll give my money to some charity, I'll found an asylum; I'll sink it in the Hudson river. You'll never touch a dollar of it!"

"Papa dear, money is very nice, but it is not everything, especially to a woman," Leola said pleasantly. "I don't think I'll mind very much, papa."

"I'll close my doors against you! I'll never look on your face again!" fumed the stern parent. She paled then.

"Papa," she said softly, "you'll not do that! You loved my mamma. Why should I not love somebody too? You may do what you will with your money, but love me still, papa. I could not live without it."

Here Dick came to the front again, smiling rather heartlessly, I confess at the scene which he had caused.

"I think this can be arranged a little differently, after all," he said cheerfully. "I am not the presumptuous beggar you think me, Mr. Forrester; I am the fortunate inheritor of a very snug fortune left me lately by an aunt. It consists of a fine old place on the Hudson, a cottage at Newport, a farm in the northern part of this state and a few hundred thousand in the bank. I have fancied myself not utterly indifferent to Leola, and wanted to assure myself that she loved me—was willing to give her troth to a poor man, simply because she loved him —before I made this disclosure. I am perfectly willing to forget all you said, sir, and will promise to do my best to make you a model son-in-law. Will you give me your daughter now, Mr. Forrester?"

"It's about the only thing I can do now, seeing that she was willing to give herself to you any way," the banker said, grasping the hand Dick offered him. And so, when the heiress became a bride, late in the autumn, there was another love-marriage to be recorded, and a bride's bonnet to be criticised by a fashionable gathering of the city creme.—[Philadelphia Call.

FASHION NOTES.

Blue will be the favorite color in ginghams.

The navy blue blouse suit for little girls is revived for spring wear.

Among the new colors is "Alderney," which is the deepest shade of cream color.

Velvet ribbon makes a stylish and seasonable trimming with very little trouble.

In the new cotton fabrics intended for summer wear, light colors predominate.

A soft cotton called China crape, with tiny raised figures, will be worn next season.

The newest spring woolens are rough, soft materials of English or Scotch manufacture.

Very large silk handkerchiefs are used for aprons; they are gathered and set in a belt of ribbon.

China silks are offered to take the place of foulards and the checked silks which have been so long worn.

The cotton sateens for next season have less pronounced colors and designs than those of past years.

Ladies in mourning, wear tailor suits of serge, flannelette and chevoit, with wide braids of trimming.

The Roman stripes are new in ginghams and show several bright colors in one broad stripe on a clear white ground.

Domestic calicoes in all the prettiest French patterns on gray, buff, dull red, or blue grounds will make attractive dresses.

The popular Scotch ginghams have their beauty enhanced this year by embroidery done all over the fabric in dots, blocks or lines.

White cashmere undervests, with high neck and long sleeves finished with lace, are worn this year by little girls beneath their low necked velvet dresses.

Buttons, when used at all, are small in size, simple in design and so closely put together that the dress has frequently to be closed by the aid of a button hook.

Dresses for southern wear are made of white flannelette and chudda cloths of creamy white with zigzag stripes, and are trimmed with black or white braid.

For traveling dresses for spring serges are being made up with a new overdress that opens over a waistcoat, and has a long straight skirt that nearly covers the lower skirt.

A fold of red or yellow velvet basted inside the collar of dresses, and sometimes extending down the front beyond the edge of the buttons, brightens up a dark dress desirably.

Black lace about the neck is vastly becoming to some women. The prettiest arrangement is to make two narrow pleated or gathered frills, that stand close about the throat, where a thread wire holds them in place.

Bright jeweled pins are worn through the knot of the hair. Ostrich tips and aigrettes are used in full dress coiffures, while with the low Grecian knot handsome backcombs set with precious stones are in great favor.

CHARLESTON, S. C., [illegible]

The approaches to this famous city at this time of the year, are calculated to excite the admiration of travelers who left the mercury at zero in dusky New England homes only two days before. Still turnips and other garden vegetables are green in the fields, there being no need of the care devoted to them in colder regions. The temperature is sometimes at the freezing point here; but it is at rare intervals and very brief in duration. A long, level expanse is crossed by the railroad as we near the city. The bay appears and upon it we note an immense building, used as a storehouse for phosphate, now one of South Carolina's chief exports. Here and there are traces of earthworks erected in war times. We rode along by the famous Shell road where Charleston's elite practices its steeds and drives dull care away. On the outskirts of the city is a large cotton factory, where the State's principal staple is manufactured at home. Had there been many such, 50 years ago, we should have heard less of South Carolina nullification.

We reach Charleston Sunday afternoon, and, after finding our hotel, make our way quickly to St Michael's church which, thanks to a certain bit of poetry, "How he saved St. Michael's" and the guns of Gen Q. A. Gilmore, is better known than any church structure in the city. It is beautiful, without and within, and is very old, having been used for worship more than 120 years. The service is well along as we are ushered in by a black-coated, ancient verger, who drops us into the pew nearest the door. The aged rector is praying and we note his wonderful resemblance to the familiar pictures of Gen. Robert E. Lee but of the people, who should be there, we see but little. However, the prayer ended, we find that the truly devout worshipers, in their kneeling posture, have been hidden by the tall, old-fashioned box pews, and that there is a fair audience of the saddest-looking people I ever saw. Mourning garments are the rule. Boys, however, in cadet school uniform, proclaim the military love of the citizens. The service ended, we wait for the people to pass out and then ask of the rector the privilege to examine the venerable and interesting edifice. To this he readily assents, particularly when we tell him that we are from the North. The verger who showed us to our seats soon takes us under his care and tells us the age, etc., of the church. The pews are so tall that a small boy would have to depend entirely upon his ears in following the proceedings, for his eyes, certainly, would not reach the top. A gas stove burning in the main aisle, was evidence that the church usually needed no fire, and that the day itself was colder than the average. "This church," says our escort, "remains just as it was constructed 120 years ago, save this chancel window, which dates from the war. The building was hit no less than seven times by shells from Morris Island and one passed directly through this end of the edifice, destroying the tablet on which were inscribed the ten commandments. The wall being down, it was thought best to fill the space with a window, and this one of stained glass was the result. You have old churches at the North but most of them have been modernized. This remains as it was, excepting the window." I mentally commented that St Michael's church, was not the only Charleston institution into which the Swamp Angel admitted light. The walls are plentifully covered with tablets to the memory of distinguished dead, some of them reaching back to the Colonial days. The one that most interests us, however, is that to Charles Colesworth Pickney, the scholar, soldier, orator and statesman.

A severe rain storm catches us without umbrellas, as we are inspecting the marble statue of Wm. Pitt in the Court House yard; but in spite of weather we remain to read the inscription stating that the arm of the Prime Minister is missing, through the bombardment of of the city in 1780, by the British fleet.

Monday morn finds us ready to see all that can be crowded into the hours intervening between car time. Before we sally forth, having made up our programme, the hotel clerk says: "Do you see that fellow standing out there?" "Yes." "Well, he thinks you are northern drummers and he intends to spot you as you go out. Humor his idea, if possible, and lead him a good chase, for while he is following you some real drummers will have a chance, for you must know that there is a big license fee necessary for any one not of this city, selling goods here. So we go out and rub Mr. Spotter's elbow as we pass him, but whether he followed us all the morning, I don't know. If so, we gave him plenty of walking, that forenoon. I do know that after 12 o'clock, I had the pleasure of asking him what a certain church with a conspicuous spire was. I fancied he looked weary and disappointed.

Our first point of interest was in the market, through which we walked till we came to the street that leads to St. Philip's Church, noting as we passed, that the display of articles differed in no marked degree from that in other cities, but the [illegible] walking solemnly about the streets waiting for [illegible]

[illegible] We go into the Post-Office, years ago the Custom-House, and then enter a cotton press, where a large number of men are by the aid of steam power, rapidly reducing the bulk of huge cotton bales. [illegible] to less than one-third its former thickness. Another equally busy gang speedily puts new bands upon the bale, the press releases its terrible clasp and the now thoroughly flattened cotton is quickly trundled away to await shipment to Europe or the North. This press has, we are told, capacity to thus compress 1,000 bales per day.

Rice, too, is an important industry of South Carolina, and we seek out a factory where the shuck or husk is removed, and are fortunate in finding a young man, himself an investor, who, apparently, takes great pleasure in showing us the entire process and gives us all we wish to carry away of the product in its raw and intermediate condition.

After all, the most notable thing in or about Charleston is Fort Sumpter. At the earliest possible moment we had sighted the structure down the harbor, four and a half miles away, already familiar to us through the pictures which are found in every history of the war. How can we get there? So near and yet so far! We are told of a ferry to Fort Moultrie on Sullivan's Island. We talk with the ticket agent at the entrance to the ferry and he tells us that the boat will go to the fort if a sufficiently large party desire to go. Of course two of us can go if we are willing to pay enough. Being economically inclined, we seek out a black man and ask what he will sail us out for. After some dickering, we get a boat and crew for two dollars and a half, and are soon on our way down the bay past Castle Pinckney and thence directly to the most famous fort in the United States. Over at our left is Fort Moultrie, standing where Sergeant Jasper won immortality in Revolutionary days and directly before us is the edifice that, in 1861, claimed the attention of the English speaking world. The wind is brisk and the waves run pretty high, we ship water to the discomfiture of our feet, while the prow of our boat, cutting the waves, showers us with spray. Sitting nearest the bow I, in a measure, protect my comrade, B——, while a pea jacket thrown over my shoulders alone intervenes between the waves and a wet skin. An hour's ride brings us to the Fort, but the landing is a more difficult matter than was at first expected. One member of our crew makes a grab, and after some effort, pulls himself upon the dock. I try next with the comforting assurance from B—— that I can't do it. Waiting the auspicious moment, I get my right hand on the edge of the landing, and with my left, grasp a projecting iron upon one of the piles supporting the dock. Then the boat, moved by the waves, leaves me dangling, much to B——'s consternation, who intimates that I am to get a Charleston Harbor bath. However, I pulled myself up, and then laughed at him as he declared he could never get up in that manner. Luckily, I found a ladder lying near. This I shoved down into the boat and, holding one end myself and one of the crew the other, I shouted to B. to climb, which he did with an agility worthy of his Newburyport rearing and was speedily, if not on terra firma, on something more stable than a yawing, bobbing boat. We fancy that we fix the port hole through which the valorous Wigfall entered on that terrible day, and then walk down the long landing to the main entry. We have landed at a point on the northwest side nearest Fort Moultrie. The entrance faces directly west towards Charleston. We enter and look about unmolested and, for ought we can see, unseen by any one or anything save a small sky terrier which, tied to the door of a small house, gives indications of life. The Sumpter of ante-bellum days is a sad ruin. We climb the ruined ramparts and dive down into deserted casements, but we see little that indicates the fortress when Major Anderson took possession. On the side towards Morris' Island, where the chief rebel batteries were, there is left scarcely one brick upon another. A sergeant of artillery with his family and one or two workmen constitute the entire force at present guarding the fort. It is a ruin and that only. True, toward the sea, are a few casemented guns, and there are three or four mounted en barbette but that is all. Desolation on every hand proclaims the force of the bombardments received at both Rebel and Federal hands. While rummaging about for relics, a boy came running with the cry "You must look out for your boat for the steamer is coming." Sure enough the boat was at the dock, and aboard of her were four people from New York and Chicago with whom we might just as well have come as not, and with them, in all the glory of his uniform, was an officer of the U. S. [illegible]

[illegible] Of [illegible] Jackson and [illegible] but we [illegible] of Southern men by [illegible] their heroes. We can not expect them to straightway go and forget what manner of man they were. One old bookseller in Queen Street, surrounded by his ancient and dusty wares, while exhibiting some Rebel money, claimed that it would all be good now that Cleveland was elected; and as he also in the same breath imputed to Massachusetts the so called "Blue Laws" of Connecticut, we dubbed him a crank and left him. I have been amused to see the ruins of St. Finbar's church referred to as the result of Gilmore's bombardment; but this is not so. The church was burned before the war, and has never been rebuilt. A city of magnificent churches, of beautiful location, of enterprising inhabitants, it will rise from the depression brought about by the sin and guilt of slavery and will eventually shine as the sun. Replete in history from the settlement of the state, a market for cotton and rice, the chief place of export for phosphates, it will surely prove one of the most considerable cities of the South Atlantic coast.

Servants are a little more obsequious and, possibly, people generally, a little more courteous than those of the North. Prices are somewhat higher than with us and enterprise not quite so apparent; but our impressions as we rode to the station and bade good-bye to the "Proud City by the Sea," were of the most kindly character, and we regretted only that we had not a week instead of a day to spend in Charleston. HIGH PRICED BUTTER.

Dairymen often wonder how their more favored competitors get such high prices for their butter the year round. It is by always having a uniform gilt edged article. To put the "gilt edge" on, when the pastures do not do it, the use Wells, Richardson & Co's., Improved Butter Color. Every butter maker can do the same. Sold everywhere and warranted as harmless as salt, and perfect in operation.

A strange freak of nature has just been discovered in Cincinnati, Ohio. Frederick Grundwald, a Swiss, resides at 535 St. Clair street, with his wife and two children. Albertina, the youngest, two years old, has two tongues. The second tongue has grown from the root on top of the first. The mother first noticed it when the child was three days old. The second tongue was then quite small, but now it is nearly as lare as the real tongue. The anterior part of the upper tongue looks natural, but the posterior part is constricted and round, giving the unnatural growth a pear shape. The child has never experenced any difficulty in swallowing its food or in breathing, looks natural in every other way, and has always been healthy. The family has been in America two and a half years, and in this city three weeks.—[New York Times.

New York, Jan. 27, 1884. Messrs. Ely Bros., Gentlemen:—My boy three years old, was recently taken with cold in the head which seemed finally to settle in his nose. His nose was stopped up for days and nights so that it was difficult for him to breathe and sleep. I called a physician who perscribed, but did him no good. Finally I went to the drug store and got a bottle of your Cream Balm. It seemed to work like magic. The boy's nose was clear in two days, and he has been o. k. ever since. —[E. J. Hazzard. 393w

"No, papa, I do not wish to marry yet. What I want is a man that does drink, smoke, chew, snuff, go out nights, gamble, bet, over eat, &c.; in short, a man with no vices, and one who is always good." "My daughter," said Mr. Dusenberry "you are only a stranger here. Heaven is your home."

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

Consumptives and all, who suffer from any affection of the Throat and Lungs, can find a certain cure in Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Thousands of permanent cures verify the truth of this statement. No medicine can show such a record of wonderful cures. Thousands of once hopeless sufferers now gratefully proclaim they owe their lives to this New Discovery. It will cost you nothing to give it a trial. Free Trial Bottles at R. E. Phillip's Drug Store. Large size, $1.00.

JUST AS GOOD.

Many unscrupulous dealers may tell you they have remedies for Coughs and Colds, equal in merit and in every respect just as good as the old reliable Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup, and unless you insist upon this remedy and will take no other, you are liable to be greatly deceived. CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose that he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. Do go to [illegible] in time for breakfast.

Do, when you talk, keep your hands still.

Do be natural; a [illegible] diamond is better than a good imitation.

Do be reticent; the world at large has no interest in private affairs.

Do attach as much importance to your mind as to your body.

Do try to remember where you put your gloves and card-case; keep the former mended and later filled.

Do recollect that your health is more important than your amusement; you can live without one, but you'll die early without the other.

Do try to be sensible; it is not a particular sign of superiority to talk like a fool.

Do observe; the faculty of observation well cultivated, makes practical men and women.

Do avoid causes of irritation in your family circle; do reflect that home is the place to be agreeable.

Do put your hair-pins in so that they will stay; it looks slovenly, to say the least, to see then half dropping out.

Do be ready in time for church; if you do not respect yourself sufficently to be punctual respect the feelings of other people.

Do be exact in money matters; every debt you incur means loss to some one, proably to some one less able than you to bear it.

Do answer your letters soon after they are received, and do try to reply to them with some relation to their contents; a rambling ill-considered letter is a satire upon your education.

Do try to be accurate, not only for your own sake, but for sake of your sex; the incapacity of the female mind for accuracy is a standard argument against the equality of the sexes.

Do cultivate the habit of listening to others; it will make you an invaluable member of society, to say nothing of the advantage it will be to you when you marry; every man likes to talk about himself; a good listener makes a delightful wife.

Do be contented; "martyrs" are detestable; a cheerful, happy spirit is infectious; you can carry it about with you like a sunny atmosphere; do avoid whimpering; it as bad as gigling; both are to be condemned; there is no excuse for either of them; if you have anything to say, say it, if you have not, hold your tongue altogether; silence is golden.

Do be truthful; do avoid exaggeration; if you mean a mile say a mile, not a mile and a half; if you mean one say one say one, not a dozen.

Do, sometimes, at least, allow your mother to know better than you do; she was educated before you were born.

Do sign your full name to your letters.

DYNAMITE has yet failed to show that it can keep a roof over any Irish tenant or put bread in any Irish mouth. It may terrorize London; it is a wild and idle dream to expect it to liberate Ireland. It matters not how much the Irish people may condemn it, they must suffer for it.

THE legal tenders and national bank currency are twin features of an eminently successful currency system, in which each performs functions not within the nature of the other, and together they give us the best circulating medium the country has ever known.

IT is said that O'Donovan Rossa is not demanding urgently the punishment of the woman who shot him. That is readily understood. He was not so badly hurt but that he could have been about the next day, and since then his dynamite fund has rapidly increased, as is proved by the many personal comforts he has recently indulged in. Indeed, instead of owing Mrs. Dudley a grudge, Rossa owes her a debt of gratitude.

ALL the ingredients required to make dynamite are sulphuric acid, nitric acid and glycerine. A mixture of these in equal proportions is nitro-glycerine. In this is soaked in three times its weight of sand, sawdust or silicious ashes, and the product is dynamite. When ready for action it has the appearance of damp graham flour. It costs about twenty-five cents per pound to manufacture, and large dealers reap a big profit in it. It requires no more careful handling than powder.

A dispatch dated [illegible], Feb. 17, says [illegible]

[illegible] an appropriation of [illegible] was made for that purpose.

When the new Capitol was begun in 1815 a place was reserved for the body of Washington under the whole, and it was intended to remove the body from its present resting place to the Capitol. It was a great struggle for Madam Washington to consent to the removal, but she finally did, saying, "I need not, I cannot say, what a sacrifice of individual feeling I make to a sense of public duty." But the sacrifice was never exacted, and the body remains, where it should remain, at Mount Vernon, 18 miles down the Potomac at the old Hermitage, as all the world knows.

The spot where the monument stands was selected by Washington himself. It may not be generally known that the precise place is at the intersection of the parallel and meridian lines which pass through the center of the Capitol and the centre of the White House and means, if the symbolism means anything, that in George Washington the Executive and Legislative of the land were as one.

The question was not again raised until 1824 when James Buchanan a young member of the House offered a resolution that a committee be appointed to enquire into the resolution of 1799 relative to the erection of a marble monument in the Capital to commemorate the great events of the military and political life of General Washington, may be best accomplished, and that they have leave to report by bill or otherwise. But even this resolution was laid upon the table. In 1839 Congress ordered a statue to be wrought by the American sculptor Greenough which now stands in the public square fronting the Capitol. This has been severely criticized but must rest on the good opinion of Edward Everett, who at its finish said; "We regard Mr. Greenough's Washington as one of the greatest works of sculpture of modern times. We do not know the work which can justly be preferred to it.

In 1833 some patriotic citizens of Washington formed an association to raise funds to build a monument, surely the most noted names in modern times have been its officers. No one was allowed to contribute to the fund more than one dollar a year, during three years $28,000 was raised. In eleven years more that sum had grown to $87,000 and 1848 a plan was agreed upon and on the 4th day of July the corner stone was laid under most auspicious circumstances. The work was now fairly commenced and was vigorously prosecuted for six years and the shaft grew to the hight of 170 feet. All the money amounting to $130,000 was now exhausted. Very little more was done until after the war, when the new wealth and more than fabulous prosperity of the newborn nation—Congress assumed as its right, the completion of the monument, placed the work under the direction of its own officers, and pressed it to the happy conclusion which now is soon to be celebrated.

The monument is composed of granite and since its commencement has been entirely undermined and a deeper and broader foundation of granite chips and Portland cement has been laid. This was one of the marvels of engineering skill for the slightest variation at the base would severely effect it at the top and cause it to topple over. The foundation finished, work has been pushed for a number of years with great success. A hundred societies from nearly every country have contributed a block unti it has grown to be the highest monument in the world.

And thus, through the perils of a hundred years, with the actual co-operation of hundreds of thousands of people, and with the glad sympathy of all, the Nation has built its fit monument to him who is still

"First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

The Murder At Baldwinsville.

The post mortem examination over the body of the Italian, Gaetonni Bancho, who was found murdered on the railroad track south of Baldwinsville last Friday, was held this forenoon by Dr. Kendall, the coroner's surgeon for the Frst Assembly district, assisted by Drs. Allen, Wells and Mason. The various wounds about the head and face appeared to be comparatively insignificant until the scalp was removed, when a very severe contusion was discovered on the left temple. Removing the muscular substance covering the temporal bone, a fractured surface was felt, which goes to show that he had been struck by some heavy instrument, which fractured the bone, depressing these fractured parts moderately into the brain. These fractured piecies were removed readily by the fingers, the two put in position together making about 1 by 2¼ inches in size, of irregular form. This was undoubtedly the fatal blow.

Persons who examined the ground where the murder was committed have made a map of the spot, taken observations about the size and form of the boots worn, the distance the body appeared to have been dragged to place it on the railroad track, and other things which may be of service hereafter, but which served in no degree to form a clue to the perpetrators of the crime.

It is thought conclusive that but one, or at the outside two, had a hand in the murder. There do not seem to be any tracks to indicate that any one came from any hiding place in the woods near by. [illegible]

A deputation of millers waited on the Dominion Government last evening, with the view of having the duty on American flour raised from 50 to 75 cents per barrel. It was shown that during the fiscal year ending June 30 last the increase in flour imported from the United States was 100 per cent over the preceding year, and that during the six months ending Dec. 30 nearly half a million barrels had entered the Dominion. Sir. John Macdonald informed the deputation that he would give his approval to its proposition if it could assure him that the increase of duty demanded would give the millers the required protection against American flour without increasing the cost of the Canadian article to the consumer. It is understood that the millers' demands will be acceded to.

[illegible] extra session. All appropriation bills this year have more or less special legislation attached to them. The Senate will require all such matter to be stricken out. Long and bitter debates will follow unless the House takes new departure and yields in every instance, which is not probable. This will delay bills until the closing hours of the session, and some may fail entirely. The Senate has declared it would not work day and night to dispose of tardy House bills, and a call for the forty-ninth Congress may be unavoidable. It is not desired, however, by either the Democrats or Rebublicans. A member said to me yesterday "If an extra session is called it will be on account of the time lost by us in listening to the vaporings of John D. White and other Congressional cranks. This was in allusion to some recent scenes of confusion in the House in which Mr. White of Kentucky was conspicuous. Mr. White avails himself of every opportunity to irritate the Democrats, especially his Democratic colleagues, and sometimes he persists in spite of all parlimentary rules.

The pilgrims, as the Democratic Congressmen who recently called on Mr. Cleveland in New York are now called, have nearly all returned to Washington. None of them seemed to have any positive information in regard to the Cabinet, but they are all enthusiastic in praise of the President-elect. One of them asctertained that Mr. Cleveland's eyes were not in the clouds, or fixed upon the stars; they are looking right ahead of him, at the ground over which he must travel. Senator Lamar was not less favorably impressed. He says Mr. Cleveland is a very superior man, and has no common-place trait about him. It is not surprising that the Mississippi statesman should have been melted to admiration by the special attention accorded him at the Conference. Mr. Lamar was the most prominent and influencial southern advocate of Mr. Bayard's nomination at Chicago, and he has not expected any marked graciousness to be shown him by the coming President. The all prevailing impression among Democratic Senators now is that Mr. Bayard will accept the State Department portfolio; but should he decline it, it is believed that Mr. Lamar will be appointed. Some think it would be almost unnatural magnanimity on the part of Mr. Cleveland to offer positions in his official household to two of his most foremost opponents at Chicago.

This reminds us that the next President is likely to have one more Cabinet officer to appoint than any of his predecessors. The Agricultural Bureau is about to be raised by the action of the Senate, to the Dignity of an Executive Department, with the same rights and privileges as to a seat at the Cabinet table, salary, etc. While this sop to the rural voter has been urged for a long time, it never before got so near being actually tendered. There is nothing to prevent the bill from becoming a law before the close of the session, in which case Mr. Cleveland will have eight instead of seven Cabinet problems to solve.

The counting of the electoral vote by the two Houses of Congress on Wednesday drew more people to the Capitol than any event of this session. It was merely a monotonous formality, but for the reason that it occurs only once in four years, it is considered in the nature of a show. An hour before the count began every seat in the galleries of the House was taken, except the Diplomatic and President's galleries. Those who could not get in, and there were hundreds of them, wandered about the Capitol, the only part of the ceremonies they were able to see being the march of Senators across the building to the Hall of Representatives. At several stages of the count the Democratic side of the Chamber was disposed to indulge in bursts of applause and acting Vice-President Edmunds found difficulty in controlling it.

The use of Iodoform or Mercurials in the treatment of catarrh—whether in the form of suppositories or ointments—should be avoided, as they are both injurious and dangerous. Idoform is easily detected by its offensive odor. The only reliable catarrh remedy on the market to-day is Ely's Cream Balm, being free from all poisonous drugs. It has cured thousands of chronic and acute cases, where all other remedies have failed. A particle is applied into each nostril; no pain; agreeable to use. Price fifty cents; of druggists. 40w4

A Land Slide.

"Well, well!" said the first as the two met and shook hands, "but I thought you were farming in the western part of the state."

"I was until I lost it," replied the other.

"Lost it?"

"Yes—by a landslide."

"Mountain slide down on your farm?"

"No; farm slid away from me on a $5,000 mortgage."—[Detroit Free Press.

Never neglect a constipated condition of the bowels, or serious results surely follow, such as piles, impure blood and many chronic complaints. Burdock Blood Bitters is the remedy.

A reception and farewell party was given by Mr. Wm. McIntosh and Mrs. E. Cooper to Mr. George Carver who will shortly depart for Adams. It was an enjoyable affair.

The trial of Wm. Clutterbuck for selling liquor without license took place before John E. Parker, Police Justice, last Friday. Wm. Stephens appeared in behalf of the people and S. N. Dada for the defendant. The following gentlemen composed the jury. O. J. Jennings, H. Allen, Dan. S. Shattuck, H. Rockwood, George Baldwin, Peter E. Decker. Several witnesses were called by the prosecution, but only Clutterbuck was sworn for the defense. The jury failed to agree, and the case will be tried again soon.

Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

Harper's magazine for March is unrivaled in its rich and varied contents. Its frontispiece illustrating one of Wadsworth's sonnets, and is from a drawing by Alfred Parsons. The most prominent feature is the paper "The House of Orange," by W. T. Hewett and [illegible] with the portraits of all the kings and queens from the reign of [illegible] of Nassau to Queen Emma. This is followed by "a glimpse of some Washington Houses." The residences by [illegible] Anderson, Stanley Matthews, [illegible] and others are fully illustrated. The new Wellington [illegible]

[illegible] possession of the turkey. He immediately went down and carefully locked the box stall after which he essayed to look once more at his beloved turkey through a barred window in the door but no turkey could he see. Then he went inside and still it was invisible: he kicked around the straw but it never appeared. About this time it dawned upon his mind that the proud emblem of Thanksgiving was not there. It had gone, vanished, disappeared and could not be found. He immediately became a detective but had no success. He had about given up when a few days after he was invited to take dinner at the Woodruff House, which invitation he accepted. As he was seated at the table a large turkey was brought in beautifully roasted. As his eyes fell upon it past events came vividly to his mind and he exclaimed in a very positive manner "By gol, that's my turkey!" He was very easily pacified, however, by having the wishbone given to him. No one knows how the turkey came there as Mr. W. says he found it in the woodshed. It has been reported, however, that Will Betts was seen in close communication with the turkey about the time it was abducted.

Since that time Will Betts' turkey has wandered away, and taken all the corn with it which the owner had provided for its benefit and no one can tell where it has gone. The owner lives in hopes however—of getting the wishbone.

Polo on Skates.

The following gentlemen composing the Fulton Polo Club went to Syracuse Friday evening to play the Criterion Polo Club of that city: J. Hadcock, T. D. Lewis, Gilford Mace, J. C. Fralick, A. R. Ney, W. Hoff.

Saturday's Syracuse Standard says: "It took about fifty minutes for the Criterions to wrest three goals from the Fulton polo club at the Criterion rink last evening. This is the first match game the Fulton's have played and they give promise of making a good record. The contest over the first goal lasted half an hour, the ball being in close proximity to the home club's flags a greater portion of the time. The Criterions played an uncommonly good game in the next two innings, Boyington, their cover point, making no less than ten direct and hard drives for the goal, cleverly stopped by the Fultod goal tender."

The above is reported to be slightly incorrect in one or two particulars. Instead of fifty minutes being the length of the game it took one hour and twenty minutes to play it, and it took forty-five minutes to capture the first goal.

The Criterions have beaten the best clubs in the central part of the State and it is a matter of pride that the Fulton team has shown itself to be the best they have yet met with.

The following gentlemen went to Oswego last evening to play an exhibition game at the Casino rink in that city.

Reds.—J. Hadcock, T. D. Lewis, Gilford Mace, H. Collins,, F. Willard, J. Appelt.

Blues.—J. C. Fralick, W. Hoff, J. D. McIntyre, H. Markham. C. Willard, L. Foster.

The game was won by the Blues after a very close contest. J. H. Cage acted as referee. These clubs will also play an exhibition game at Phoenix on the opening of the new rink at that place.

The Fulton Polo Club has been challenged by the Princess Club of Auburn.

Marital.

The following is taken from the Phoenix correspondent of the Times and Express:—At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Sweet, Thursday Feb, 12, occurred the social event of the season, it being the marriage of their daughter Leah, to Mr. Herman D. Merriam of the clothing firm of Merriam & Jennings of this place. At an early hour the spacious parlors were crowded with the elite of the village, together with numerous guests from Fulton and Syracuse. At a little after eight o'clock the bride and groom proceeded by the Rev. A. H. Hanscom, the officiating clergyman, were escorted to the front parlor, to the time of the wedding march, where the ceremony was performed. After the numerous congratulations the guests were served with a bountiful collation. The Misses C. Wilson of Fulton, W. H. Merriam of Clifford, L. Carrier and Kirk Sweet acted as ushers; and Miss Bertha Elder presided at the piano. The beauty and value of the presents was only equaled by the number.

Mr. Merriam was formerly a resident of this place and was a salesman for E. B. Fay. The Times extends its best wishes.

We are requested to say that the above meeting has been postponed for a few evenings.

The Ladies of the M. E. church will hold an entertainment in Sons of Temperance Hall commencing Friday afternoon Feb. 20, and continuing the following afternoon and evening. Both useful and ornamental articles will be offered for sale on that occasion. On Friday evening a "New England Supper" will be served from 5 to 10 and on Saturday evening, refreshments will be served at the same hours. An admission fee of 5 cts. will be charged.

It is said the sale of valentines this year is much less than formerly. In towns where they have roller skating rinks, this is said to be a sufficient reason. The hard times doubtless has something to do with it as well. All our dealers have kept spread out a variety of valentines to tempt the average boy and girl to squander their last dime. It is a source of gratification to the postoffice clerks that the day comes but once a year.

Holy Week services will be announced later in the season. Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m.

"Oh Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years." This is the voice of the church. Such is the cry of earnest souls as the Lenten Fast draws nigh.

"Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest awhile," are the words of the Lord Jesus as He enters upon his lonely Fast and beckons His church to follow Him into the desert. Hoping these services may prove helpful to my parishners and to all who may desire to attend any of them, I remain, Faithfully and affectionately your friend and servant,

H. B. Goodyear, Minister in charge.

Stuck.

The present snow storm has affected the publication of our paper this week in more ways than one. Besides making scarcity of news it has robbed the office of its editor so that instead of crying 'copy" we have to get our own copy and to solace ourselves with the telegram:

"Snowed in. Don't know when I can get home. J. A. McKay."

We ask our readers' forbearance and promise to make it up in the future.

We wish to call the attention of the gentlemen who have started a society for the improvement of the nomenclature of small villages to a portion of this county called "Skunk's Misery." The inhabitants may of course object, but they may be induced to believe that "a rose with another name" has the same effect on the olfactories.

The house of Hon. Willard Johnson was last night the scene of a brilliant entertainment given by his daughter, Miss Mary Johnson. The guests, numbering fifty, were mostly prominent society people of Fulton, and the party proved to be an unusually pleasant one. Dancing was one of the enjoyable features. Miss Johnson was assisted by her brother Lovell Johnson, of Louisville, Kentucky.

This remarkable snow storm has been a serious inconvenience to people. It has impeded travel, interfered with every kind of trade, and in all sorts of ways it has proved a great nuisance. [illegible]

[illegible] Washington. [illegible] July, 1812, [illegible] a Revolutionary soldier. [illegible] owned vast possessions of land, promising each a large tract if he proved worthy. After struggling for years, a dissolute son was sent to examine and report. He only came to Syracuse, and after returning gave these really worthy men a bad name, and they received no lands.

His father died when he was but seven years of age. When a mere lad of ten, he hired out to drive upon the canal: his faithfulness soon earned him a better position altho' struggling with poverty. He kept to the canal; he was soon employed upon the State scow, and in a few years he was made captain.

When 21 years old he married an estimable lady who still survives him. They made a home some six miles from Fulton, in what was then a vast wilderness, built a log house and during his early life cleared the land—being often interrupted by calls to do work on the Oswego Canal, and in rebuilding the dams on the river to keep up navigation. About the year 1862 he moved to this village, buying his extensive farm where he has since made his home, in the mean time adding several hundred acres of vauable lands in Volney and Schrœppel. "The great swamp," a few miles south, once deemed almost worthless from the treacherous nature of its surface, has by nearly superhuman effort been made to blossom as a rose, and public a highway built across its bogs and quick sands, mainly the labor of him of whom we write. During all these years of land owning and farm clearing, he was much of the time engaged on public works, being connected with contractors Harroun, Gale, C. E. Case, Willard Johnson, Keeler, DeGraw, G. M. Case, and others. It is told, that in the great job of lowering the bottom of the Mississippi river, there were some two hundred bidders for the work and at the time, the angry waters made it very difficult to bid intelligently. Mr. VanWagenen was seen with arms full of pieces of wood, boarding a steamer soon to pass over the ground in question. With these blocks of wood thrown in the stream he got a good idea of the depth by the current and eddies, as indicated by their motion. He said nothing, but made his bid according to his own judgement. When it was soon after learned he was the successful bidder, his friends and backers were amazed, fearing the price was too small, when a stranger at once offered $50,000 for a half interest, which led them to think that he knew what he was a doing. The contract proved a good one. The energy and foresight displayed here, so pleased government engineer Wilson he afterwards offered him a large contract in removing the rock at Hell Gate. Other public work was done in the West. Eighteen years ago, in connection with the late C. E. Case, he kept the Erie canal in repair from Frankfort to Higginsville. In 1864, when the high water broke through the high dam, near Oswego, preventing navigation and the supperintendent was unable to stop the break, the citizens of Oswego asked that he be put in charge of the work, and he was appointed to it by the canal Board and did the work very successfully. He built the magnificent stone dam which spans our river, with much work in the enlargement of the Oswego Canal and in changing the locks from wood to stone. Among the later contracts was quite extensive work for the Oswego Falls factories. In all his public and private jobs in which he has employed a vast number of men, no one has ever been heard to complain of his treatment. Few, if any possessed so kind a heart or one so ready to respond to every call for help. His religion was to do good; to show kindness, and mercy and benovolence toward all his fellows. His gifts to the poor and needy were large but unheralded. To his family he endeared himself by kindness and devotion. To his friends and neighbors by benovolent acts and unselfish manners. Of a family of seven children four are still living. Mrs. Dr. Jenkins of Keokuk, Iowa, Mrs. Amos Woliver, and Mrs. G. J. Emeny of Fulton and Fred D. VanWagenen, jr.

The career of Mr. VanWagenen teaches the lesson, that at the hands of a man thoroughly conversant with his business, persevering, energetic, faithful to trust, upright in his relations with his fellow men, success is sure, both here and hereafter.

Poultry Notes.

Poultry on a large scale will doubtless succeed when the same proportionate care is given to several thousand fowls that the successful manager of fifty gives to his flocks. That is, the man who succeeds with fifty, can succeed with a thousand equally well by giving the thousand twenty times the care of fifty. If not ready to do something like that, he had better not undertake poultry on a large scale.

It is only a greenhorn who is caught with the idea that a new and much-puffed variety of fowls, just discovered or imported, is better than anything yet known. Only give the old sorts good care and they will do well enough, and often a great deal better than the new ones at fancy prices.

Fowls in confinement must have grass provided for them, or they will not thrive. Careless observers will be surprised to know how much grass a hen eats in a year. A small flock will keep down all vegetation in a yard of considerable size.

A fresh egg has a clear, yellow color when held to the eye so that the sun or a bright light can fall upon it. The fingers should enclose it so the light is excluded from passing between the fingers and the shell. Eggs which admit no light are bad. Dealers who handle eggs in large quantities "candle" them, that is examine them in a dark room by holding them near a candle or lamp so [illegible] light will pass through.

[illegible] Light Brama fowls are handsome [illegible] when in full feather, and doubtless have as many merits, all things considered, as any other breed, if not more. "I just stopped the car that these dead animals came out of from going through without feeding," Mr. Brayton said to a Journal reporter. "The load was made up of calves, sheep and hogs, and these lambs were trampled to death by the calves. They were shipped from the centre of the State. The intention was to send them through without watering or feeding to New York. The law says that they shall be watered and fed every twenty-four hours. I made them unload the car. Am I right?"

"Is much cruelty practiced up here?"

"Well, that depends on what you call cruelty. These platforms are in such a wretched condition that stock is maimed almost daily. The other day a cow fell in between the platform and the car while getting out, and broke both hind legs. She was sold to an Albany peddlar. The animal was unable to lift herself, and lay here in agony until the afternoon. I sent word to the man who purchased her, that unless he came here and took the animal away, I would shoot her. Before he made up his mind to cart her away, a lot of hogs were unloaded. The half-starved animals attacked the cow and ate her udder, thus adding more pain and suffering. Yesterday a flock of sheep were being driven over the bridge crossing the tracks at Watervliet Avenue, when two had their legs broken by catching them between the planking. A tender-hearted man would shudder were he to come up here and remain for a day."—[Albany Journal.

Wasteful Wintering.

Much feed is thrown away every winter in the common management of stock. I do not mean the fodder actually wasted in farmyard or stable, but that which is fed, especially to younger animals. For instance, suppose I feed four calves and six yearlings all winter, and in the spring they are no larger than in the previous fall, how much of the fodder they have consumed is wasted. I will have a pile of manure proportionate to the fodder eaten, but it will be worth no more than the cost of the labor in taking care of the stock. In order to realize any gian in these animals I must wait for the extra growth they may make in summer pasture. This, undoubtedly, is the actual result of wintering a large proportion of the young cattle in this country. They are fed enough to keep them alive, or it may be better than this, to enable them to about hold their own, that is not to fall away much.

When an animal is fed enough to maintain life and locomotion, and this of course is necessary, such additional food as it may have will naturally, if it isn't required to keep it from freezing (which is not often the case,) make growth, if a young one and more flesh if it is matured or full grown. This growth, or increase, will be according to the kind of food given. If the food is coarse or weak the animal cannot consume more than enough to maintain vitality, hence stronger or richer food is essential to profits. I should expect to obtain this with calves, by giving them each a quart of bran and oilmeal. They should be in a roomy stable with a rack for hay on one side and feed-boxes for meal on another, and a trough in the stable for water, to be carried to them. I would not let these calves out of the stable once during the winter. It should be cleaned out every day, and a little fresh litter scattered on the floor.

If these calves had a feeding of roots with their meal, I should consider their management perfect, but all the roots I had might be needed for the fattening of cattle. But the calves would get all the hay they would. The yearlings, on the contrary, would be tied in stables with halters. This treatment would get them accustomed to being handled, making them gentle. They would be fed double the quantity of the same mixture, bran and meal, with a change from hay to cornstalks. They would be turned into the yard in the middle of the day for drink. This two quarts of meal would make growth and in the spring I would expect them to be larger than they were in the fall, and in equal, if not better, condition. This would more than pay for the meal because they would go into pasture strong and vigorous, and begin to grow at once, which would not be the case if they had nothing in the winter but the coarse fodder, for then it would take a month perhaps to get them started so that they would thrive.—[Cor. New York Tribune.

A Man of Titles.

I heard a funny story the other day about a young nobleman, a number of [illegible]

[illegible] I [illegible] them. I [illegible] it." And so he [illegible] his life. A real boy is also [illegible], gentle, [illegible], generous. He takes the part of small boys against larger boys. He discourages fighting. He refuses to be a party in mischief and deceit.

Above all things he is never afraid to show his colors. He need not always be interrupting, but he ought not to be ashamed to say that he refuses to do anything because it is wrong and wicked or because he fears God, or is a Christian. A real boy never takes part in the ridicule of sacred things, but meets the ridicule of others with a bold statement that for all things of God he feels the deepest reverence. And a real boy is not ashamed to say "father" or "mother will not like it if I do so and so." It is only your sham, milk-and-water boys that are afraid to do right. Every one respects the real boy, and every one despises the sham, too-big-for-his-parents, smoking, tobacco-loving coward, who is afraid to do right for fear of a little ridicule.—[The Outlook.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In 1875, thirteen men comprised the entire working force used in the manufacture of the James Boss' Gold Watch Case. Now over five hundred are employed, and the number is constantly increasing. The reason of this increase is this: In the James Boss' Gold Watch Case all the metal in sight and subject to wear is solid gold, while the remainder, which only lends strength to the case, is of stronger metal than gold, giving gold where gold is needed, and strong, elastic metal where strength and elasticity are needed, a combination producing a watch case better than solid gold and at ONE-HALF the cost.

Over 200,000 of these cases have been sold, and every jeweler in the country can testify to their quality and merit.

Burns's Blue-Eyed Lassie.

The title of a tract of about 600 acres of land lying at the head of Cayuga lake between the shore and the village of Ithaca is in law in that village. The heirships are exceedingly complicated, the original titles running back into the last century. The lineal contestants are two families named Renwick and Moody, the former being in possession. The Renwick heirs now living consist of children and grandchildren of Major Robert Renwick, deceased, who was the last surviving son of William and Jane Renwick, his wife. But the last named was, before her marriage with William Renwick, Miss Jane Jeffrey, of Lochmaben in Dumfreishire, Scotland, was "The Blue-eyed Lassie" of Robert Burns's song.

Writing in 1838 to a sister in Canandaigua, New York, Mrs. Renwick, who retained till she died at the age of 77, remarkable cheerfulness of countenance and brightness of "een sae blue," recalls lovingly her recollections of the poet. "Poor, poor, Burns," she writes to Mrs. Jeffrey, "how often have I seen him in a cold winter's night when he had been riding for hours over the moors and mosses after smugglers (what a task for such a spirit!) open our little parlor door and stalk in with his great lion-skin coat and fur cap covered with snow, and his fine Newfoundland dog, Thurlow, at his side looking glum and sour as if at war with the world. With kindness he was welcomed by our parents, while my sister and self seated him in mother's easy chair, brought warm slippers and prepared for him a warm, comfortable cup of tea. Then seating ourselves on our low creepies at his feet we would watch his countenance brighten up into almost more than mortal beauty and intelligence, and listened to his inspired words, every one of which was absolute poetry." Mrs. Renwick had in her possession a volume on a fly leaf, of which Burns himself wrote a song celebrating in words and lines Jennie Jeffrey's charms, the chorus of which is:

"She's aye sae blithe and gay.
She's aye sae blithe and cheery,
She's aye sae bonnie, blithe and gay,
O gin I were her deary."

But Burns was not Jennie's deary. She marred, as before stated, William Renwick and the last of their seven children, Major Robert Renwick, was some years ago a well-known figure on the streets of Ithaca. He lived a secluded life near the lake and his sole occupation for years was daily to drive a steady-going roan horse before a rickety but safe old wagon up to the village and back. He liked his glass and when in town was the regular customer of a particular saloon. Often he would stay so late at night and meet so many friends at the saloon, his patient old horse meantime with head down dreaming at the hitching post, that it would be necessary for some one to accompany him back to his home although the horse would go true if let alone by the street boys.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY, [illegible]

DEAR SIR: [illegible]

In the summer and fall of 188[illegible] when we had the heavy centennial travel, the constant [illegible] brought on acute attacks nearly every week and I thought I should have to leave the road. But I kept at work until the next spring, when I grew so much worse that I could virtually eat nothing, and concluded that my labor, and my life too, were about over.

Remember that I had tried every medicine I heard of, and had been treated by some of the best physicians in [illegible]. At this critical time DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended to me. It was new to me, and with my experience of medicines, you can easily forgive me for saying that I had not a particle of faith in it.

I had taken it but a few days when I began to get better. The raw and sore feeling left my stomach, and the excruciating pains left my head, and soon I was all right, and have been ever since. It is the only thing that ever did me the least good, and it drove every ache, pain and discomfort completely out of my body. Now I keep KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY with me on my engine, and it goes wherever I go.

Why, I believe FAVORITE REMEDY will cure anything. One night, a while ago, John Layton, an engineer who runs the main line boat train from Boston, came on my engine sick as death. He was worn out with work, had a high fever, and was so nervous he almost broke down crying. "Nonsense, John," I said, "cheer up, I've got something on my engine that will set you up in a jiffy." I took out my bottle of FAVORITE REMEDY, lifted his head and gave him a good dose. He went to bed. Two days after I saw him looking healthy as a butcher. "Dan," he said, "what was that stuff you gave me the other night?" "It was DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y." said I. "Well, I don't care whose remedy it is, it's the thing for a man on the railroad." So say we all.

Yours, etc., DANIEL FITTS.

This preparation goes to the root of disease by purifying the blood and rousing every organ into healthy action. It is useful at home, shops, in office—everywhere.

Of whom you speak,
To whom you speak,
And how, and when, and where.

If you your ears
Would keep from jeers,
These things keep meekly hid:
Myself and I,
And mine and my,
And how "I" do or did.

"MUSIC HATH CHARMS."

Written by The Wandering Jew For The Times.

THE SYMPHONY.

"But presently
A velvet flute note fell down pleasantly,
Upon the bosom of that harmony,
And sailed and sailed incessantly,
As if, a petal from a wild rose blown
Had fluttered down upon that pool of tone
And boat-wise dropped o' the convex side
And floated down the glassy tide,
And clarified and glorified
The solemn space where the shallows bide."
SIDNEY LANIER.

"Yes Meda! he's there again and now he's darning a pair of stockings. He handles the needle well, is actually working as neatly as you or I could. But isn't he handsome though?"

And again the open glass was leveled at the window opposite, and the two girls laughed, and chatted at the expense of the unconscious worker.

"And yesterday Vere he was singing the song of the shirt, and sewing on buttons at the same time. What a nice voice he has, and that elegant mustache! I think it's a shame that he has to do all this own mending. But isn't he nice?"

Soon the subjects of their remarks vanished, only to reappear on the street, and pass from their sight. But his light hearted merry whistle stayed with the girls, and they unconsciously hummed the bright little tune he had so nicely whistled. He was a study to the girls; as they had taken enough interest to throw around them the cloak of mystery, and a week before they had first noticed him as he ran lightly up the steps of Mrs. Purdy's boarding house, across the street from their home.

Mrs. Purdy presided over a very select house, so the young ladies concluded that their hero was well-to-do.

Every morning at nine he left the house, came back at five in the afternoon, and after dinner went out again. Sundays he always stayed in his room until evening, and as the room was on the same level with the girls' they had no trouble to watch him while his curtain was drawn. They both knew that it was not the proper thing to do, "but then he could not see them, and he was so nice."

Meda and Vere Reed were twins, and both so closely resembled the other, that their friends often had to ask them their names before they asked a question.

To be sure they did not dress alike, and in this way their lady friends could tell the difference, but the gentlemen—not as well informed on the matter of dress were always uncertain how to address them. Their father was a retired merchant, and lived in fine style "on the heights," and his family moved in the best society.

Meda was dramatic, and artistic, and always appeared as a reader for sweet charities sake. She was brighter than her sister Vere, who was a great bookworm, and a fine musician.

She played the harp, guitar and piano with equal brilliancy, but preferred the harp; and she would sometimes sit for hours lightly picking the strings of her favorite instrument and singing the ballads, and tender songs she loved, so so well. Her voice, low but flexible, [illegible] suited the song she sang, and as [illegible] was sensible, she knew it, and never attempted any of the heavier music. The girls were eighteen years old, and did not have much company, [illegible] the father said, "he was getting old, [illegible] he wanted to have the girls around him for company while he lived, and they were too young to have any beaux yet."

On all other subjects he was very kind and considerate, [illegible]

[illegible] they had ever heard, and it carried them as it were, to Germany. Lullabys, cradle songs, and warbles followed each other, and for over an hour the two sisters sat at the window, and listened; forgetful of their dinner, and all surroundings, and when the music died away as softly as it had come to them. Neither cared to break the silence until they saw their "mystery" across the street, light his gas, and put away an odd looking stringed instrument.

It's a zither Meda, but he plays it different than any one I ever heard" and Vere relapsed into silence again.

"Come! come! Vere! What's the matter, has he bewitched you with his zither? Come! we've already missed our dinner."

"Oh! Meda! was not that music heavenly? I am sure that that man must be refined, and pure, and he surely is talented, or he could not bring forth such music,

You have often laughed about my ideas in regard to affinities and fate but I still believe them, and feel now that this man has spoken to me with his zither." I know that I shall meet, and know him, and that our meeting will to a certain extent govern my whole life. This is fate, and I believe it Meda, as thoroughly as I believe in this bible here."

Meda did not answer, but laughed strangely at her sister, and left her, still seated at the window thinking of this new emotion that had taken hold of her, and trying to think how it would end. She roused herself, and drawing the harp to her, let her fingers wander at random on the strings.

She did not notice that the light went out across the way, and did not know that she had a listener, until during a pause in her playing she heard the zither repeating the same air she had just finished, but with more feeling than she could possibly put into it. And for another hour the music went on uninterrupted. First the harp, then the answer from the zither until with regret she heard the "good night song" come over to her in the same soft indescribable notes that had in the early evening entranced her. She gave the strings a parting touch, and leaving them still vibrating went down stairs, and took her place in the family circle.

That evening at the piano she played with so much spirit and feeling that her people were surprised, and wondered what had made the change.

And vere went to her room so happy that when she looked in her mirror she did not know herself.

What did she have on which to build her happiness?

A mere nothing. A few floating, vapory notes. Not tangible and out of her grasp, but to her it was like a story written on a stone tablet.

The next morning she watched for the young man, and when he left the house she saw him look over, and smile at her windows.

The evening concerts continued for some weeks, and the players brought forth all the music they had laid aside, and played it for each other's benefit.

Meda did most of the shopping for the family, and it was on these expeditions that she met Mrs. Chase, a married friend of the family and the two walked home together.

During the evening meal Meda asked her sister if she would call on Mrs. Chase with her.

Mrs. Chase "had a surprise for them, and a treat too, and they need not stay late."

"Oh! Meda! I can't go, for I have some new music I want to play," and Vere ran up stairs, drew the harp to the window, and sent forth the customary signal. As no response came from across the way she was nearly at the crying point, but she went down stairs again, and told her sister that she would go to Mrs. Chase' after all.

Seated in their friends cosey back parlor they chatted until the bell rang, and their hostess rose to admit a young man who addressed her as "aunt Frank" in a voice that sounded familiar to Vere.

"Girls, allow me to present my nephew, Mr. Edward Plaisted. Ned—the Misses Reed, Vere, and Meda, but you must find out which is which, for yourself."

Ned advanced, and shook hands saying at the same time that it was a surprise to him for he had never seen but one of them before.

"And which plays the harp please?" "Vere is the guilty party sir, said Meda; at which Vere blushing profusely vanished into the next room. At his aunt's request the young man produced his zither, and after he had begun to play Vere came silently back, and found a chair that was hidden behind the piano.

After a few stray notes Ned said he "would give them what he called, all nations."

He began with the wild, strange music of Poland—the dances, church music, and national hymns. Then the music from Russia in the same order, and this was followed by the familiar [illegible] from the British Isles.

The light [illegible] of France followed [illegible] the [illegible] Spanish [illegible] and sent the weird [illegible] suggestive of the desert, and its untamed people.

Music peculiar to America brought the medley to a close, and the player was about to put away the zither. "Oh Mr. Plaisted, please play that German music for us before you put your instrument away." And Vere came from [illegible] the piano, and took a seat [illegible]

[illegible] ed her. The player deeply [illegible] his zither, in a lower key, but the notes so clear and smooth, blended with the stringed instrument so harmoniously that the music came as from one source, and then Ned sang some of the cradle songs and serenades peculiar to the Tyrols, with such effect, that the hearty encore called forth more of the same, and it was late when the little party separated.

On the way to their home Ned told the girls of the musical paper he was editing in New York; all about its success, his hopes, his aspirations, and then he spoke of the long years he had spent in the beloved German mountains, with his invalid mother, of her subsequent death, and his return to New York, and the busy world. While in the quiet Tyrol village he had learned music thoroughly, and had mastered the zither, thanks to his friend and tutor, Herr Graeffing.

His story was interrupted by their arrival at their destination, and as they separated they agreed to meet again soon at Mrs. Chase's.

He wondered why they had not asked him to call, but Vere told him frankly, the next time they met, of her father's aversion to young men, and this satisfied him.

The concerts went on during the summer, and fall, and the meetings at aunty Chase's too, but Meda seldom went now for she was a third party, and knew too well the place of the third party.

The winter brought to the Reed family their first great sorrow they had ever experienced—the father's, and husband's death—but this was followed shortly by a great joy for Vere when the Knight of the zither formally asked the mother for her daughter's hand.

There was no need of asking Vere the question, for he knew too well what her answer would be.

Some months after when he took the chair at the head of their table, made vacant by death, he received a hearty welcome from his new found mother, and sisters; and his wife at his right hand, told the mother for the first time of their happy courtship, and he then learned that his wife had seen him darning and sewing on his clothes, and that this was what lead to the happy termination of his boarding house experience. The harp and the zither occupy prominent places in the house, and almost every evening, after dinner, Ned—as engineer—takes the party to Tyrol on his train of melody.

How They Used To Dress.

Luke P. Polard is the only relic of the old statesmen of the days of Clay, Calhoun, and Webster. He still clings to the swallowtail coat with the bright gold buttons, which were used by the other fashionable men of that time. It is cleaner and prittier than the Prince Albert or the cutaway of the present. In fact the dress of men has been growing simpler during the past century. Washington, who died in 1799 wore ruffles on his sleeves, and half of the men who signed the Declaration of Independence wore powdered wigs. Jefferson sported knee breeches, and Madison was proud of having worn a suit of clothes of American make at his inauguration. Daniel Webster usually wore a suit of snuff-brown color, with a large, soft necktie. Martin VanBuren was very fastidious about his clothes, and always appeared during the summer in in the whitest of white duck linen. His clothes were cut in the latest styles, and he wore very high stock neckties, out of which peeped his standing collar, making his head look like that of John the Baptist on a charger. Andrew Jackson also dressed well, though he did not make his clothes a great matter. Henry Clay wore a swallowtail, and a standing collar extravagantly high. James Buchanan was always very precise in his clothes, always appearing in full dress. He had a great trouble as to how he should appear when he was our Minister to England, and the discussion involved even the Queen of England herself.

A Quadruple's Superior Power.

One evening many years ago the writer of this attended a social gathering of young folks in a Wisconsin village, and after various games had been played, all involving more or less osculatory practice, there was a lull in the exercises, and we all sat around in the front parlor eating nuts and pop-corn. A very fine Newfoundland dog lay stretched out near the fire, and Carrie, the lively daughter of the hostess, called Bruno to her, and told him to stand up, and amused us for some time by placing kernels of corn on his nose, and repeating: "One, two, three—fire!" when the dog would toss the corn up, catch it and eat it with much relish. She then made him lie down and roll over, and do various tircks, finally closing by having him stand on his head. As the noble dog resumed his natural position Carrie said to Charlie W. "There Charlie you can't beat that." Just at that moment, when all eyes were still on the dog, he dropped on his haunches and commenced vigorously scratching his ear with his hind foot in the effort to dislodge a wicked flea. "No, I don't believe I can," said Charlie, "nor you either." And then a cyclone of laughter swept through the room, and Carrie's cheeks were the color of the red, red rose. Those were good old days. —[Detroit Commercial.

FASHION NOTES.

Tam O'Shanter caps are now made of straw.

Ribbons are much wider than any used of late.

Chantilly lace will be much used next season.

Wool laces are inwrought with gilt or silver threads.

All watered and mottled effects are to be revived for millinery.

All the shades of heliotrope and lilac are in high favor abroad.

Colored jerseys are trimmed with cascades of lace of the same shade.

Little girls' petticoats have flounces in the back to make the skirt set full.

Plaid and striped ribbons will be much used for trimming early spring hats.

The bayadere stripes with illuminated figures are seen on ribbons of all fabrics.

Spring suits will be made with short basques, long drapery and plain lower skirts.

No matter how pretty the toilet, unless the neck is becomingly dressed, the effect is lost.

Gauze ribbons striped with velvet or dotted with chenille will be used for trimming bonnets.

Jet still holds a firm place in the trimming world, the preference now being to gimps entirely of jet.

Necklets of velvet, satin, metal and all sorts of materials are worn by women, young girls and children.

Fish-wife pokes of white felt, worn by little girls, have little trimmings besides the huge bow on top of blue or scarlet velvet ribbon.

Scarfs, six or seven inches wide, made of etamine, the new canvass fabric, or of silk surah, are imported for trimming hats and bonnets.

Round hats of straw are made in shapes similiar to those now made in felt, and will be trimmed with the moyenage scarfs and handkerchiefs.

A new may of trimming a waist is to gather a fold of silk into the left shoulder seam, and then fold it across the waist, letting it end in a point on the right side.

The English housemaid dress, that is, the dress devoid of tunic or overskirt of any description, and will form a very popular model for toilets for home wear the coming spring and summer.

A pretty model for a child's school apron has a little yoke of embroirdery and short puffed sleeves, a wide belt of embroidery with the apron gathered on to it and falling to the knee.

Scarfs, handkerchief, ribbons, and fabrics for making bonnets are emblazoned to imitate mediæval banners, heraldic designs, and other quaint decorations of the middle ages. These are called moyenage designs.

Wide turn-over collars, handsomely embroidered in white, are much worn by stylish young ladies. These fasten with a jeweled collar button, and a marine knot, and ends of silk or ribbon in rich Persian colors are added below.

Helitrope is the fashionable scent at present for gloves, handkerchiefs and laces. Tiny sachets are placed in the hems of dresses or in some part of the waists; in short there is no portion of a lady's toilet that is not fragrant with this perfume.

Sententious Sayings.

Cicero: To live long it is necessary to live slowly.

Confucius: To die well one must first learn to live well.

Ruskin: Conceit may puff a man up, but never prop him up.

Ovid: Take a rest; a field that has rested gives a bountiful crop.

Seneca: The plant that is often transplanted does not prosper.

Longfellow: In this world a man must either be anvil or hammer.

Franklin: All investment in knowledge always pays the best interest.

Seneca: Enjoy present pleasures in such a way as not to injure future ones.

Lowell: No man is born into the world whose work is not born with him.

Wordsworth: Wisdom is oftimes nearer when we stoop than when we soar.

Herbert: He that cannot forgive others breaks the bridge over which he must pass himself, for every man has need to be forgiven.

Quarles: Give not thy tongue too great a liberty, lest it take thee prisoner. A word unspoken is, like the sword in the scabbard, thine; if vented, thy sword is in another's hand.

It is impossible to make people understand their ignorance, for it requires knowledge to perceive it; and therefore; he that can perceive it hath it not.

Never hold any one by the button, or by the hand, in order to be heard out; for if people are unwilling to hear you, you had better hold your tongue than them.

Our Toledo Letter.

UNCLE BEN ON THE SPOT.

TOLEDO, O. Feb. 17th, 1885.

Editor of Fulton Times:—

While a gentleman and myself were passing down Adams street Monday morning the 16th inst., when getting near Summit street a well dressed gentleman was seen on the street with the stock of a huge pistol protruding from his pocket and vengeance beaming from his countenance. We approached him cautiously to enquire what it all meant. "Mean! it means business," said the man with a belligerent look, and fire in his eye, "Yesterday the sun shone out nice and warm. When I went to bed last night the eaves dripped nicely and I went to sleep to dream of balmy breezes and a reduction of coal bills, not even taking the precaution to place a chunk of coal in my kitchen stove. When I got up this morning I found my tea kettle frozen solid, the filterer was a mass of ice, my potatoes were hard as rocks, the cabbage was ruined, the pitcher was broken, and so were several goblets in which water had been left, and I nearly froze to death before I could get a fire. My wife cried because her canary had frozen to death and the pitcher which her grandmother had used was broken. We were both out of humor and it wouldn't take many such freezes to destroy our affection along with the balance of things. I tell you I won't stand this. If Sergeant Buel don't take down that cold wave white flag with a black center, I'll make a center shot on him and put an end to this kind of business," and the fellow examined his pistol to see that it was all right. That is the kind of men we have in Toledo. They don't believe in so many cold waves. A. P.

Worth Thinking of.

Whenever we are conscious of the least comparative merit we should take much care to conceal the value set upon it.

Self-reliance is the best surety against failure, but it is well to cultivate a friend who can assist us in time of need.

We show little judgement by exhibiting our annoyance by our looks, and less by bursting into a passion about them.

Egotists see the world cheerless and ugly; their ways have so warped their sight that all things appear like themselves.

Hard words are like hailstones in summer, which, if melted out to softness, would fertilize the plants they batter down.

Have the courage to face a difficulty, even though it should kick you harder than you bargained for. Difficulties, like thieves, often disappear at a glance.

The law of harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act, and you reap a habit; sow a habit and you reap a character; sow a character, and you reap a destiny.

[illegible] passed the agricultural [illegible] bill Friday.

[illegible] week from to-day Grover Cleveland will occupy the Presidential chair.

The committee on public comfort has obtained quarters for 15,000 visitors to the inauguration ceremonies.

The coinage of one of the five cent pieces has been suspended, there being a sufficient quantity now in circulation.

Carl Schurz was closeted with Mr. Cleveland some two hours on Wednesday. He declares he is not seeking a Cabinet position.

Senator Warner Miller on Friday reported favorably to the Senate the House bill for the preservation of forests, on the public domain.

At present 415 stone cutters are employed on the capitol at Albany. A large addition will be made to the workmen of all classes in a few days.

General Rogers of Buffalo has resigned his military office, and it is rumored in political circles that he will succeed Mr. Rounds as public printer, under Mr. Cleveland.

Gov. Hill has accepted the resignation of Col. Daniel S. Lamont as private secretary to the governor and promoted executive clerk Col. William G. Rice of Albany to the vacancy.

Wm. C. Kingsley, one of the founders of the Brooklyn bridge died Saturday morning. He leaves an estate of several millions. He was born in Fort Covington, Franklin county, and was a self made man.

William M. Evarts attended a meeting of the Yale Alumni association in New York Friday evening. In an address he said that he believed that he was the first son of Yale to represent the State of New York in the United States Senate.

The business failures during last week as reported to R. G. Dunn & Company's mercantile agency, number 253 for the United States and 37 for Canada, a total of 290 as compared with 270 the preceding week. Nearly four-fifths of the failures are furnished by the Western, Southern and Pacific States.

Gov. Hill is as methodical in his habits as his predecessor. The Governor breakfasts about 8 o'clock, takes a very light lunch at 1 o'clock and enjoys a hearty dinner at 6:30 p. m. This is his favorite meal, and generally two or three friends are invited to join in it with the Governor and his military secretary, who keep "bachelor's hall" at the executive mansion in royal style. While the dinner is elaborate, Gov. Hill indulges in only a light breakfast, consisting of a roll and a cup of coffee, eggs and milk.—[Albany Journal.

The death of General Herbert Stewart swells to five the list of England's costly sacrifices of gallant officers to secure only the humiliation of a perilious retreat before advancing hordes of El Mahdi's fanatics. Colonel Stewart was massacred early in October, after his steamer was wrecked near Berber. January 16, Colonel Burnaby, the hero of the ride to Khiva, was killed in the battle at the Abu Klea wells. Januaay 26 General Gordon was murdered at the fall of Khartoum. On the 10th of February General Earle was killed while leading a charge at Berti, not far from the scene of the massacre of Colonel Stewart.

Congress is now agitating the question of building a navy. The Republican members of the House are willing to lend their aid to the scheme. Mr. Hewitt said he was ready to vote $30,000,000 for the restoration of the American navy. Mr. Talcott offered an amendment appropriating $1,780,000 for the [illegible] of a steel cruiser of not less [illegible],000 nor more than 5,000 tons displacement and armament therefor, authorized by the act of Congress approved August 5, 1882. This was adopted, [illegible] and on motion of Mr. Randall [illegible] was amended by adding [illegible] that the Secretary of the [illegible] shall approve the construction of [illegible] vessel.

The husband of Elsa VonBlumen, the bicyclist, E. E. Bearsley, a young Pulaski farmer, has been unsuccessful in his suit for divorce. She went to Pulaski and lived with him one day, which, without his knowledge, ruined his case. The next day she left and has not since been seen by him. He is now uncertain what to do.

The total production of the three glass factories of Cleveland Oswego county, during the month of January was 9,708 boxes of glass, which is regarded as an exceptional showing. Large shipments of glass have been made recently, and it is understood that there are orders enough on hand now to take the full production of the three furnaces for two months to come.

Edward Kirk of Oswego, was a short time ago interested with M. Merrick in the flax business. On account of some alleged irregularities Mr. Merrick went before the grand jury and had Mr. Kirk indicted, it is said, on the charge of grand larceny. Mr. Kirk has been in Philadelphia for some time, and on Tuesday last was arrested on telegram from Sheriff Beadle. He will be brought to Oswego.

Augustus A. Rehambo died at his residence in this village at three o'clock this morning of typhoid pneumonia, aged 56. The deceased came to Phœnix from Fulton twenty years ago, but shortly after removed to Pennsylvia. He returned again to Phœnix, and has resided here for the past fifteen years. He leaves a wife and seven children. Six of the children are boys, most of whom are in business for themselves. —[Phœnix Register.

The March Magizines.

THE CENTURY

for March opens with "The Land of the false Prophet" an article illustrated with numerous descriptive maps. It is a paper of special interest at this time. The author, Gen. R. E. Colston, formerly of the Egyptian General staff, was a leader of two expeditions in the Soudan. It also contains a portrait of the late General Gordon from a photograph made soon after his first entrance into Egypt. There are four fully illustrated articles on the American Civil War which have so increased the circulation. The senior surviving officer of the Merrimac discribes the combat with the Monitor in "The First Fight with Iron Clads," the reading of which vividly recalls the exciting scenes in the early war in the naval enjoyment in the Hampton Roads. 'The Bostonians' by Henry Jones begun last month is continued. The 'New Astronomy" an illustrated series upon "The planets and the moon" by S. P. Langley is of especial interest. Topics of the Time, Open Letters and Bric-a-brac complete the volume.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY

for March is an unusually spirited number. Dr. Holmes definitely opens his "New Portfolio," and the first glimpse between its chvers invites another look at the sprightly and engaging contents. The three serials by Miss Jewett, Mrs. Oliphant and Mr. Craddock greatly increase in interest and promise to add new luster to these already famous writers. Among other important papers is a sketch by Clara Banner Martin called "The mother of Turgeneff" which gives a curious account of the early influences of the great novelist and a vivid picture of Russian home life fifty years ago. The Contributors' Club, which gossips of Mr. Watts' paintings, closes this interesting and attractive issue.

ST. NICHOLAS.

The March St. Nicholas gives on its opening page the "Inauguration of President Garfield." This is to illustrate [illegible]

[illegible] and he wants to sell goods so bad he can't pay his rent, he takes out his advertisement. That is some of them do, but occasionally a level headed merchant puts in a bigger one and scoops in all the business while his neighbors are making mortgages to pay the gas bill.

There are times when you couldn't stop people from buying everything in the store if you planted a cannon behind the door, and that's the time the advertisement is sent out on its holy mission. It makes light work for the advertisement, for a chalk sign on the sidewalk could do all that was needed and have a half holiday six days in the week, but who wants to favor an advertisement?

They are built to do hard work, and should be sent out in the dull days when a customer has to be knocked down with hard facts, and kicked insensible with bankrupt reductions and dragged in with irresistible slaughter of prices before he will spend a cent.

That's the aim and end of an advertisement, my son, and if you ever open a store don't try to get them to come when they are already sticking out of the windows, but give them your advertisement right between the eyes in the dull season, and you will wax rich and own a fast horse, and perhaps be able to smoke a good cigar once or twice a year. Writ this down where you'll fall over it every day. The time to draw business is when you want business, and not when you have more business than you can attend to already.

Industrial Notes.

Haverstraw, N. Y., is the greatest brick manufacturing center in America.

There were 4,700,000 less cigars manufactured and sold last month in New York city than in the corresponding month last year.

The New York plasterers are prepairing for trouble this spring with some of their bosses. They have a strong union, work nine hours a day, for which they they get $4.

A shorter working day—eight hours—is being discussed not only by workingmen, but by manufacturers. If it could be made a national movement every one would be satisfied.—[New York Sun.

"By paying every man according to his value," said Mr. Robinson, of the firm of Delamater & Co., the iron manufacturers of New York city, "we have found out a means to prevent strikes."

One of the principal industries of the town of Belmont, Alleghany county, is making wooden toothpicks. One establishment turns out from one to three hundred cases weekly, and they are shipped to all parts of the world.

It is estimated at the lowest calculation that there are 75,000 men and women idle in New York city, which means, at least, $1,000,000 a week lost in wages. It also means poverty and consequent crime in many cases, and may mean pauperism and loss of self-respect.—[N. Y. World.

Fifty new tobacco factories were built in North Carolina last year. Tobacco farmers are reported as making a profit of from $100 to $400 an acre from their crops, and the cultivation of the weed is rapidly increasing in that state and Virginia.

GENERAL NEWS

The World says Vanderbilt has lost $80,000,000 since 1881.

In Stanton, Mich., a block of six frame houses was destroyed by fire. Loss $25,000

Another explosion of natural gas occured at Pittsburg Pa., Saturday killing six persons.

In Rome, Minister Astor had an interview with the King Sunday, at which cordial wishes were mutually expressed for the welfare of Italy and America.

Three dwelling houses were burned in Phila., last Saturday. In the house where the fire originated the occupants were asleep and perished in the flames.

The Lord Mayor of London has issued an appeal to the public for funds to assist the large number of people thrown out of work because of the depression in trade.

The schooner F. K. Collins, from Galveston for Boston, with cotton and old iron caught fire Sunday night from a lamp explosion and burned. the crew rowed eight miles to shore.

At Big Springs, Texas, a gang of cowboys attempted to run the town Sunday evening. A posse demanded their surrender and general firing ensued. One cowboy was killed and two were seriously injured.

The connecting rod on an engine on the Panhandle road broke near Cincinnati Sunday. Engineer Connell thinking a serious accident imminent jumped and was killed. The fireman, who remained on the engine, was uninjured.

The people in Gilmer, Braxton and Calhoun counties West Virginia, suffer for want of food. The crops last year were a failure, and the supply of grain is nearly exhausted. The cattle are dying by the hundreds.

The British steamer Dearbound, Saturday, rescued and brought to Baltimore a portion of the crew of the bark Erinna, from New York to Antwerp. One of the crew was drowned and several were badly injured in a heavy gale and the vessel abandoned. Thirteen were saved by the Dearbound. The bark soon afterwards took fire and burned.

Mrs. Sullivan, wife of John L. Sullivan, the pugilist, has filed an application of divorce [illegible]

[illegible] it, and it was distinctly pronounced a finished work. It is the noblest monument ever reared by man to man. It exceeds the pyramids in height, as well as all monuments of ancient or modern times, and it transcends them all in the moral grandeur of the sentiment that reared it and in the character it commemorates. When the corner stone was laid in 1858, the orator of the occasion, Hon. Robert Winthrop, said in his address: Build it to the skies, you cannot outreach the loftiness of his principles; found it upon eternal rock, you cannot make it more enduring than his fame; construct it of the Parian marble, you cannot make it purer than his life; exhaust upon it the principles of ancient and modern art, you cannot make it more proportionate than his character.

A grand stand decorated with flags, streamers, and bunting had been erected at the base of the monument. On this the President, Congress and invited guests, distinguished and otherwise, to the number of about fifteen hundred, assembled to hear the speeches. At their conclusion, the immense procession which had been arranging for hours to fall properly in line, proceeded to march to the Capitol, marshalled by Gen. Sheridan. Members of Congress rode in carriages, and all the aids representing states and territories, were on horseback. Brass bands were scattered along in the line at intervals; there were various battallions of military, many civic organizations and companies of secret orders, notably the Freemasons. All these bodies, with their bright uniforms, floating banners, and gorgeous regalia, marching to the strains of patriotic airs, presented a stirring spectacle.

Nearly every grand lodge in the United States was représented in the parade. During the progress of the march to the Capitol, batteries of artillery, stationed respectively at Fort Myer, the Navy Yard and in the White Lot near the monument, fired simultaneously, a salute of one hundred minute guns. At the Capitol the ceremonies assumed a more exclusive caracter. Of course the whole world could not get into the Hall of Representatives. Its capacity was edequate for only about two thousand people. So Congress, and its families and guests and friends, including the Diplomatic Corps, Justices of the Supreme Court, ex-Senators, Cabinet officers, ex-Cabinet officers, the President, and last but not least, the surviving kith and kin of the Father of his country, entered and the doors of the Capitol were closed to those who had no ticket. There are thirteen descendants bearing the name of Washington. Having been assigned to places on the floor of the Hall, they came in a body, and sat together in a row. It is a little remarkable that the number should correspond with the original thirteen colonies. The favored two thousand people heard an oration read, which had been sent by Mr. Winthrop, the orator of the laying of the corner stone being too feeble to appear in person. They then heard an oral oration by Hon. John W. Daniels, Congressman-elect from Virginia. There was music by the marine band composed expressly for the occasion. There was first an opening prayer, lastly a benediction, and the distinguished assembly dispersed. To-night, in the monument grounds the display of fireworks was very elaborate. It included fifty numbers, embracing bombshells, boquets of rockets, flights of meteoric balloons, and fountains of fire. Among the set pieces was a dolpin fountain, composed of two golden dolpins supporting a basin in diamond lace work. From this a life-sized figure issued, holding an urn, from which issued a stream of silver fire and spray. There was a representation of Niagara Falls, seventy feet in length and fifty feet high, another of the Goddess of Liberty, and an equestrian statue of Goerge Washington above which hovered the Americam Eagle.

The Joker Joked.

It is not the turkey that took its name from the Turks or Turcomans which signifies "wanderers," but is of the turkey that wandered from Becker's livery a short time since. Captain Becker had a fine, large turkey taken from his barn and the supposition was that the turkey had taken a long walk never again to return to the place from whence it departed. A few days after Mr. Becker helped to eat his own turkey at the Woodruff House. Mr. Betts, the man who s——e the turkey was also present and no one present had so much fun at Capt. Beckers expense. But horrors of horrors, while Betts was holding a cigar in one hand and picking his teeth with the other some person slipped out and confiscated a fine turkey of Mr. Betts' and also a bag of grain that he had bought to fat the plumed knight of the feathers. Poor Betts became quite melancholy over the loss of his turkey, and like the mourners of olden times, he went through the streets proclaiming the loss of his beautiful turkey. Cobwebs hung from his cap and coat that showed plainly scoured lofts, underground cellars and back yards in search of his bird, all to no purpose. The gobbler had flown, so it is said, up near Marcus Crahan's residence and was well cared for at the expense of Mr. Betts. Last Thursday the bird was beheaded, neatly prepared and well roasted. A few wives were invited to masticate the turkey. The head was presented to Marcus Crahan and the bones were polished clean, packed in a box and sent to Mr. Betts who has said he had an invitation to dine on turkey with [illegible]. Not so Mr. Betts nor did you get a taste or a smell.

[illegible]

[illegible] formerly of Co. "A" [illegible]

We came via Washington and the "short line" our route was through Fredericksburg, Richmond, and Petersburg. At the former place I saw many familiar landmarks; our brigade being the first one to occupy that place in the spring of '62. All the change I could see in the place was that it was about 20 years older. The train passes along at the foot of the heights, between where our army and Lee's army confronted each other, and as I looked out upon the old familiar ground—the row of red cedar trees, and the level, open ground over which our boys marched "Mid Shot and Shell," I could not help contrasting the then with the now.

We met with no opposition in entering Richmond, which we passed through and on towards Petersburg: when out of the latter place, about one and one-half miles, we passed the celebrated "crater," where a regiment of Pennsylvania miners tunneled from our side under a Confederate fort and blew them up July 31st 1864. The 24th, Cavalry was in the engagement which followed, having been at the front and "under fire" since June 16th. I was wounded the 10th of August following, which "passed," me "to the rear" and a "wounded furlough."

Soon after the war, these works were torn down by men searching for lead; some making as high as four and five dollars per day.

The line of works on both sides were visited by thousands of sight seers, ex-soldiers from both sides who come to fight their battles over in a friendly way, and citizens to gratify their curiosity; visitors would have peaches to eat and the seeds that were dropped have taken root, and now each line of fortifications is marked by a line of peach trees.

We arrived in Jacksonville, Florida, Wednesday, the 11th, the coldest day the state has experienced for years; there being icicles on the water tanks over a foot long, and frost on the car windows.

We found Jacksonville a lively place, every body busy—one half of the people ready to wait upon the other half, i. e. if they paid them for it. We remained one day then left for this place, via Pa-tut-ka and Leesburg. At the latter place we took the steamer A. J. Lane and after a nine mile ride on lake As-ta-tu-la—one of the prettiest lakes in the state, we landed at this place, which will be our home for a few months. We have the contract to erect a residence for a lady formerly from St. Louis, Mo., a daughter of Ex-Governor Polk of Mo. The residence when completed will cost from six to eight thousand dollars, and is one of many that will follow: Mrs. Drake (for whom we are building) owns a large tract of land here, and has one of the finest groves in the state; it is valued at $75,000. All orange growers vie with each other in producing the finest flavored fruit, and I think the Drake Star is the finest flavored orange I ever saw.

Did you ever see the picture of an orange tree in full fruit? if so, perhaps you thought it was overdrawn; no artist can do an orange tree justice; the trees of themselves are symmetrical, graceful, and pretty, and when one is burdened with its wealth of precious fruit, then the sight is beautified beyond description, and to go into a grove, containing from one to two thousand trees and all of them "bowed down" with their load of fruit, it is a sight never to be forgotten.

Then the balmy air, just warm enough and cool enough. We are 50 miles from the Atlantic and 75 miles from the Gulf, and we have either an Ocean or a Gulf breeze except from about 11 a. m. till 2 p. m. which time a shade is desirable,—yes, necessary, and is the only time that one must be careful.

There are two or three sulphur springs on the margin of the lake that furnishes an inexhaustable supply of water which is about "milk warm," it not being very strong of sulphur, is used for cooking and drinking and is of inestimable value for bathing purposes. The hotel accommodations of the place are poor, there being but one on a small scale, but were there a large one erected here it would be crowded with guests throughout the "season," as this is one of the most delightful retreats in the State. The inhabitants are mostly Southerners, and all of them very hospitable indeed. They extend a cordial welcome to every one and when they invite you to their home or grove, the best the place affords is at your disposal.

What do you think of Florida as a home? Well, I'll tell you. Were I a young man with, say from $500 to $1,000 or more, I would come to this state and buy a piece of good "Hammock" land, clear it and put it into an orange grove. I would not stop short of either this place or south of here. One of the finest sections in the state is the A-pop-ka mountains about thirty miles south of here; it will cost right smart to clear Hammock land—take the stumps out and plant trees. But when it is once done and the trees get to be about 7 or 8 years old, then you are just as sure of your crop as many of the Oswego county farmers are of having to pick stone every year. I visited a grove yesterday, of about 20 acres, two thirds of the trees being in their prime, while the rest were younger, and was told that the grove was worth $14,000 and land across the road from it covered with pine timber could be bought for 15 to 20 per acre. If a person has a few thousand dollars, it would pay them to buy a small grove, then add to it, but the difference between a grove of orange trees, and a pine forest, or tangled hammock is vast indeed, when value is considered. Vegetables can be raised here for the northern market, [illegible]

[illegible] a divorce from his wife on the ground of insanity. He said that she would not perform her household duties, and that she would not eat at the same table with him, and he had trouble in getting the meals. He said that she would leave the house at times and go to the barn and lie down in the hay, and to the woodshed and lie down on the chips. Dr. V. G. Hamill of Phœnix, testified that he was at Meyer's house on the day he died. Mrs. Meyer, he said, acted as if her mind was unbalanced. On the morning when the post mortem examination was held, Mrs. Meyer was lying down reading a New York story paper. The witness thought that she was insane. M. M. Carter, a Phœnix justice, testified that Mr. Meyer showed signs of insanity. Q. Rust, of Fulton, testified that Mrs. Meyer worked at his house five or six years ago. He did not think she was then of unsound mind, although there was something strange about her. H. D. Hubbard, deputy sheriff, said that several times Mrs. Meyer did not eat her food. He did not believe she was of sound mind. She asked several times why she was detained, and would walk to the door and try to get out. Frank Dilts of Fulton, said he noticed something peculiar about her two years ago. He saw her in jail and she asked why they kept her there. He thought she was not in her right mind. John A. Barry testified that he considered the woman insane. Dr. Daniel Pardee of Fulton, testified that in September last he and Dr. C. M. Lee ex'd Mrs. Meyer and declared her insane, made out a certificate to that effect. Dr. C. M. Lee of Fulton testified that he was Mrs. Meyer's family physician, and said that Meyer came to his office once and said he married her under a misunderstanding, and wished to have her treated but did not feel like paying for it. The witness thought her condition due to the usage she had received, improper diet and lack of care. Meyer always claimed that he was swindled in marriage. The witness examined Mrs. Meyer and declared her insane. Miss Mate Voglesang, sister of Mrs. Meyer, aid that she had noticed a change in her sister for the last two years. Three years ago Mrs. Meyer was engaged to marry a Mr. Hook of Madison county, but the match was broken on account of the difference in their religion. William Gates of Phœnix testified that Meyer had told him that his wife was insane, and Frank Gates testified that Meyer told him the same thing and that she was in the habit of sleeping in the fields and in the barn. Other winesses testified that Mrs. Meyer acted strangely.

Saturday morning Dr. McDonald of Auburn an insanity expert testified that Mrs. Meyer was suffering from melancholia and is not responsible for her acts. The commission handed in their report Saturday afternoon and it came up Monday morning, and was to the effect that she was insane. Judge Churchill subsequently made an order sending Mrs. Meyer to the insane asylum at Utica where she was taken yesterday.

More Money Wanted.

Mr. D. D. Metcalf, school commissioner for the First district has just returned from Albany where he attended a conference of the school commissioners of the state. Their object being to have the sum apportioned for the support of common schools increased from one and fifty-five thousanths mills on the dollar to one and one-eighth mills or more. About thirty of the commissioners were present and a delegation had a hearing before the senate committee on finance on Thursday at 3 o'clock and also before the joint committees of the senate and assembly on public education. The object of the confrence was presented to these committees by commissioner Lusk of Broome county and D. D. Metcalf of Oswego county. The commissioners were very much gratified with the treatment they received. Many members of each committee having expressed themselves as in favor of granting their request.—[Palladium.

"Grand Smash in Fulton."

Capt. Fisher of the Salvation Army, telegraphs the War Cry as follows: "Grand smash in Fulton. Twenty-four souls in five days. Look out for next report." Captain Fisher is a young man under 25 years, and seems to be gaining the admiration of many of the religious people of the place. He is a reformed drunkard and gambler, and is doubtless thoroughly reformed, and is succeeding admirably in making converts to the cause of Christanity in Fulton. The meetings of the army are largely attended, and what may be called the better class of church people are forming the habit of frequenting the meetings.—[Palladium.

Of Interest to Everyone.

This is positively the last week I shall make Cabinets at $1.00 per doz. If you want a good well made picture for little money, and one that is warranted not to fade, come and get some. This is the last week I shall make them and you will never get such a chance again. They are cheaper than tintypes, so do not miss the opportunity. I go back to my old prices next week as it appears the rest of the fraternity have already done so.

Carpenter who is accused of murdering his wife at Sandy Creek, is still in Oswego jail. The Baptist deacon is very quiet and a great favorite in the jail. He seems to take most delight in the Sunday services which are held in the jail on Sundays by City Missionary Lee. The prisoner takes an active part and exhorts his hearers to lead a good life. As far as his connection with the alleged crime is concerned he is very reticent under advice of his counsel, Judge Huntington, yet he is very pleasant to reporters and is ready to opologize for not giving them more information. The case seems to hang fire, but the District Attorney hints at astonishing revelations which will come when the case is brought to trial.—[Oswego correspondent to the Standard.

Disappointed Aspirations.

The visit of the Fulton Polo Club to Oswego, was not without results. Their skilled playing at the Casino, creating a desire for more polo; the result a live club is formed.

On Saturday last an invitation purporting to come from the manager of the Casino in Oswego was received by Mr. Joseph Appelt of the Fulton Polo Club, requesting him to visit Oswego on Monday at their expense to referee a practice game at their rink. He was at first surprised that he was selected and conferred with the club, who hinted it might be "a sell," but a strong magnet drew him toward the cake, and before light he might have been seen moving toward the depot. Monday evening's papers announced among the arrivals at the Lake Shore, Joseph Appelt of the Fulton Polo Club. It is needless to add that there was no game to referee, and Joe is now studying the hand writing of each of the blues.

[illegible] as to quality at the outset, the [illegible] cream gathered [illegible] method of simple cool [illegible] per cent of these [illegible] were rated as fine or very fine, [illegible] per cent by the ice-cooling [illegible] and 38 per cent by the centrifugal [illegible] of the samples from centrifugal cream were rated as simply good, [illegible] 30 per cent by the ice-cooling [illegible] and 25 per cent by the simple [illegible]. This difference in favor of [illegible] systems against the centrifugal is attributed by the writer rather to the [illegible] care taken in the manufacture of the butter in the long-established dairies than to any real defect in the centrifugal cream, and that this greater care appears to be actually necessary in order [illegible] good results appears to [illegible] indicated by the fact that 11 per cent [illegible] samples from cream gathered by the simple cooling system were either bad or only tolerable, while none of the samples from the other methods were rated lower than moderately good.

Comparing different modes of treatment of the centrifugal cream, it was clearly shown that for making the best butter by this system the cream should be cooled immediately on drawing it from the separator, and that the lower [illegible] to which it is cooled, the better the product. On comparing the [illegible] methods practised of souring the cream to prepare it for the churn—one by adding sour milk, cream or buttermilk to the sweet cream, the other by warming the cream—a decided result was found in favor of the latter method so far as concerned cream separated either by the cooling system or by the ice-cooling system; 62 per cent of the samples from cream soured by the latter method were rated as superior in quality, against 38 per cent of the samples from cream soured in the other way. But, singularly enough, when butter from centrifugal cream was subjected to a like comparison, it appeared that the best results were obtained when the cream was soured by the addition of sour milk or cream.

After this preliminary testing the samples of butter were stored in a cool, airy room, especially for the comparison of the keeping qualities of butter from centrifugal cream with that from cream separated by the two other methods; the result showed little difference in favor of the one system or the other; as a whole the butter from centrifugal cream kept as well and no better than that from the other cream—but this interesting exception, that the butters of superior quality from centrifugal cream retained their fine quality better than did butters of like quality from cream obtained by the other methods; hence the conclusion that the quicker the cream is separated from the milk, and the fresher its condition, or the less time there is for any changes to take place in the milk while the cream is being removed, the better are the chances for getting fine butter that will hold its good qualities.

Comparing the system of simple cool setting with the ice-cold setting, the butter from the latter showed better keeping qualities: of the samples from this system 59 per cent kept either well or very well, against 48 per cent. of the samples from the cool setting; and, what was worse for the cool setting, it was found that 31 per cent of the samples kept badly or very badly, against 20 per cent of the samples from the ice-cooling system, and against 10 per cent. from centrifugal cream. As to the effect of the manner of souring the cream on the keeping quality, the same difference was observed as in respect to quality at the outset; cream from either of the older systems soured by warming gave the best butter for keeping, while centrifugal cream prepared by the addition of souring material gave the best result in this respect.—[Dr. G. C. Caldwell.

[illegible] the edges of the [illegible] with a large knife or chisel made for the purpose, [illegible] should not be more than four inches deep in the stub. A wedge is now inserted in the centre of the cleft and a cion is inserted on each side of the cleft. The cions are made of twigs of last year's growth. They should be cut before the trees show any signs of starting in the spring. When the cion is prepared ready for setting it should contain about three buds. The lower end is cut wedged shaped by slicing off each end of the cion. On one side of this wedged-shaped portion, and midway between its top and bottom, should be left one of the buds. When the cion is set this bud will be deep down in the cleft in the stub, and will be covered with wax; but being nearer the source of nourishment, it will be the most apt of any buds to grow, and it will readily push through the wax. The cion is set into the cleft by exercising great care that the inner surface of the bark on the cion exactly matches the inner surface of the bark on the stub. A line between the bark and the wood may be observed. This line on the cion, in other words, should match the line on the stub. Wax the whole carefully and thoroughly. Do not leave a crack exposed.

Grafting wax is made as follows: Melt together rosin, beeswax and tallow in equal parts and spread on cotton cloth. Tear into strips and wrap around the graft.—[American Farmer.

Keeping Old Stock.

It pays to run a machine as long as it can be made to return a fair profit on the cost of operating it. Using the old machine saves interest on a new investment, and the continued wear does not decrease its value, for the waste material will be the same whether it is wholly or only half worn out. The case is quite different with farm stock, which can be used as food when it begins to diminish in usefulness to its owner. A man who keeps an ox or a cow till it pines with old age, is a double looser by so doing. It inveriably costs more in food and care to maintain an old animal than a young one. As the vigor of life fails, digestion is less perfect and assimulation slower and more difficult, and the waste is greater. As the decline goes on more and more food is required to produce a given amount of labor, or milk or meat. Old animals can seldom be fattened at a profit, even if their flesh were as valuable as that of younger ones, because it requires so much more time and feed to do it. But their flesh is not equal to that of animals in their prime, so there is a loss, both in the quality and cost of producing. Old cows that have been milked till their life force has been exhausted make very poor and low priced as well as expensive beef. When a cow has reached twelve to fourteen years of age, it hardly pays to fatten her, if she could be had for nothing. Some cows of extraordinary quality may be profitably kept as long as they can be, for the sake of stock or milk. But average cows are better converted into beef before it would be appropriate to call them old. —[National Live-stock Journal.

A Good Cement.

Farmers often desire a cement that will hold substances together under water or in damp places. A good cement as can be wished is made as follows: Dissolve one pound of India-rubber in five gallons of coal naphtha; add an equal weight of gum shallac and stir over a slow fire until the shellac is thoroughly dissolved. The gum shellac in naphtha or water makes a stronger mucilage than gum arabic. The addition of India-rubber makes a glue that will not be affected by water.

The growing of sorghum ought to be one of the future great interests in the United States. The consumption of sugar is enormous and is continually increasing. During 1883 we imported the grand total of 2,819,000,000 pounds of sugar, and Louisiana produced 303,000,000 pounds more. All this was consumed. It would seem that the general culture of sorghum for sweets ought to be profitable in the face of a demand so great and a domestic supply so small. As a nation we consume about forty pounds of sugar a year per head, while we do not raise more than a small fraction of that average. The remedy is in the growing of sorghum and the production of a large part of the amount needed.—[Orange County farmer.

The front leg bones of cattle are worth about $30 per ton, and manufactured into collar buttons, fancy bone trimmings, jewelry, parasol handles, etc., both here and in England. The American factories are in Connecticut, Long Island, and Philadelphia. Sheep's legs are also manufactured into parasol handles and various fancy articles. The bone waste and dust caused by the sawing, etc., is used as a feed for cattle and hens, and is also worked up into boneblack and fertilizers.

Dr. Johnson, of Indiana, says: "In dairy products we in the West, with our method of using five acres of high-priced land to keep one dairy animal a year, cannot compete with the intensified farming of the East, where they keep one animal a year on one acre of land; and that, of a natural fertility much inferior to ours and more than that, where by means of silos and ensilage now they are keeping two animals to a single acre."

The Japanese Dentist.

The Japanese dentist does not frighten his patients with an array of steel instruments. All of his operations in tooth drawing are performed by the thumb and fore finger of one hand. The skill necessary to do this is only acquired after long practice, but once it is obtained, the operator is able to extract a half dozen teeth in about 30 seconds without once removing his finger from the patient's mouth. The dentist's education commences by pulling out pegs which have been pressed into soft wood; it ends with the drawing of hard pegs which have been driven into an oak plank with a mallet. A writer in the Union Medicale says that no human jaw can resist the delicate but powerful manipulation of the Japanese dentist.

DESERVEDLY POPULAR.

Unless it had great merit Parker's Ginger Tonic could not be so popular Its sale has spread so remarkably everywhere, because invalids find it gives them new life and vigor when other medicines fail entirely.—OHIO FARMER

A specially important matter in the keeping of fowls on a large scale is to secure near market for them. Hotel keepers, restaurant proprietors, boarding house keepers, etc., will often buy in large quantities and at good rates, when the "goods" suit and the seller is deemed reliable; but if the dealer on a large scale has only the general market to rely upon, he may soon conclude that poultry keeping does not pay. It is a business dangerous to enter upon when not well considered.

WHEN LADIES ARE ATTRACTIVE.

All ladies know their faces are most attractive when free from pimples. Parker's Ginger Tonic is popular among them because it banishes impurities from blood and skin and makes the face glow with health.

The man who wishes to understand as much as possible about poultry keeping, should buy and study the leading books on the subject. Avoid those published in the interest of some particular breed or breeder. The farmer who objects to books giving instruction on farm subjects, is as much at fault as a doctor or lawyer who should claim that he has no need of books. His profession would vote him a fool at once.

ONE BOTTLE INSTEAD OF A DOZEN

"And it took only one bottle to do it,' said a gentleman, speaking of Parker's Hair Balsam. I had a run of fever, and when I got well of that, my hair began to fall out so fast as to alarm me. I really didn't know what to do, until one day a friend said, "Try Parker's Hair Balsam." That was some months ago. What surprised me was the fact that one bottle was enough. I expected to use up a dozen." Clean, highly perfumed, not oily, not a dye. Restores original color,

COLOR YOUR BUTTER.

Famers that try to sell white butter are all of the opinion that dairying does not pay. If they would use Wells, Richardson & Co's Improved Butter Color, and market their butter in perfect condition, they would still get good prices, but it will not pay to make any but the best in color and quality. This color is used by all the leading creameries and dairymen, and is sold by druggists and merchants.

BILIOUSNESS.

Bilious symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick headache, irregular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. Biliousness may be properly termed an affection of the liver, and can be thoroughly cured by the grand regulator of the liver and biliary organs, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Act upon the stomach, bowels and liver, making healthy bile and pure blood, and opens the culverts and sluiceways for the outlet of disease. Sold everywhere and guaranteed to cure.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Imitation always follows a successful article, and imitation is one of the best proofs of real honest merit; and thus it is that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case has its imitators. Buyers can always tell the genuine by the trade-mark of a crown, from which is suspended a pair of TRADE MARK scales. Be sure BOTH crown and scales are stamped in the cap of the watch case. Jewelers are very cautious about endorsing an article unless they not only know that it is good, but that the character of the manufacturers is such that the quality of the goods will be kept fully up to standard.

[illegible] ON THE RAILROAD.

Running a Locomotive While Deadly Sick—Something the Passengers Did Not Know—A Physician Saves an Engineer.

TAUNTON, MASS.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY, Rondout, N. Y.:

Dear Sir: I am an engineer on the Old Colony Railroad, and run the Fall River and Lowell, residing in Taunton. For ten years I suffered everything but death from dyspepsia. [illegible] can imagine.

In the summer and fall of 1876 when we had the heavy Centennial travel, the constant jar brought on severe attacks nearly every week and I thought I should have to leave the road. But I kept at work until the next spring, when I grew so much worse that I could virtually eat nothing, and concluded that my labor, and my life too, were about over.

Remember that I had tried every medicine I heard of, and had been treated by some of the best physicians in Taunton and Lowell. At this critical time DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, was recommended to me. It was new to me, and with my experience of medicines, you can easily forgive me for saying that I had not a particle of faith in it.

I had taken it but a few days when I began to feel better. The raw and sore feeling left my stomach, and the snapping pains left my head, and soon I was all right, and have been ever since. It is the only thing that ever did me the least good, and it drove every ache, pain and discomfort completely out of my body. Now I keep KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY with me on my engine, and it goes wherever I go.

Why, I believe FAVORITE REMEDY will cure anything. One night, a while ago, John Layton, an engineer who runs the main line boat train from Boston, came on my engine sick as death. He was worn out with work, had a high fever, and was so nervous he almost broke down crying. "Nonsense, John," I said, "cheer up, I've got something on my engine that will set you up in a jiffy." I took out my bottle of FAVORITE REMEDY, lifted his head and gave him a good dose. He went to bed. Two days after I saw him looking healthy as a butcher. "Dan," he said, "what was that stuff you gave me the other night?" "It was DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y." said I. "Well, I don't care whose remedy it is, it's the thing for a man on the railroad." So say we all.

Yours, etc., DANIEL FITTS.

This preparation goes to the root of disease by purifying the blood and rousing every organ into healthy action. It is useful at home, shops, in office—everywhere.

BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made.

And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

THE BLACKTHORN.

I came in on the mail car from Cahirceveen and was going to Killarney. Pat Ryan was the driver, one of the best and jolliest car drivers in all Ireland. Toward dusk we stopped at a little hut, where Pat got off and went in to get the mail. There were three others besides myself on the car and they went in to get drinks. I sat on the car. A bent old woman came up to see me with a bundle of canes in her arms and said:

"Fur dhe luv ave Gad, yer anner, wud ye buy a good blacktarn shtick from a poor ould cratur dhat hasn't tasted bite nor sup dhis day!"

"How much are they?"

"Only threepince aich, yer anner."

"All right; pick me out a good one."

She did so, and handed me a tough, knotty blackthorn cane with spikes bristling all along it, a most formidable looking weapon. I gave the woman sixpence, and this unexpected generosity on my part brought down on my head more blessings than ever had fallen to my share before. She blessed the cane and blessed myself until the benedictions became positively embarrassing.

When I reached Killarney I took the train for Dublin, which place I was anxious to reach, as my cash was getting short. I had stayed a week longer in Ireland than I had intended, and although I had tickets through to London, yet I knew if I lingered much longer in the Green Isle I would not have the wherewithal to work the railway lunch counter on my way home. The next evening after I bought that cane I stood on Sackville street with the blackthorn in my had wondering what I had better do. The wind was blowing a hurricane down the broad street, and it whirled around Nelson's tall pillar in a terrific manner that showed me it would be no fun crossing the channel that night. I was afraid to cross. I had been pretty sick coming over and the breeze that night wasn't a circumstances to the gale that was raging now, yet I had not the money to stay at a good hotel for good hotels in Dublin are rather expensive, as I found on my previous visit three weeks before. Just then a man touched me on the arm and said, as if he had been a thought reader,

"Are ye looking for a nice quiet lodging the night?"

"I'm not looking for anything but this wind to go down," I answered.

"It'll be worse before it's better," said the man casting a look at the tall top of the monument. "Yer not thinkin' av going away from dublin the night?"

"I'm thinking of crossing the channel."

"Oh! wurra, wurra," cried the man with a despairing gesture, "it would be a case of life or death wud take a man out to sea a night like this."

That was about my own idea of the matter, and as the wild blast gave an extra swoop that seemed to blow out every lamp on Sackville street we drew closer into the dark shelter of the side thoroughfare.

"Do you know of a good lodging that is cheap?" I asked.

"The best in Dublin, kept by a dacent widdy woman, and troth if the price don't plase ye there's no obligation to sthay. Just sthep there wid me and luk at the rooms, and if the price and room don't plase ye—shure there's no harm done at all at all."

"Is it far from here?"

"Just a sthep."

"Everything is just a step in Dublin. All right," I said, "I'll go and see the [illegible]"

"[illegible] be plased wid it sor," he re[illegible] led down the side street. [illegible]

"See here, I'm going no farther. We must have come a mile already."

"Its the next street," said the man hurrying me on.

It was the next street. He knocked at a door, which, after we waited a long time, was cautiously opened. I looked at my watch in the interval and saw I had still an hour to catch my boat at the North Wall if the place didn't suit. The man said:

"Here's a gentleman that wants to look at the big room. Is it occupied?"

I didn't hear what the answer was, but the man said, "Shtip up the stair, sor," and I followed him up. The hall was quite dark, and the stair rather steep. At the first landing he pushed open a door and the light came out on the top of the stairway.

"See if it suits ye, sor," he said, "I'l siud in the landlady."

The room was large. In a corner was a bed shat was neat and clean. A sofa and comfortable chairs comprised the furniture, with the exception of a big solid square table that occupied the cener of the room, over which hung a larger lamp with a huge shade on it. This lamp threw a brilliant light on the table and the shade allowed a mellow haze to pervade the room. A large, well-framed steel engraving hung on the wall, and the subject was that familiar picture of the play scene in "Hamlet"—the original of which is in the National gallery. The whole interior of that room is indelibly photographed on my memory. I can see as I write the eagle face of the Danish prince as he lay at the feet of Ophelia, scanning the half-turned countenance of the king. Hamlet's answer to the inquiry about the name of the play—"The Mouse Trap"—has seemed to me since singuliarly applicable to my own case at the time.

I put my valise and waterproof on the sofa and laid the stout blackthorn beside them. I concluded to take the rooms if the terms were reasonable.

The door opened and a big muscular woman shoved in as if some one had been holding the door against her. She shoved it shut with a slam by leaning back against it. One hand was concealed behind her, the other held the handle of the door. She was young and her face had once been comely, but was now blotched by dring and dissipation. Her eyes were red and watery. She wasn't strickly sober then.

She began in a loud voice as if I were a mile away. Her first utterance was a torrent of the most fearful oaths I have ever heard from human lips. She ended by commanding me to lay my watch and money on the table, under penalty of having my "skool" crushed in.

With a calmness that I regret there were no impartial witnesses to, I picked up my water-proof and threw it over my left arm. In my right I took my blackthorn, grasping it near the point. In my left I took the valise. This was done with a cool deliberation that excited my utmost admiration, for I was at that moment the most frightened man in the three kingdoms. I didn't so much mind being killed, as being killed in a den like that. I knew the verdict of certain kind friends of mine would be, "Served him right. No business going to such a place." I felt a serene certainty that the worst construction would be put on my presence there, and I had a great yearning to be left so that I might explain.

"Madam" I said, "kindly allow me to go. I have no money except some small change, which under the circumstances you are welcome to."

She shrieked an incredulous laugh and swore that if I did not at once plank down at least five guineas and my watch she would dissect me.

At this moment the door shoved open again and two more women came squeezing in. One was young and tall. Her face had not the depravity of the first, but it was bad enough, and gave me little hope of the mending of matters. The other was a short hag, and was, I imagined, the one who had opened the door. She was simply a living horror. Some terrible, cancer-like disease had eaten her nose entirely away, and had also destroyed much of the upper and lower lips, so that the left half of her mouth was one perpetual and ghastly grin.

The first fema'e still did the talking carrying it on in a loud voice, which illustrated the truth of what she said—that I might shout my lungs out and no help would come.

"Now, look here," I said, "I've only a few shillings in my pocket. If I carried my usual wealth I wouldn't be here. I'll shell out these on the table if you let me out peaceably."

I emptied my pockets on the table. That didn't suit them. They insisted on the watch, and although I said the watch had been given me by a very dear friend (it had—I bought it myself), that seemed to make no difference. So I scooped back the cash into my pockets and said if there had to be a fight why a fight there would have to be. The first woman took her hand from concealment and showed an ugly looking dirk. She took a step forward. I backed up against the wall. I was more afraid of a treacherous attack of some concealed [illegible], but I imagine my own [illegible] the [illegible] exaggerated the danger of the situation.

"Stand back" I cried, "or I'll massacre you," and I flourished the blackthorn. She stood back, swearing like a trooper.

"Now, for the last time, will you be [illegible]?"

[illegible] was evidently the [illegible] of the den. [illegible] I could understand her rambling talk, said my body would be found in the Liffy.

"Don't talk to me," I said. "Get your woman away from that door and open it. If I can't call the police I will ring up the fire department. The next thing I smash is that lamp and the moment after this room will be on fire. Open that door."

The women would have done so, but the one with the knife prevented her.

I raised the cane and struck the lamp. The pieces of the shade and the lamp glass were scattered all over the room. The lamp itself swung to and fro unbroken, but its yellow, chimneyless, smoky light threw a ghastly uncertain glare over the whole scene.

The second woman now spoke:

"For God's sake, Mrs. Duffy, let him out."

She drew the fair duelist aside and whishered something to her, to which the other nodded:

"Get to the further end of the room—you too, Mrs. Duffy."

They did so, and for a moment I stood with the open door and the dark hall before me. I knew the street door was locked, and while I fumbled at it the three would have me at a worse advantage than I was then in. But I noticed the key of the room was on the outside of the door, and I saw my way of escape. I moved slowly towards the open door—then made a bolt—drew it shut, and turned the key, locking in my fair hostess and her sylph-like companions.

The next instant I was throttled by by unseen hands.

"Force the doore, force the doore!" cried the voice of the late cowardly comrade, as we struggled in the dark. He had me against the banisters, his two hands on my throat and his knee pressed against me. I flung hand-bag and coat to the foot of the stairs and tried to hit him with the blackthorn, but we were at too close quarters. I bent back over the banisters, shortened the cane by grasping it near the end with both hands, the numerous thornes on the stick giving me an excellent grip on it, and with all my rapidly vanishing strength harpooned him in the face with the point of it. With a yell of pain he loosed his hold and grasped the stick. I followed up my advantage by forcing him backwards down the stairway, half-way down he fell and putting my foot on him I swore to brain him if he stirred. This took place very rapidly, and as the woman inside was shaking vigorously at the door I expected a crash every instant. I felt along the inside of the street door for the key and handle while one foot remained on the fallen. I opened the door and let in the light from the street lamp.

"Roll off my coat, will you?" He rolled. I picked up coat and hand-bag. The cane I still held. As I sprang into the street I heard the upper door crash. The ladies of the house had evidently got free. I must confess that I ran for the next few blocks just about as fast as I was able. I hailed a passing car and asked to be taken to the North Wall. A few minutes later I was on the board the boat for Holyhead. The old woman's blessing seemed to have put a good deal of usefullness in that cane. I have it yet, but whether or not the blessing still chings I do not know.

Kiss Mother.

A father talking to his careless daughter, said: "I want to speak to you of your mother. It may be that you have noticed a careworn look upon her face lately. Of course it has not been brought there by any act of yours, still it is your duty to chase it away. I want you to get up to-morrow morning and get breakfast, and when your mother begins to express her surprise, go right up and kiss her on the mouth. You can't imagine how it will brighten up her dear face. Besides, you owe her a kiss or two. Away back when you were little, she kissed you when no one else way tempted by your swollen face. You were not so attractive then as now. And through those childish years of sunshine and shadows, she was always ready to cure by the magic of a mother's kiss the little, dirty, chubby hands, whenever they were injured in their first skirmishes with this rough, cold world. And then the midnight kisses with which she routed so many bad dreams as she leaned over your restless pillow, have all been on interest these long years. Of course she is not so pretty and kissable as you are, but if you had done your share of the work during the past ten years, the contrast would not be so marked. Her face has more wrinkles than yours—far more—and yet if you were sick that face would appear more beautiful than any angel's as it hovered over you; watching every opportunity to minister to your comfort; and every one of those wrinkles would appear as bright wavelets of sunshine chasing each other over her dear face. She will leave you some one of these days. These burdens, if not lifted from her shoulders, will break her down. Those hands that did so many unnecessary things for you, will be crossed upon her lifeless breast. Those neglected lips that gave you your baby kiss, will be closed forever, and those tired eyes will have opened in eternity, and then you will appreciate your mother, but it will be too late.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 26, 1885.

While the enthusiasm over the old liberty bell has subsided, interest in that venerable relic has not. Everybody inquires for it as soon as they enter the exposition. It was crowned with wreaths and flowers by the ladies here last week.

The following days were set apart for special observance by the respective bodies: February 9, Freemasons; 10th and 11th Cotton Planters' Association; 12th, National Editors' and Publishers' Association; 13th, Kentucky Day; 14th, Florida day; 18th, Kansas day; 19th, South Carolina day; 20th, 21st and 23d, American Agricultural Association; 25th, Commercial Traveling Men's day; 26th, Connecticut day; 27th, Georgia day; March 5th, Panama day; 8th, French day; 9th, Knights of Honor; 10th, Pennsylvania day; 11th, Nebraska day; 12th and 13th, National Temperance days; 15th, German day; 16th, Louisiana Temperance Society; 17th, Mississippi day; 18th to 24th, inclusive, Baptists' day; 21st, Minnesota day; 25th, New Mexico day; May 7, California day.

In the Interior Department Government building a very large elegant painting is displayed, representing the first discovery of gold in California, picturing the old Suter Hill and the rich placer diggings; while just across the way is one of equal size containing a modern locomotive rushing through the canons bearing the letters emblazoned on its front, "19th Century, 1885; 60 miles an hour," showing the contrast of travel as late as fifty years ago.

FLORIDA.

Land of flowers! Col. W. H. Sebring is commissioner. Noted for its delicious oranges (a state without winter) and tropical fruits; coconnuts, pecans, English walnuts, citrons, melons, vegetables of all kinds, Florida is indeed a great country. Corn, tobacco, cotton, cane, wheat, oats and grasses also thrive. Garden truck is cultivated all the year and shipped to the eastern cities. Arrowroot is raised in quantities. Preserved fruits make a good showing. There is a vast array of native wools in the collection, with moss, hemp, etc. Fossils and marine substances create wonder from the public. A block of cypress, of great dimensions, is somewhat smaller than the California "big tree." Tommie Wragg, a twelve year old lad sends an artistic likeness of General Perry, the new governor of Florida. The raised painted wooden map of the state gives one a good idea of its shape. Within this space is a handsome pagoda, occupied by Miss S. M. Birch, representing the Chataugia society of Lake de Funiak, which evidences that the hand of woman has deftly decorated it. Beautiful oil paintings, etchings, lace and embroidery work, of many unique designs and artistic execution, have been placed most attractively. This department shall have special mention hereafter. The Florida legislature has appropriated $5,000 for their state.

MARYLAND.

J. T. Scarf, commissioner, is very courteous to the public, and especially to the press, and is delighted to exhibit and explain the valuable products of "Maryland, my Maryland." Wheat reduction in all grades to flour, in bags and barrels is a feature. But particularly is the city of Baltimore one of the largest in canning goods; and in the oyster trade $20,000,000 are annually expended, amounting to more than all the other states combined. McMurray & Co., of Frederick county, have yearly 2,500 acres seeded in sweet corn. In fertilizers $4,000,000 worth are manufactured in Baltimore, and fire clay here is one of the principal industries as pottery terra cotta and fine pressed brick has a reputation the world over; fine samples are exhibited. St. Jacob's oil, Brown's Iron Bitters, Bull's Cough Syrup, and other patent medicines have their home in this state. The display of fine variegated marble and granite for building is unequalled and many contracts are furnished the U. S. Government.

No finer geological display is seen elsewhere, and the bitumenous coal stands higher among manufacturers and steamboatmen for fuel than any other. Here only the famous canvas back duck and the terrapin are known to epicures, and they are displayed in taxidermy together with every bird and fowl, and animals common to that section. Visitors must not fail to examine the case of owls which are wisely shown. Fish and marine animals common to the Maryland waters are exhibited, together with a mounted Albino deer, a rarity. A list of Presidents from Washington to Lincoln are pictured. 3,500 different envelopes used during the late war make an attraction. Continental and Confederate money, photographs of public buildings, with specimens of soapstones, slate and iron, are prominently displayed. The first steam engine ever run in America was the "Peter Cooper," and the first passenger coach attached was in 1830, and the Baltimore and Ohio was the road on which they operated, are shown in models; also the [illegible] and agricultural implements used in laying down the foundation for what proved one of the most gigantic enterprises are [illegible] to be seen in this department. [illegible]

[illegible]

The old china silks are revived.

Surrahs will remain in favor for summer silks.

Satins will be very generally worn with spring dresses.

All repped silks will be in favor the coming season.

For midsummer woolens is a new fabric called wool crape.

Cashmere of the finest twill will be used for spring dresses.

Hats will be worn almost to the exclusion of bonnets in the spring.

Embroidered surrahs in all-over patterns of a gay figure on a quiet ground are new.

Plain velvets are now considered richer than brocaded for using with plain material.

A closely woven fabric somewhat resembling Jersey cloth, is called tricotine satin.

Stripes of all widths will again be worn, but not so fashionably as plaids and checks.

Watered silk is again in vogue as a combination with cashmere and camel's hair fabrics.

The cashmere broches brought out this spring are among the prettiest goods of the season.

The Eton jacket is a fanciful little garment that will be becoming to slight figures. It is similar to the zouave jacket.

The broad sailor collar is worn by small girls and boys alike, with ties made of soft silks cut on dias and tied in a huge bow.

Instead of severely plain bands or folds for trimming skirts there will now be vandykes, scallops, or leaf points on the upper edge.

Frise velvet figures on satin grounds are the neveltie for the next spring and summer, to be combined with the plain satins.

The elamine or canvas fabrics are imported for dress goods of larger meshes and stronger threads than that used for millinery purposes.

The prettiest of the plaid ginghams have the design seen in fine wool plaids and are imported in all of the newest colors in large, small medium sized checks.

Some Remarkable Cures and deafness are recorded of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Never fails to cure earache.

PROGNOSTICATIONS.

Happenings that will Stir the Pulse of the World During the Four Years Commencing March Fourth.

Cleveland will be inaugurated, but not live to serve his term out.

Wolseley will perish in the African desert with nearly all of his command.

Bismarck and Kaiser William will die.

Nihilists will kill the Czar.

The English House of Lords will tumble.

The Queen will die after a short illness.

There will be three earthquakes in the United States.

Socialists will raise particular hades in Europe and America.

Canada will ask for annexation.

There will be a failure in the cotton and tobacco crops.

Wall street will experience another black Friday.

Ireland will be free.

An ocean steamer will go down with all on board.

Wheat will sell at two dollars a bushel.

Remunerating gold mines will be discovered in New York State.

Four United States Senators will die.

Disastrous incendiary fires will cause severe losses in several large cities.

An attempt will be made to assassinate King Alphonso and may succeed.

Jay Gould will lose his last dollar.

A railroad between New York and Chicago will be run by eolectricity.

A pneumatic tube will be laid between New York and Washington.

The Franco-Chinese war will be amicably settled.

The King of Siam will die.

Washington's monument will settle two feet out of plumb.

The Bartholdi Statute of Liberty will be erected.

A new Commander-in-Chief will be appointed to the United States Army.

A Democratic dark horse will be our next President.

An East River ferry boat will blow up with a full load of passengers.

A holocaust will occur in a New York up town theatre.

Natural gas will be brought in pipes to New York from Pennsylvania.

Business will not improve to any great extent.

Rumors of a civil war, but nothing comes of them.

The White house will be remodeled.

After four years business will revive, and we will for all time be prosperous and at peace with the world.—[illegible] in Brooklyn Times.

Rules For Winter.

There are a number of rules for winter going the rounds of the press, which, while very good in their way, will admit of some slight improvement. We will give a few for the benefit of those who have been going through the winter without instruction.

Never [illegible] with the back against anything that is cold. Do not select a chunk of ice or a snow drift to lean upon, and if your feet should suddenly slide from under you, thus bringing your back in contact with an icy sidewalk, get up immediately and hurry away, as your remaining in that position might occasion remark. Never get your back up against Charles Francis Adams or Senator Edmunds. "Freeze out" is their favorite game.

Never begin a journey until the breakfast has been eaten. If you have no appetite you can always get some one to eat the breakfast for you.

Never take warm drinks and then immediately go out in the cold air. Sit around the stove and tell jokes for a while, or play a game of billiards. It will be more beneficial—to the saloon keeper.

Never go to bed with cold feet. If your wife insists on having cold feet, sleep in another room, as to do otherwise would compel you to violate the first rule given above.

Never omit regular bathing. Every man should bathe at least once during the winter, and do it regularly.

Never speak much when hoarse, or the voice may be permanently lost. Observe this rule strictly yourself, but do not show it to your mother-in-law.

Never keep the back to the fire after it gets warm enough, because by continuing to do so, you are liable to get burned.

When going from a warm atmosphere into a colder one, keep the mouth closed. If you contemplate a trip to the North Pole, do not mention it, or you may be considered a fit subject for a lunatic asylum.

Never stand still in very cold weather or exposed to a cold wied, because—— But any fool knows enough to observe this rule without telling him.—[Texas Siftings.

THESE ARE SOLID FACTS.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or who ever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by R. E. Phillips.

He Thought It Would Do.

"I want a divorce from my wife," said a Washington street broker to his attorney, "but I don't know how to begin it.

"Any ground for scandal?" asked the attorney.

"No, oh, no."

"Did she ever hit you?"

"No, her temper is quith even."

"Did she ever blow out the gas?"

"No, she lets it burn. Maybe that would be grounds, eh?"

"No, said the attorney, in that case she would call to her aid the gas company, and we should have to struggle with the monoply. That wouldn't do."

"No," said the applicant sadly.

"Did she ever scald any of the children?" asked the attorney, brightening up.

"Haven't got any to. I suppose it wouldn't do to say she scalded the children of the next door neighbor?

"No"

"Then I don't known what to do or say."

Then both men looked thoughtful out of the window for nearly seven minutes.

"She drank out of the finger bowl at the hotel when we was on our bridal tour said the husband, hesitatingly.

"If you get the date and witnesses" said the lawyer quickly, "I think that will be sufficient—under our law."

Then they went out together and called for two schooners of beer.—[Chicago Herald.

A Cold of unusual severity which I took last autumn developed into a difficulty decidedly catarrhal in all its characteritsics, threatening a return of my old chronic malady, catarrh. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm completely eradicated every symptom of that painful and prevailing disorder.—E. W. Warner, 165 Hudson St., Rochester.

[illegible] is somewhat subsiding.

General Grant is not an old man. He has not yet reached his sixty-fifth year.

The House Saturday passed the fortification bill, appropriating $4,925,000. This is the last of the appropriation bills.

A large freight house owned by the Albany & Susquehanna railroad company and used by the West Shore, caught fire on Sunday and was totally destroyed. About fifteen loaded freight cars were burned and forty damaged. The losses are very heavy.

The Albany police authorities arrested two suspicious looking individuals on Monday who were hanging about Cleveland's residence, exciting suspicion by their movements. When examined they proved to be private detectives from New York sent to Albany on a mission which had a bearing on the President-elect.

Vice President Elect Hendricks had a narrow escape from death by a collision between the special and regular trains, near Grafton, W. Va., Friday morning. The regular train left the siding against orders. The trains met, but the engineers made desperate efforts to stop them, and the collision was slight. The crew of the regular train was discharged.

The United States Democrat (successor to the La Crosse Democrat) will be issued in first-class style as an eight-page weekly paper, from Washington each Saturday, dating from March 7, 1885, price $2 a year. It will be published by the newly incorporated, The United States Publishing Company, with abundant capital. John A. Hervey, formerly of the Wheeling Evening Journal, [illegible] manager.

[illegible] a settled fact that General Grant is fast nearing his end. The cancer at the root of his mouth, which undoubtedly arose from excessive smoking is gradually growing worse and his physician announces that he cannot survive at the least longer than six months. He has no appetite and lives on light nourishment in liquid form. Though in great pain, he writes daily on his "History of the War." Much sympathy is expressed for him throughout the country.

Those who are fortunate enough to be present at the Inauguration of President Cleveland, which occurs in Washington to-day will no doubt witness one of the grandest display of the sort ever recorded in the history of this republic. Political clubs and societies from many states are present besides the many thousands who went indivinually. Many will be unable to near the inaugural address, which we predict will be one of good common sense. We expect that before our next issue Mr. Cleveland's cabinet will be announced.

Mr. Cleveland's letter is severely criticised by southern and western members of Congress opposed to the suspension of the silver coinage. Mr. Warner, to whom the letter was addressed, declares that should Mr. Cleveland take an equally strong position in his inaugural address, he will find himself in the hottest kind of a hornet's nest. Mr. Warner says: "We cannot now recognize Mr. Cleveland as in any way favorable to the sentiment of the western Democracy, which he has affronted even before setting his foot in the White House."

The members of President Arthur's Cabinet will be located as follows after the dissolution: Mr. Frelinghuysen will return to the quiet of his New Jersey home, whence nothing short of Gabriel's [illegible] is likely to call him again. Mr. [illegible] will go to his Maryland home [illegible] his banking interests. [illegible] will give his attention to [illegible] and Mr. [illegible] National Republican, [illegible] his remaining in [illegible] Mr. Lincoln will return [illegible] at Chicago. Mr. Teller [illegible] Washington as United States [illegible] and Mr. Brewster will again [illegible] law in Philadelphia.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Dora Cooper of Lansing, Mich., formerly of Fulton, to Mr. Samuel B. Taylor of that city, on Wednesday evening, March 4, at 8 o'clock. They will leave the same evening for Indiana. The happy pair have our congratulations.

Herm Hulett drove up Friday afternoon and gave all the boys an invitation to the rink for a little matinee. The doors were locked after them, no ladies being allowed. Many thanks to Brother Herm for our jolly two hours fun.

The Boston Herald thinks Mayor Low of Brooklyn is about the only candidate for Governor the republicans would be likely to elect next November.

The court of appeals will meet at Albany Monday. The calendar is: Nos. 19, 101, 103, 108, 111, 116, 120, 121. March 3 and 17 are motion days.

The voice of the people is in favor of taking Niagara Falls out of the hands of private parties and having its glories preserved by the state.

Frederick Stetson of Albany, a large dealer in live stock, has disappeared, leaving debts to the amount of $18,000. He had lately lost heavily at faro.

In Rosedale, R. L. Herman, postmaster was arrested Saturday charged with embezzling $500 from the money order department.

In Troy, the general term Saturday affirmed the sentence of James Horace Jones, the wife murderer. Judge Ingalls fixed the date of hanging April 9.

C. W. Miller, who recently opened a restaurant in Syracuse, and furnished meals at astonishingly low rates, has disappeared, being in debt for everything he had bought.

A West Shore engine ran off the track at South Schenectady Friday. D. M. McGoughey of Syracuse, conductor of the work train, jumped from the cab and broke his left thigh. He also sustained a severe wound on the head.

Thomas Quigley, charged with wrecking a train on the Hoosac tunnel route, has been found guilty at Sandy Hill. Quigley was in the employ of the company. Several depots were burned and acts committed which were attributed to him, but nothin except circumstantial evidence could be collected against him until a fellow conspirator turned state's evidence.

The report of the superintendant of the banking department shows that the average annual increase in deposits for the five years immediately preceeding Jan. 1, 1884 was $26,404,074, but during 1884 the increase was only $6,027,491. This great falling off of course indicates the lessoned earning capacity of the depositors, and is a very striking feature of the business depression.

The rumor that Henry Monett, general passenger agent of the West Shore, was to resign, seems to have had good foundation. It being generally understood that he was offered the general passenger agency of the Erie road, a West Shore official, who speaks with authority told a Standard correspondent that after consideration, Mr. Monett has declined the offer and will continue in charge of the passenger agency of the West Shore road.

The Trade Outlook.

Bradstreet's report more encouragement as to the outlook for the distribution of merchandise in the early future than has been reported lately. Advices mark the practical end of the railroad blockade, thus permitting the free shipment of goods, as well as several well defined evidences of the beginning of spring purchases by interior jobbers and others. There is a small gain in the sales of dry goods, but the sales are still behind. There is a little improvement in hardware, none in iron, and the grocery trade is plainly unsatisfactory. Woolen mills are less depressed than cotton, but the demand is small. The leading commercial markets have, with the exception of wheat and flour, shown more increased activity. Provisions are dull and cheap. [illegible]

Gladstone is not to go after all. The House of Lords is against him, but the House of Commons, which represents the people, still stands with him. But what prompted twenty-five Irish members to vote with the Tories, who do not know what justice and liberality are?—[Buffalo News.

In round numbers the speculation has resulted in a loss of at least $35,000,000 to those who put their faith and their money into it, besides reducing the dividends on $90,000,000 of stock of the New York Central Railroad company from eight to six per cent, and depreciating its market value from 125 to 95, thus causing a loss to its holders of $27,000,005 more. What enormous folly is frequently displayed by the possessors of wealth!—[N. Y. Sun.

Between the railway monopolists and the silver kings, the Senate of the United States is gradually losing all resemblance to the ideal set up by the fathers of the Constitution. The Senate no longer represents States, but one or another of two forms of invested capital. There is danger now that the silver kings will force an extra session of Congress unless the clause suspending the monthly coinage rule be taken out of it. Next year we shall perhaps have an extra session forced by the railway servants in defence of their lapsed land grants And so it will go.—[Syracuse Herald.

If it Fits, Wear It.

Every newspaper publisher is cursed with an occasional subscriber whose soul seems to have been made of the fage-end of the material, and a shrimp pattern at that. We are always thankful when such lift themselves from our list. The sooner the better. They generally refuse to take the paper from the office after taking it two or three years without paying a cent for it—a plain steal with an insult added. Or else they move away without saying a word or paying a nickle. Or they all at once discover that they never ordered it, never wanted it, or they received it irregularly—not more than half the time—won't pay for it. In either case it is a cowardly creep, such as an honest man would not be guilty of. The proper way to stop a newspaper is to pay up first and then stop it afterwards. If you are a gentleman and don't owe a cent walk into the office, look the gentleman in charge full in the eye, and tell him you don't wish it, or can't afford it. If you are on the hog plan chuck it back into the post office, and it "refused."—[Exchange.

St. John Speaks!

In a recent speech at Louisville, Ky., ex-Gov. St. John thus expressed himself: "The last charge is that I beat Blaine. I thought Cleveland did this. They say so much about my beating Blaine that I ought to contest Cleveland and get the Republicans to sware me in. [Laughter] I can tell you who beat Blaine. Ah! there was a Conkling, a Beecher, a Talmage, a Cuyler, a Crosby, Sa eely, a Hepworth, a Herrick, Johnson (Col. Bain called out Burchard.) Yes, the three R's did it. [Laughter.] The Belshazzar feast before the election did it. Blaine says the rain in Western New York did it. I thought God had a hand in it. I hope God will guide Cleveland to the right. [Applause.] If Cleveland goes wrong we will beat him. I want to tell my Republican friends that the party's treachery to Judge Folger beat Mr. Blaine. I tell you that the real reason Blaine was beaten is because when the party was brought to face a great wrong it failed to throttle it. Ah! you may burn me in effigy; you can't burn my principals. [Applause.] I was in the South during slavery; there was no such bulldozing as I have had in the North!"

Murder in the First Degree.

Antonio Riego, the Italian laborer who was charged with the killing of Michael McGowan at a dance in Syracuse on the night of January 17, was Friday found guilty of murder in the first degree. The verdict was translated by the interpreter to the prisoner, who only smiled and shook his head. The jury was out all night. Riego is 43 years of age, and has been in this country for two years. His parents and one of his brothers and his sister are living in Italy. One of the most important figures in the trial was Mr. Pezzano, the interpreter. He is a member of the New York police force, and [illegible]

While nobler motives elevate mankind.
No sidewalker issues, Butler and St John,
Justice to all, the rock we stand upon.

When gory fame her blighting shadows cast
Ours is the vision of the mighty mind
To elevate, preserve and bless mankind.

The fearful call to vindicate our fame,
The blighting simoon, freedom's warring knell
The covenant with death and league with hell.

The crisis comes, this is our chosen time,
Cast off the ghouls of plunder and of crime.
Lest the proud eagle on reliant wing,

While justice guides, or liberty is vain,
Concede to all the birthright of the free
Or count the last all worthy song agree.

The constitution is our guide and shield
Our entire union is the battle field;
Truth, love and justice shall on reasing be Inspiring among freedom's trinity.

Jacksonville.

Jacksonville March, 3. 1885.—John Bogardus one of our oldest citizens died last Thursday from injuries received while leading a fractious colt to water, aged 78 years. Funeral was attended from the church at Little Utica Sunday at 1. o'clock p. m. Rev. D. D. Davis officiating.

T. C. Lewis and Fred Palmer returned Monday morning from their trip to Deleware.

E. Darwin Pryne of West Granby starts to-night for New Orleans to attend the exposition.

Newspaper Postage.

In the United States Senate action was taken on the Postoffice appropriation bill on the motion of Senator Warner Miller, which confers a very considerable advantage upon newspaper publishers anb the readers of newspapers. As that bill was reported from the committee it established two rates of newspaper postage (the rates on second-class matter). One rate was to be one cent a pound, and the other four cents a pound. This would have been retrogression, as it restored a condition of second-class postage rates similar to that existing formerly, before the uniform two-cent rate was adopted, and which caused confusion and trouble. This was not at all desirable, and Senator Miller's effort is due the straightening out of a tangle in which the bill had been gotten. He proposed such changes as would assure the object in view—the fixing of one rate on all second-class matter, and that rate one cent a pound. He took care, at the same time, to preserve the provision of law under which newspapers circulate through the mails free of postage in the counties where published. He made it clear, also, that it was desirable to retain a uniform rate, and not to increase the postage on "sample copies" from two cents, as now, to four cents, as the bill read, but to fix one uniform rate on all this class of mail matter. This discrimination was shown by the New York Senator to be in antagonism with the intention of the new legislation; and when he made this clear to the understanding of the Senators, who were apparently obtuse to the intent of the proposition, in a possible fear that the newspaper publishers might gain an undue advantage, the Senate (as was necessary in the condition of the legislation) gave unanimous consent to Senator Miller's amendments. Thus, by patient explanation and persistent purpose, Senator Miller gained what was desirable—a uniform, reduced rate on newspapers,—one cent a pound;—and he deserves therefore the thanks of the publishers and of the readers of newspapers throughout the country.—[Syracuse Journal.

Arrested in Michigan.

Detroit, March 2.—Sheriff Beadle of Oswego county, N. Y., Saturday night lodged Ira L. Beardsley in the Central station on a charge of rape. The prisoner, who is 24 years of age, laughed while being searched, and said nothing about the offence. He was indicted two weeks ago for the crime which was committed two years ago and was arrested at Berlin, Ionia county, Mich., where he has since been. The only property found on him was a Bible which was presented by the new New York Bible society to soldiers in the war of the rebellion. Sheriff Beadle took him back for trial yesterday afternoon via the Lake Shore road. He deemed it unsafe to take him through Canada.

Beardsley is a native of the town of Hannibal, and a brother of the young fellow who married Elsa Von Blumen, the bicycle rider. The alleged crime was committed near the village of Bethel.

Cleveland Typographically Considered.

Printers are not worked on the South. [illegible]

[illegible] spectators on the public [illegible] along the line of march. I will mention as [illegible], that a view of the procession from these stands may be had at one dollar per capita. The parade will be one of the largest ever seen here. There will be nearly twenty-five thousand men in line, military and civil organizations, representing every part of the country. There will be seven thousand troops from Pennsylvania alone. There will also be a large number of colored troops coming from both the North and the South. This procession, which will escort the new President from the White House to the Capitol and return, will be the main feature of the inaugural festivities. It can be viewed by everybody, while only a few hundred people can get near enough to hear the inaugural address, from the Capitol portico, and not more than twelve thousand people are expected to attend the evening festivities. The fireworks for the night of the fourth are here, ready to be touched off. Some idea of the extent of the display may be had from the fact that there were twenty car loads of material. The inaugural supper is to be cooked in New York and brought to this city on a special train. At Buchanan's inauguration the guests ate up 900 chickens and 500 gallons of oysters. They drank 400 gallons of claret punch and 3,000 bottles of wine. But this is nothing to what will be consumed at the Cleveland supper. According to the itemized list of preparations, 850 turkeys are on their way to the supper, with lobsters, oysters, clams, salmon, bass, hams, roast beef, and tongue in proportion. The receipts will scarcely be equal to the expenditure for the inauguration. The loss of a few thousand is expected, the deficiency to be made up by patriotic Democrats.

Although the inauguration is only four days distant, Mr. Cleveland's cabinet is still open to guess work. And it seems likely to be so up to the time it is officially sent to the Senate. Even the quid nuncs have become puzzled with regard to it, and nothing more is actually known about the Cabinet than was known a month ago. It is the common understanding that five of the seven members have been chosen, but nothing has been said or done that would prevent Mr. Cleveland from changing the list at the last moment. A Congressman from New York, who is supposed to have the confidence of the President elect has remarked several times significantly, that when the Cabinet is authoritatively announced it will cause much surprise. The ability of Mr. Cleveland to keep his own counsel apparently, and to seal the lips of those in whom he confides, is a rare power, that excites wonder. The last visit of Senator Lamar to Albany, during which he spent a night with Mr. Cleveland, furnishes a large amount of gossip at the Capitol. Of course it was agreed that the Mississippi Statesman would be a solid man with the new administration, but as to the particular Cabinet office which he would fill the mystery seems to deepen.

This has been a troublesome and exciting week in Congress. The House has been rushing business with the hope of avoiding an extra session. There was a common desire to get through with the work, but the body was not in an acquiescent mood, and everything that was gotten had to be fought for. Appropriation bills have been passed, the River and Harbor bill has been making a final struggle for life, and the silver suspension proviso, in the Sundry civic bill involved the House in an angry controversy. The final outcome does not yet appear. The shadow of an extra session seems to have grown smaller with some finished work, but of Congress it can always be said, that no one can tell what a day may bring forth.

To the fashionable world Lent brings a fashionable rest. The season just passed has been one of great brilliance, and has proved one fact indisputably. Society people, that is, those who lead the fashions in entertaining and in dress, are not affected by the business depression. Their wealth, as a rule, is so great that they are unmindful of the financial storms which sweep over the country, bringing ruin to so many less powerful craft.

A REMARKABLE ESCAPE.

Mrs. Mary A. Daily, of Tunkhannock, Pa., was afflicted for six years with Asthma and Bronchitis, during which time the best physicians could give no relief. Her life was despaired of, until in last October she procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discobery, when immediate relief was felt, and by continuing its use for a short time she was completely cured, gaining in flesh 50 lbs., in a few months. Free trial bottles of this certain cure of all throat and lung diseases at R. E. Phillips Drug Store. Large Bottles $1.00.

CANAJOHARIE EXCITED.

The Principal of The Fairfield Seminary Shot Dead.

Canajoharie, March, 2.—There is great excitement in this county over the brutal murder of Prof. C. S. Smith, principal of the Fairfield seminary, who was shot and killed by Dr. Richter at Middlefield Saturday afternoon. Richter had separated from his wife and refused to give her any property. She obtained a writ of replevin and went to Richter's house accompanied by Prof. Smith, who was a husband of her niece. While Smith was pointing out to a constable the goods claimed by Mrs. Richter, the doctor shot in the back. Smith was only able to reach the street, and tell [illegible] how he had been shot, when he expired. The murderer was lodged in Herkimer county jail. The people threatened to lynch him. Horse Whipped by His Wife.

There was an exciting scene in a Fulton livery stable on Saturday afternoon last, the participants being a young East side married man and his wife. The young man referred to, has, it is said, shown considerable interest in one of Fulton's fair damsels and on Saturday started out to hire a rig to drive to that thriving town. His wife, however, suspected his intentions and he finally changed his plans and took the 1:15 train. When his wife learned of this she at once hired a rig and drove to Fulton, arriving in time to see her husband drive into a livery stable with a young lady in the cutter with him. The infuriated woman followed close behind and reached the stable a few minutes after her husband who saw her coming and sought a convenient place to hide. She demanded of the livery keeper where he had gone but he refused to tell her. Taking the whip from her sleigh, she searched the stable and finding her recreant spouse hiding behind a box proceeded to administer a severe horsewhipping while he howled with pain.—[Oswego Palladium.

Silver Wedding.

The leading society event of the past week was the celebration of the 25th. wedding of the Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Markham. Between one and two hundred members of his church and congregation reinforced by numerous former friends in Oswego, Hannibal, and elsewhere. At an early hour the spacious parlors in the parsonage were filled with a company of earnest friends. From Oswego came the Rev. and Mrs. Darling, Mr. and Mrs. Earle, and Mr. and Mrs. Howe, and Mrs. Worts, Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy, Dr. Rainier and Miss Newkirk. A Baldwinsville correspondent says: "We hear it rumored that the New York Central railroad people are talking up a scheme which if carried out will benefit Baldwinsville very much. A branch road is now proposed from the Central at Warners, to this village, Fulton and Oswego. We hope this is true, as some competition in freight, express and passenger rates is needed here.

Miss Ida Perrault, who has been visiting in Fulton the past year, started last evening for her house in San Francisco, Cal. The Fulton correspondent to the Standard says: "It is no longer a secret that she expects to return in the early summer, accompanied by a former Fultonian, now engaged in extensive business in Syracuse, and a leading society man, where they will make their home.'

Dunbar, photographer, who leaves today for Baldwinsville, is deserving of a word of commendation, inasmuch as he voluntarily paid over to Ford Morris last fall's political assessment of $5, which Ford said he would give the Republican committee credit for. But a person who will pay political debts, and after suffering defeat at that, should be classed among the extra honest.—[Correspondent Sunday Standard.

The Salvation Army warriors do not lack for listeners at their nightly denounciations of sin at Church's hall. From their report to the War Cry, we are led to believe they are doing good work among a certain class in our midst. There is a large territory here for Christian workers and though we do not altogether advocate their style of worship, we believe they are in earnest and can only hope that good and wholesome results may spring forth from their labors.

The entertainment to be given by the ladies of the Universalist church bids fair to eclipse any former effort. Among the amusing features will be a representation of the Smith family, every member of which is a born vocalist and some of them well up in instrumental music. From the well known ability of this family to give a good thing when they try, our people may rest assured that there will be no lack of fun in store for them on Friday evening of this week. Ingalls Crossing.

A very pleasant surprise party took place at the residence of W. F. Ingalls last Wednesday evening. About fifteen couples were present. Most of the evening was spent in dancing after excellent music furnished by the Gilbertsville band. All went home at a late hour well pleased with the enjoyments of the evening.

Estate of Charles Meyer.

Among the papers filed at the County Clerk's office is one in the suit of Amelir Durker against Frank J. Meyers and other heirs to the estate of Charles Meyers of Phœnix, who was poisoned not long ago. The suit is for a portion of the property.

OBITUARY.

Clara Louise Kellogg, only child of Mr. and Mrs. George Kellogg, died at the residence of her parents in Fulton, on Sunday morning. She was born November 13, 1868, and up to the time of her affliction gave promise of being a strong and vigorous woman. She was a bright, active and lovable child, and possessed a kind nature and gentle disposition, traits that fitted her to bear with patience and fortitude the severe misfortune that came to her when she had attained the age of eight years. A spinal trouble resulting in partial paralysis confirmed her an invalid, since which affection she has been a constant and continual sufferer. In her latter years she relieved the tedium of her protracted illness, and diverted her mind with brush and pencil, displaying marked artictic power and taste. Had her life and strength been spared she doubtless would have achieved honor and success in these branches of art. However by that large circle of her friends and acquaintances, there is an honor accorded her that is above the plaudits of connoisures of the canvass. The never murmuring, smiling patience with which ever surrounded her unhappy condition, the always kind and pleasant words that forever came from her lips, are virtues so superior that the gilded tributes of men seem of trifling worth, indeed they are the blessings conferred by the Supreme artist—the sunlight upon the shade. Akin to these, was the grand, faithful and royal devotion of her grief-stricken parents. What human experience, wisdom, science and love could bestow to soften and alleviate has been provided. The tie that bound the suffering one to the them, and the parents to her, was as strong as hooks of steel, and while the busy, rushing world counts that a blessing in disguise that secures peace from trouble and rest from pain through death, she would have loved yet to live in the smile and bounty of her parents' love, and they would have loved to have her. ***

A telegram was received this morning by Eber G. C. Rice announcing the death of his brother Mr. Samuel C. Rice at Clio, Mich, yesterday. Mr. Rice was for many years a resident of this town and well known by many of our citizens. His remains will be brought to this village next Friday afternoon and interred in Mt. Adnah, Inauguration Day.

March came in rather lamb-like.

The Democratic banner floats to the breeze to-day.

The winter term of school No. 2 expires two weeks from Friday.

How many are there this morning who can tell just how it happened?

The price of tickets to Gorton's minstrels to-morrow evening is 35 and 50 cents.

County Judge Wright was taken to the insane asylum at Utica for treatment on Monday last.

Dan Shattuck of Lower Oswego Falls shipped another car load of fine horses to New York last week.

For 30 Days, Special Inducements in Watches, Clocks and Silver Ware, at Hamilton's. Repairing best, if not the lowest priced.

At an election for sergants held by the 29th seperate company at Oswego, Monday evening, Eli M. DeRusha of this village was elected a sargeant.

Frederick Foster of the north part of the town is offering for sale his stock and farming utensils, preparatory to moving West. Read his auction notice in another column.

If the two persons will return the pair of sleighs which they took from Cayuga street on Saturday evening, there will be no further exposure. Owner's name on bottom of sleighs.

The taking of testimony in the case of Phillip Lamont charged with the murder of Gilbert Lampkin, of Fulton, was concluded Friday at Buffalo. One witness testified that Lampkin seemed as anxious to fight as Lamont.

A business man of this village remarked to us the other day that he could trace $1.00 worth of extra sales to every line of advertising inserted in THE TIMES for once in a recent issue. Still there are some men who claim advertising does not pay.

Quite a large number of the M. E. Aid society of Gilberts Mills held a rousing sociable at the residence of A. H. Sutton last Friday evening. Refreshments were served and a general good time enjoyed by all until a late hour. A liberal amount was added to their finances.

On account of Regent's work, Prof Boothby connot meet the Lawrence C. L. S. C. as intended to-night. Therefore the meeting is postponed until Friday evening March 13th, at 7:30 sharp at the school house, where four weeks work in chemistry will be reviewed and experiments in chemistry of fire will be given.

The Fulton polo club go to Oswego this evening to play a game with the Casino's, a newly organized club of that city. Both clubs have done considerable practicing the past week and the game no doubt will be close and exciting. On Friday evening the Fulton club go to Syracuse to take part in a game with the Empire's of that city.

The removal to Baldwinsville of Mr. S. N. Dunbar necessitates the removal also of Mr. J. H. McGowan who will continue to act as his photographer at that place, Mr. McGowan during his stay here has not only proven himself to be a worthy citizen but an artist of high standing. He has turned out an excellent quantity of work which has given satisfaction. With his many friends we regret his departure.

Mr. Stiles has just completed a beautiful little marine sketch for Syracuse parties. It is a pity that this artist does not exhibit his paintings before sending them out of town. In Syracuse his work is always hung in Hendrick's window for several days before being delivered to the purchaser, and never fails to attract much attention. In our town, where there is so little chance to see good specimens of true art, it is to be regretted that we are constantly losing such fine examples. We would suggest to Mr. Stiles, that if he would consent to show his paintings in some public window before sending them away, it would be a rare treat, appreciated by his fellow towns people.

NOTICE.

All persons having unsettled accounts with E. W. Ross, or E. W. Ross & Co., will present the same for adjustment, and any parties indebted to us will make immediate payment and oblige [illegible] Winter is the time when stock feeding is most generally attended to on a large scale, and [illegible] basement the manure will gradually be in a condition to remove when the weather outside admits, and it seems now to be the practice of the best farmers to spread it on the [illegible], without fear of any appreciable loss. We therefore urge upon all farmers about to build to plan for a basement under the whole barn, and when circumstances possibly admit of it to put basements under barns already built. In many cases these can be raised temporarily to a height to admit of convenient excavation, and then lowered on the new wall when constructed. A man who has once had a good basement feels lost without one.

It used to be an old (and a hideous) practice to pitch the manure from horse stables out-of-doors through a window on the back side of the barn, where it would be exposed all winter to the weather, and also be piled against the barn, and when removed there would be a great blotch on the siding which would soon rot away and need to be replaced. Much of such a pile on opening in the spring would be "fire-fanged," as farmers call it—that is, fermented to death, or with all its volatile and moist parts driven out into the atmosphere, so that only a light tuft of fibre, worthless for anything but a mulch would be left. It could of course have been hauled away in time, but the energy of the old-time, slow-going farmer, was not equal to that. With a good barn basement such a waste and disfigurement are not necessary at all, and if occasion requires it to be left till spring it can be pitched over in the cellar or so composted with absorbents that no harm will be done, and this work can be attended to when storms prevent out-of-door work. In scores of ways a basement is useful, and, properly managed, do no harm to the stock or hay above.

When no basement is built there is usually a space under the barn which becomes a sort of camping ground for skunks, weasels, cats, dogs, and fowls, each in turn, so that it is a good deal of nuisance if not kept carefully closed. The sills and floor timbers under such a barn rot away sooner than where there is a basement, and this is another reason in favor of the latter. A side hill is not necessary, but a little elevation so as to secure good drainage, is desirable.—[The Heathstone Farm and Nation.

Cooking Food For Swine.

In cold weather much good is done by giving hogs food that is warm. It warms up the body, and stimulates the digestive organs to vigorous action. As J. M. Stahl says in the Agriculturist, it pays always to warm slops in cold weather. The main reason farmers do not feed more cooked food to their swine, is fancied labor and trouble of prepairing it. A good utensil is a large iron kettle, swung upon two poles of sufficiently strong wood. The bail is removed, and a piece of chain, foot long is passed through each eye of the kettle, and over the respective pole. The poles are placed on forked sticks, set in the ground. The poles should be parallel, and as far apart as are the eyes of the kettle. Place near the kettle a large, light though, made of 2-inch pine boards, which may be situated in a small lot separated from the hog lot by a fence with a small gate. Old broken fence rails make excellent, cheap fuel; they ignite readily, give a quick, hot fire, and soon die down. When the cooking is done, rake the fire to one side, and bring the trough partially under the kettle on that side from which the fire has been removed. Raise the pole from that side out of the crotches, and let it down. This will tilt the kettle on the edge of the trough, and most of the food will be deposited in it; the ballance is easily scooped out with a board or pan. When only one pole is used, it is difficult to get the cooked food into the trough. After the food has cooled sufficiently, open the gate in the fence, and let the hogs into the feast. Managed in this way, the labor of cooking a kettle of food can be done in five minutes, and the only expense of making the ration is a few piecies of old rails.—[Our Country Home.

Many Western farmers are having a hard time of it. Much money has been lost on the last wheat crop. Prices have gone so low that they won't even cover the cost of production. Many have found it necessary to mortgage their property at 8 and 10 per cent. interest. Another trouble stares the winter wheat grower in the face. In addition to his losing money on his last crop, he is in a fair way to have no crop at all next year. The winter has been bad for wheat fields, owing to alternate freezing and thawing, causing a breakage of [illegible] Unless we [illegible] from loss by [illegible]

Whenever a horse is wanted, never leave him till he is rubbed quite dry. He will probably get a chill if neglected.

No man knows the true value of his horse until he has won his regard and confidence, as it were. The whip will never do this.

The chill ought to be taken off any drink given to the pigs in freezing weather if we would get best results for care and feed.

Dyspepsia is too common among farmers. Live from the "fat of the land," but study to prepare the food to be more wholesome.

It is said that if apples are covered with buckwheat chaff they will keep well and do not freeze as easily as when straw, sawdust or earth are used.

Grain fed to milch cows in the winter will pay big returns in butter and cheese inside of the next nine months. Stalks and straw alone can not be fed to advantage.

Orchard grass should seldom be sown alone, but be mixed with an equal bulk of two or three other varieties of meadow grasses. Clover may be also included in the mixture.

In the work of feeding animals, by Professor Stewart, it is stated, as the result of careful experiment, that ten pounds of turnips and one and a half pounds corn meal will fatten a young sheep or lamb faster than three pounds of corn alone.

Before one buys a strange horse as a good one, he should, if possible, use him awhile under various circumstances. There are about as many tricks in horse selling as there are flies in dog days.

If a farmer desires to know how a cow feels that jumps fences to get something to eat, let him put himself on half or quarter rations for a month or so. He will then have more sympathy for her, and will see that she has a full supply.

A cow or horse so fed as to have a full supply at each feeding time will not be likely to die of over-eating when it gains accidental access to a full meal tub or grain bin. It is the half starved animals that kill themselves at such times.

A good butter cow can generally be produced by good feed. A $5,000 Jersey cow will do poorly for butter on the care and feed that many farmers give their animals.

As a substitute for blooded stock. put pleanty of good blood into the stock you have by good feeding. Even blooded stock will be common stock will be common stock with poor feeding.

To "break" horses thoroughly begin in colt-hood. Gentle usage and familiar handling then will save a great deal of hard work, some risk, and some profanity afterwards.

The Wild Horses of the West.

The wild horses of Wyoming and Western Nebraska are compact little animals, weighing from 800 to 1,100 pounds. The majority of them stand fourteen hands high. In color they are usually brown, sorrel or bay. A gray is seldom seen, unless it is a horse that has strayed away from civilization. Their tails grow long, frequently dragging on the ground, but their manes are like those of other horses, and not flowing to their knees, as they are represented in some books. The eye, probably from being constantly on the watch, is larger than the eye of the domestic horse, and even when tamed the eye remains a distinctive mark of the horse's origin. Wild horses, when captured or tamed, are superior to other horses of the same size. Many of them are used by the cowboys, and others are broken to harness and driven as carriage horses, being entirely trustworthy.

Not a Reliable Firm.

A man brought home some rat poison one evening. His mother-in-law mistook it for something else and ate a quantity of it. They had a terrible time that night, but the old lady's life was saved.

"It was a close call," said the doctor the next morning, "she ate enough of it to kill a dozen persons, but fortunately the poison had been in stock a long time, and most of its strength had evaporated."

Some months afterward the son-in-law was asked if Messrs. Poultice & Co. were reliable druggists to deal with.

"I wouldn't recommend them," he said. "They swindled me once on some rat poison."—[N. Y. Times.

TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT. STRONGER THAN ANY OTHER BUTTER COLOR.

BURLINGTON, VT., May 23, 1882.

I hereby certify that I have examined the Butter Color prepared by Wells, Richardson & Co., and that the same is free from all alkali or any other substance injurious to health; that I have compared it with some of the best of the other butter colors in the market, and find it to be more than twenty-five per cent. stronger in color than the best of the others.

I am satisfied that it is not liable to become racid, or in any way to injure the butter. I have examined it after two months free exposure to the air in a place liable to change temperature, and no trace of rancidity, while other kinds similiarly exposed became racid.

How Watch Cases are Made.

The many great improvements introduced in the manufacture of the Jas. Boss' Gold Watch Case, have led to similar improvements in the making of silver cases.

Under the old methods, each part of a silver case was made of several pieces of metal soldered together, requiring a great amount of cutting and soldering, which softened the metal and gave it the pliability of lead rather than the elasticity of silver.

Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one solid piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily apparent, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it.

To test the superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, take one of 3 oz. weight, press it squarely in the center when closed, and it will not give, while a case of same weight of any other make will give enough to break the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and gold joints.

Send 3 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome Illustrated Pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

The Train Boy on a Long Run.

Several years ago it was discovered that a slight error had been made in the calculation of the sun's distance from the earth, and owing to a misplaced logarith, or something of that kind, a mistake of 3,000,000 miles was made in the result. People cannot be to careful in such matters. Supposing on the strength of the information contained in the old-time table a man should start out with only provisions sufficient to take him 89,000,000 miles and should then find that 3,000,000 miles stretch out ahead of him. He would then have to buy fresh figs of the train boy in orto sustain life. Think of buying nice, fresh figs on a train that had been en route 250 years! Imagine a train boy starting out at 10 years of age, and perishing at the age of 60 with only one-fifth of his journey accomplished. Think of five train boys one after the other, dying of old age on the way, and the train at last pulling slowly into the depot with not a living thing on board except the worms in the "nice eating apples!"—[Bill Ney in the Cleveland Sun.

Mark Twain's Favorite Style of Reception.

Mark Twain, it seems, is a very congenial, moderate fellow, and likes a convivial time with friends. A few years ago, when he was here, a committee of newspaper men waited upon him and tendered some sort of entertainment in his behalf.

"Well," said he with his cutomary colicquial limp, "I have had a good deal of this sort of marble palace and gilded chandelier business and I don't want any more, but if I could get together with the boys in a quiet, cozy place, where a fellow might smoke a cob pipe and put his feet on the table if he wanted to, and then I don't know but what I'd enjoy it."

The place was procured and the humorist sat with the pipe and tobacco beside him and his hat on his head and related yarns the whole night through to the edification of a score of fellow scribblers.

In addition to demands for autographs and garden seeds, says a Washington correspondent, Congressmen are now bored with requests to write their names with indelible ink upon squares of silk or linen, which are to be made into quilts. They are also importuned for pieces of neckcloths and waistcoats, and one persistent damsel in Iowa has written to every married Congressman asking for a piece of one of his wife's silk dresses, "seconds or light colors preferred." Several times the attendants at the White House have detected female visitors in the act of cutting pieces from the brocade curtains of the east room, and there [illegible] considerable pieces have been [illegible] abstracted.

Why, I believe FAVORITE REMEDY will cure anything. One night, a while ago, John Layton, an engineer who runs the [illegible] from Boston, came on my engine [illegible] He was worn out with work, had a high fever, and was so nervous he almost broke down crying. "Nonsense, John," I said, "cheer up. I've got something on my engine that will set you up in a jiffy." I took out my bottle of FAVORITE REMEDY, lifted his head and gave him a good dose. He went to bed. Two days after I saw him looking healthy as a butcher. "Dan," he said, "what was that stuff you gave me the other night?" "It was DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, Rondout, N. Y." said I. "Well, I don't care whose remedy it is, it's the thing for a man on the railroad." So say we all.

Yours, etc., DANIEL FITTS.

This preparation goes to the root of disease by purifying the blood and rousing every organ into healthy action. It is useful at home, shops, in office—everywhere.

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made.

☞And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense.

A Love Story.

BY F. E. BUDDLE.

Pretty maid
On the cars;
Drummer man
For cigars.

Cars are stuck
In a drift;
Engine comes,
Gives a lift.

Maiden looks,
Very sly;
Drummer seems
Wonderous fly.

Cars are slow
Coming in;
Drummer wants
Maid to win.

Drummer winks
At the maid;
Maiden seems Much afraid.

Plenty time,
Little hash;
Drummer makes Stunning mash.

Maiden drops
Handkerchief;
Drummer comes
To relief

"Single man ?"
Asked the maid
"Yes, you bet!"
Drummer said.

Of the maid
And presents
Handkerchief;
Compliments

"Want to be Married man ?"
Asked the maid
Once again.

Maiden's looks;
Calls the boy;
Buys some nuts;
There is joy

"Bet your life !"
Grinned the chap.
"Want to be Happy pap !"

Tells her How
He will play
Splendid Joke
Saturday

"Very good."
Maiden said.
"Find a girl
You can wed;

On the house
Represents—
Charge the bill
"To expense."

I am bound
For my part—
Gave my hand
And my heart

"Oh, we'll have
Lot of fun !
Charge it up
Brooks & Son."

To your boss
Long ago ;
You, my friend,
Have no show."

Drummer feels awful hard,
For He's sold by the yard.

SNOWED IN.

The Story of a Brave Girl.

One cloudy winter morning, not less then twenty years ago, there was an unusual commotion about a certain little old house standing far up the St. John River.

Within, Mrs. Grace sat before the great fire-place in the fore room, so bundled up in shawls and blankets and hoods that she could scarcely stir. In a warm corner of the hearth lay three or four hot bricks, well wrapped in newspapers, and two home-made robes were hanging across a chair to warm—everything indicating preparations for a long, cold journey. Without, Mr. Grace was hitching the old, red mare into the thrills of the still older red pung, that looked as if it might have come over in the "Mayflower." His round, good natured face wore a troubled expression, and he jerked at old Dolly's bit once or twice in an ungentle way which wasn't like himself.

The small part of Mrs. Grace's face that was visible among the folds of her home knit hood showed the same look of anxiety, and her voice trembled a good deal when she spoke to the children and gave Charly her last directions. There were four of the children —Dean and Emma and Joe and Charly —though Charly was not one of the Grace children. Mrr. Grace had taken her—a wee, lame mite—when there was no one else to take her, and she often declared she couldn't and didn't love one of her own little ones better than she could and did love Charly. Emma and Dean and Joe were round, rosy little bodies of three and five and seven years, blued eyed and yellow haired. Charley was eleven and she was neither round nor rosy. Her face was thin and her eyes were big and shadowy. And Charly was lame. There was a pair of tiny crutches always by her chair.

"I could not think of going said Mrs. Grace, "if Charly was not the wise, pacient little mother I know she is. I never was so worried in my life. But what can I do?"

It was a hard question to answer, indeed. For the night before had come a letter from a sister in a distant town, saying that her mother—the children's dear old grandmother—was very ill. "come at once," the letter read; and it was a week when Mr. Riggold, who lived two mile above them, but was yet their nearest neighbor in the sparcely [illegible] region, brought it from the post-office, five miles below. It was little to be wondered at that the tears filled poor Mrs. Grace's eyes, that her lips quivered and her voice shook.

"I couldn't do it if it was not for trusting in Charly so," she repeated time and again, in tones that brought a [illegible] glow to Charly's thin face. "I know you'll take good care of them, dear. There is bread enough baked, and I have left the jar of doughnuts in the [illegible]."

[illegible]

after to-morrow night, sure. All ready, wife."

And in a few moments old Dolly was jogging at her best pace down the snowy level of the river. It was thirty long miles to Dunbar Corner.

"I wish they were home again," said Joe.

"They will be before you know it," laughed Charly. "Now I'll tell you a story."

So the three little ones cuddled around Charly's chair before the open fire, while she told them the wonderful story of the "Three Tiny Pigs" and from first to last they listened breathlessly, though they had heard the same story many times before, no doubt. Charly had a wonderful gift for telling stories, Mrs. Grace often declared.

And Charly had a gift for something besides story telling. When the story came to an end she smiled.

"Bring me my box, will you, Joey, please?" Charly asked.

Her poor little limb was so weak and mishappen that it was with difficulty she could move about, even with the aid of her crutches.

Joe obeyed, climbing up on the wide four posted bed in the corner and taking from a shelf above it a square wooden box with a sliding cover. Dean and Emmy knew what was coming then.

"Dive me the kitty," pleaded Emmy.

"And me the mooes," said Dean.

"They're deers, goosey," said Joe, with a little scornful sniff. "Let me see all of 'em, won't you Charly?"

Charly smiled in the brightest way and pulled off the cover. Shall I tell you what were there? The daintiest little images under the sun, carved all in wood, and the largest one scarcely four inches high. It is true they were the work of a single awkard tool, in untaught fingers, but if you had seen them, I am sure you could not help exclaimed, with Joe and Dean and Emmy.

"Oh, Charly, how pretty their are!"

They were exceedingly true to life, too. There was the old house cat, which Emmy instantly appropriated—why you could almost hear her drowsy purr—and there was Dean's "mooses," with their delicate branching horns, and a pair of rabbits eating clover, and a cunning, creeping baby, and there was old Dolly herself, standing with drooping head and lopped ears—lazy Dolly.

"I'd know her any where laughed Joe.

Charly laughed, too, and fingered her treasures lovingly. Her cheeks glowed, and her eyes were starry.

"Do you think they are nice?" she asked; as nice as some they have at the stores at Christmas time, Joey?"

"Nicer," returned Joe in a tone expressive of great wisdom and experience; "whole heap nicer."

"Well," pursued Charly; "I am going to make all I can, and when I get enough I'll send them to sell. Mrs. Ringgold said they ought to be worth half a dollar a piece."

"O-oh!" cried Joe, quite taken aback by this prospect of unbounded wealth. "What'll you do with so much?"

"I know," put in Dean. "You'll get cured, won't you Charly?"

The quick tears sprang to Charly's dark eyes.

"If I can," said she, and she pulled Emmy to her, and hid her face in the baby's yellow curls. "Maybe I can't."

"Mr. Peck said you could if you could go to see Dr. Lester. He can cure everything."

"But it will cost a great deal of money—maybe a hundred dollars," said Charly. "I'll have to make two hundred of these, Joey."

"Well, you ain't going to wait that long," declared Joe, stoutly. "Father says jest as soon as this farm pays any thing, he's going to take you to Fredericton, to see Dr. Lester. Maybe 'twill pay next summer; we're going to have a cow then. And we haven't been here long enough yet, you know."

"That'll be real nice," said she. "Now after dinner I'll cut out some more."

"I think it's real fun," said Joe. But Charly only shook her head and smiled again.

Well, that day passed and next, and all the time the sun did not once show his face. The clouds hung heavy and dark came early, and weather wise Joe, with his nose against the window pane, prophecied a storm.

"I hope 'twon't come though, till father and mother are home," he said.

It did, however. When the children awoke next morning the snow was falling fast and steadily in large flakes. It had grown very much colder, too, in the night. Poor little Joe's teeth chattered spitefully even after he had raked open the bed of coals in the fire place, and built a roaring fire. The wind came up with the sun; it whistled and raved along the bleak river shore in a way that set the timbers of the old house to creaking dolefully.

"I don't believe they'll come to-night," said Joe, when dark began to fall.

"Won't they Charly?"

"Oh, Charly, won't 'em?"

"Do you s'pose a wolf chased father and mother?" asked Joe, with a dismal quaver, breaking in upon the narrative of the "Tiny Pig."

"A wolf couldn't catch our Dolly," said Dean, quickly; "she's too smart—and big."

Charly laughed. For the world she would not acknowledge that such a possibility had occurred to her own mind.

[illegible]

tried to open the outer door, a white wall repelled him. Their store of provisions, too, was nearly exhausted, and that seemed worse than all the rest, until Joe came in from the entry with his arms full of wood and his eyes full of tears.

"That's every bit there is," he quavered. "Oh Charly, why don't father come?"

"He will," said Charly, with a brave, bright, smile, though her heart was like lead. "Now we'll be real saving of this wood, and only put on one stick at a time."

Oh, how cold the room grew!—colder and colder while time dragged on, and those last sticks were burning slowly away. They ate their last bits of bread, then, and because Charly said she could not eat, there was very little more for Emma, Dean, and Joe.

But Joe, though he looked wistfully at the frozen morsels, was struck with a sudden recollection.

"You didn't eat any breakfast, Charly, nor any last night, because your head ached. Ain't you hungry?"

"Never mind," said Charly, cheerily, "I'll eat enough when they come home."

The bread disappeared then to the last crumb.

"I'm awful hungry yet," said Joe.

"So'm I," echoed Dean, with a pitiful pucker, "and I'm awful cold."

Charly hugged Emmy tighter and looked around.

There were the chairs—stout oaken ones.

"Can't you break up a chair, Joey?" she asked.

But he couldn't though he tried manfully—poor little Joe—with tears standing on his cheeks.

"Never mind," said Charly again. And then the forlorn little group together over the dying fire. How cold it was! and how the wind rocked the old house and blew its freezing breath in through every chinck!

"I'm sleepy," murmured Emmy drowsily. Charly looked at her in sudden terror. She had been sobbing with the cold and hunger, and now her baby face looked pinched and her hands blue with the cold. But the golden head dropped heavily against Charly's arm—and Emmy went to sleep at this time in the day. A dull red coal winked among the ashes. Charly saw it, and straitened Emmy up with a little shake.

"We'll have a funny fire," said she, with a catch in her voice. Bring the—the box, Joey."

"Oh, Charly, no!"

"Yes," said Charly. "I can make plenty more. Wake up, Emmy."

And in a minute Emmy was wide awake enough to see a tiny bright blaze upon the hearth. They burned the box first, and then the pretty carvings one by one. All too soon they were gone, and there only remained a few ashes.

"I'm just as cold," whispered Dean. "I'm sleepy, too, Charly."

"Well, you shall go to sleep," said Charly; "and when you wake up I know they'll be here. But we'll have some nice fun first. Who wants a doughnut?"

"Oh, Charly Grace, you havn't got one!"

"Yes, I have," returned Charly, with a triumghant little laugh. "I saved these out of mine." She stood Emmy on the hearth, and hobbled as briskly as could be across the floor, placing two chairs, one at each end of the room. "Now you run a race around those till I say it's enough, and I'll give you one apiece. Run just as fast as you can."

At first the children demurred, they were so cramped and tired and drowsy; but the sight of three brown delicious looking cakes which Charly produced from her pocket nerved them to action. Around and around the chairs they ran, Joe ahead, Emmy in the rear, breathing out little clouds of steam. And Charly laughed and clapped her hands and cheered them on, until at last they stopped from sheer fatigue, puffing like three little locomotsves, and with their pulses beating in a lively way.

Charly hobbled over to the bed. "Get in, all of you," she said; "then I'll give you your cakes. I know they'll be here when you wake up."

She tucked them in warmly and then she went back to her chair. She put the end of her crutches upon two or three live coals and blew them into a tiny blaze. Pretty soon, when she had warmed herself a little, she would creep in beside Emmy. She listened to the deep regular breathing from the bed.

"They are going to sleep," she murmured. "I've done the best I could—the best I could."

The words echoed from the walls of the cold little room and rang themselves over and over in her brain. How warm the place was growing and how dark! She thought she would crawl over to the bed and get in with Emmy and Dean and Joe. But she did not stir.

She sat there still a little white figure, with a pair of half burned crutches at her feet, when less than an hour later a man with frosty beard and hair, forced himself through the snow blink at the door. It was Mr. Grace, [illegible] the storm had rendered the road impassable, and he had tramped the whole distance from Dunbar Corner upon snow shoes. It was a long weary walk, [illegible] and he had been about it two days. But when he opened the door of his house he forgot all. In less time [illegible] had made kindling wood of another chair [illegible] space to tell you all that happened—what Mrs. Grace said and did when she came, a few days later, with the welcome news that grandma was better, and heard what Mr. Grace had already heard from Joe and Emma and Dean, how the story was told throughout the settlement over and over, and how Charly was praised on all sides; nor of how the people of Grand Ford, the little village five miles below, got up a fair for Charly benefit, which gave her enough to take her to Dr. Lester that very next spring. And though Dr. Lester could not entirely cure her, the weak little limbs grew so much stronger and better that she was able to go without crutches, by limping a very little. When Dr. Lester, too, came to know who Charley was—for the story of that winter's day had already reached his ears—he refused to take his fee, but, instead, added to the little roll of bills, and put the whole in a bank—for Charly.

"She will want to go to school in a little while," said he. "I think she must study art."

"Why, what makes every one so good to me?" asked Charly, with happy tears; "I didn't do anything."

"Didn't you?" asked Mrs. Grace, in return, kissing the glad little face—"didn't you?"

Too Mean for Hanging.

The meanest man in all this land of United America went down from Lincoln, Nebraska, into Kansas, the other day. Mind you, he wasn't a Nebraskan; he was an inter-State immigrant coming from somewhere east of the Mississippi. At Wymore there is a merchant who carries his stock in a basket, and he is famous the land over for his popcorn. He came on the car with his wares, and this mean man, who was traveling with his wife, little child of perhaps three years, and his father-in-law, asked the price of popcorn. "Five cents a package." That was too much. He didn't want any. After the merchant left the car the mean man said: "I want some o' that 'er popcorn, but I ken git it cheaper'n that." Presently he went out on the platform and said to dealer to the dealer in the fruit that cheers but not ine-hic-brates: "Say, mister, I want some of that popcorn, but I hain't got on'y three cents. Now, if you kin lemme have a paper of it fur three cents, all right; but I kain't give no more fur it, because I hain't got on'y that much money." Well, after some dickering, the merchant finally let him have the paper of popcorn for three cents, and the mean man came into the car, sat down beside his wife and little child and began munching his popcorn. Never a crumb did he offer to anybody. He was just enjoying it. He said "I had enough money to buy his whole basketful, but I knowed I could get some for less'n five cents." As he munched, his father-in-law and wife seemed to understand that they were not in on that treat, but the child began to reach up its little dimpled hands, and in the sweetest childish accents beg for some popcorn. Save to hold the package up out of the reach of the pleading little hands, the mean man paid not the slightest attention to the baby, but kept on eating. Presently the mother spoke to him, and said the child wanted some of the corn. "Well," replied her husband, "If the child is any hungrier'n I am an' wants this popcorn more'n I do, he'd ought to have it." But he kept on eating it himself, and never a grain did the child get. Pretty soon the little fellow began to cry for the corn. This may have annoyed the father, because he soon arose, put the pop corn up in the rack, out of the child's reach and went into another car. While he was gone the child continued to cry and reach after the banquet, and the mother took the popcorn down and gave some to the little one. While this was going on the mean man came back. Furious? You never saw anything like it. He snatched the popcorn away from the child and poured a torrent of abuse upon his wife for daring to touch his popcorn. Then he put it back into the rack, and at intervals got up and ate some of it until it was all gone.

Now, in a case of this kind—and the above is a truthful narrative of an occurrance—is not lynch law justifiable? Is not that kind of a man more valuable and useful as a fertilizer than anything else? Isn't he a curse to society as long as he lives? And might not he prove a blessing to the medical student and barren land when he dies? Then why not kill him and make a blessing of him. The world has no use for a mean man. A drunkard, a liar, a swearer, a thief, a tramp, a swindler, a murderer, may have some sphere of usefulness in this world, but a mean man, pure and simple—God wasted mud when He made him.—[Burdett, in Brooklyn Eagle.

AN END TO BONESCRAPING.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill. says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Having had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well.

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c. per box by R. E. Phillips.

FASHION NOTES.

Among the new summer fabrics is velvet bourette.

Jet will be more used than ever in dress and millinery.

Velveteens come for spring in all the new shades of color.

Some of the new shapes of straw bonnets look like a hussar's helmet.

Tinsel threads give effect to many of the new spring woolen novelties.

Entire skirt fronts of Angola lace come among early spring importations.

White hats trimmed in white, will be the fashionable wear for little people in the spring.

Cream velvet hats trimmed with cream white wings of doves and seagulls, will be much worn by children.

There is a tendency to revive the old bourette and boucle effects in fabrics, but they appear in different forms.

Fichus, scarfs, plastrons, and all sorts of accessories of lace are used to transform plain costumes into dressy toilets.

Dress fronts made entirely of passementerie, Angola lace, and braid in lace designs will be a feature in spring fashions.

The waist is pinched very small, the hair worn very high, the bustle huge, and the shoulders square and high, by very fashionable women.

Folds are used instead of flounces to trim dress skirts, and these folds frequently over lap one the other, add extend from the bottom of the skirt almost to the waist.

Basques are long in the skirt, which is frequently only from an inch to two inches below the waist line, and finished in a short pleating in the back.

Table castors are out of date. In lieu thereof are all sorts of pretty novelties in form of bottles, flasks, and cruets for holding oil, vinegar, salt, pepper, and all sorts of codiments.

Braid trimmings in face patterns of very open designs are shown for trimming various parts of dresses, forming plasfrons, revers, side robes, entire tabliers or front bredths, pockets of jackets, cuffs and collars, bretelles and waistcoats.

The outlines for dress this spring are more elaborate, fantastic, and splendid than artistic or elegant; for waists are very long, skirts very ample, bustles big, sleeves tight below the elbow and full and high on the shoulders, and draperies more eccentric than graceful.

Melon waists formed by organ pleats extending from the throat and shoulders to the waist, where a narrow belt draws them to a point, are worn under short Eton and zouave cutaway jackets that reach only one or two inches below the arm-pits, and not to the waist line, even in the back, where they are finished in a point.

An attractive, youthful appearance secured by using Parker's Hair Balsam to all who are getting gray.

Relations of Cholera to Localities.

Relatively low-lying sites are very favorable to cholera. Where the surface of the earth has an undulating outline, it will be found that districts and individual houses which are situated on the summit of the undulation very frequently have no, or very a small, disposition to the developemedt of an epidemic of cholera, while in the hollow of the undulation under like conditions the opposite holds good. The truth of this statement has been seen in single districts where parts or single houses exist on the summit and others lie low. Another feature which is found in every epidemic is the falling off of the disease in the neighborhood of and on mountain ranges. The Himalayan mountains, those of Lebanon and the Alps, have always formed the places of refuge for fugitives from cholera. The immunity or the slight susceptibility, of mountain ranges for cholera is witnessed in India as plainly as it is in Europe. A familiar example is the complete freedom from cholera of the hill stations along the Himalayas, in which, through frequent changes of troops, the cholera, has every chance of being taken up from the plains. In the severe epidemic of 1869 there were only two cases of cholera in nineteen hill stations. A similiar experience was met with in narrower areas. For instance in Murnich 1873-74, the frequency of cholera was widely different in seven barracks of the garrison. In the low lying Isar Kaserne (occupied by cuirassiers, heavy cavalry regiment), out of one thousand men there were forty cases of cholera; in the high-laying Max I I Kaserne (with two field artillery regiments) only three cases, and this without there being any difference in the construction of the caserns, the occupation or the diet of the men, or the drinking water.—[Popular Science Montly.

Some Remarkable Cures and deafness are recorded of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Never fails to cure earache.

'Hallo!' shouted one boy to another, whom he saw running wildly down the street. 'Hallo! are you training for a race?' 'No,' called back the flying boy. 'I'm racing for a train.'

AN [illegible] DISCOVERY.

[illegible]

[illegible] Within the Grasp of Young America.

The ambition of men be stimulated to harder and higher endeavor if they read the following extracts from a notice in the N. Y. Sun of the modest beginning of Mr. Daniel Manning, who is now in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet.

Forty-five years ago, at the age of 9 years, Mr. Manning became an office boy for the Argus, the Democratic newspaper of Albany. He has been connected with the Argus ever since. While yet a lad he became the West Albany stock reporter. Then he reported the senate proceedings for the paper. Next he was made city editor. The death of Mr. Cassidy one of the proprietors, gave him a chance, with the aid of his friends, to buy stock in the paper, and to-day he is the principal owner. He may be said to have gotten his education as a reporter, but while getting it he was already in possession of marked mental qualities that have grown beyond the dreams of those who saw him and helped him when he started. He is president of the Commerical bank and a large owner of the horse railroads, the telephone system the electric lighting company, and a half a dozen other notable Albany institutions. Very little of his money was invested in real estate. He is a chunky tall, man, with a large, round head and fat face, in which a big black moustache, and a sparkling pair of black eyes are are the chief features. He dresses modestly, talks but little, and in a low voice, avoids the crowd, eats one meal early in the morning and another late in the evening, with an apple or banana in between. He is popular, but is intimate with so few that the people round him know little of his private affairs and are content with showing great respect for him. He is an Episcopalian and goes to his pew in St. Paul's church with his daughters every Sunday morning.

Mr. Manning's political influence was first gained with the possession of the control of the Argus, though he had been a raising figure in local politics before that. He was a politican of the Thurlow Weed school, which belong to those men who prefer to take part in the maneouvring, and reap either honors or material profits as the individual may select without ever entering the field for public office. Mr. Manning has never held an office.

After a thorough test H. C. Giesler most positvely asserts that Acker's English Remedy is the best medicine for Asthma, Croup, Coughs, Whooping Cough and all Lung Troubles that can be found. Ask him about it for he fully guarantees it. eow Girls.

Girls are of few days and full of mischief, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.

When the fair young girl cheweth her gum with greater haste and stampeth her pretty foot do though look out.

She cometh forth in low neck and short sleeves; but at morning she lieth in bed while her mother hustleth.

When the sleigh-bell tinkleth, she standeth at the window and yearnith for a beau, and when he cometh she doeth up his purse. He wrappeth the buffalo robe about her and huggeth her much and stayeth out beyond his time, and the livery man addeth four good dollars to his bill.

In the evening he hieth himself away to her father's mansion. He goeth in and sitteth by the fire, and ere he leaveth he popeth the question, and she jumpeth at the chance.

When the cock croweth he taketh his departure, and when he remembereth the smallness of his salary he kicketh himself and compareth himself to an ass —yea, verily.

He getteth his license and goeth forth on the morn of his wedding day, and employeth a Godly man to do the job, and when the sun setteth he findeth himself a married man. Selah!

The Robin nesteth again and he clotheth himself in sackcloth and ashes and runneth swiftly into the gates and knocketh, and telleth the doctor that the wife of his bosem travaileth much, and rusheth back again.

The old woman prophesieth a boy, and he jumpeth up and down and cracketh his heels together with joy; the doctor speaketh words of wisdom cautioneth him not to ratify before the returns are all in.

The night weareth wearily on, and the young man waxeth impatient; but the old lady speaketh words of cheer and prophesieth yet again, and he bideth his time and awaiteth his reward. A cay smitteth his ear and the drum thereof, and he biteth his lip and kicketh himself again as the old woman poketh her head in the door and bringeth tidings of two more girls.—[Through Mail.

RAILROAD PROJECT.

What is mostly needed for the advancement and growth of Fulton and one thing that can insure a material change from its present condition is railroads. It is well known that inducements for manufacturers to locate here are limited. It is true that we are blessed with water power unequalled in the State. But this alone will not actuate a manufacturer to make this place his choice. What they want is good shipping facilities, and that we have not got. Many of the manufacturers of the East depend largely on the West for consumption of their goods. Our two railroads can handle all Eastern shipments with convenience but no advantageous inducements are held out for Western shipments. With the new Phœnix road and the proposed branch of the Central from Warners, through Baldwinsville, Fulton and Oswego, the chances for Fulton's becoming a live little city are certainly encouraging. This would also cause a great competition in freight and passenger rates. Oswego, Fulton and Baldwinsville, would make three strong points for a branch from the Central. The water power in Fulton is now in saleable hands and with at least one more railroad the inducements for manufacturers are unequalled.

THERE were 238 failures reported in the United States last week.

BRADSTREETS, last week, reported a brighter look to the general trade situation than has been reported for several months.

ASSEMBLYMAN HOWE has presented to the Assembly the bill fvaoring the adoption of water works for Oswego. If no opposition is made the bill will go through easily.

THE bill passed by Congress placing Gen. Grant on the retired list, giving him the rank of General and a general's pay of $13,500 per year meets with almost universal approval.

IT is a noteworthy fact that the first Republican President, Abraham Lincoln,—was assassinated as was James A. Garfield, the last Republican President elected by the people.

GENERAL Arthur has not yet decided upon his business plans. He will remain in Washington for a month or two, and it is not probable that he will resume legal practice before September.

THE verdict of the Court Martial in the case of General Swain, is that he be suspended from the service for twelve years, and that his pay during that time shall be reduced one-half. It is generally thought that the verdict is a light one.

SULLIVAN has accepted Ryan's challenge to fight with small gloves, under the new London prize ring rules, for $2,500 to $5,000 a side, for the championship of the world and the Police Gazette diamond belt. Richard K. Fox covered Ryan's forfeit.

THE President has nominated Charles S. Fairchild, formerly of Cazenovia, for the position of first assistant secretary of the treasury under Daniel Manning. The first era of his appearance in politics was when he was appointed by Mr. Tilden as one of the commission to examine into the canal frauds. Mr. Fairchild was elected to the office of Aatorney General of the State in 1875. Since his retirement from that office he has practiced law in New York City.

GREAT freedom of speech prevails in England; but it sometimes makes trouble for her rulers, who under the excitement of party controversy, uttered words that gave them trouble abroad, where politicians talk less freely and are held to stricter account for their declarations. During his celebrated electioneering tour in 1880, Mr. Gladstone was led into reflections upon Austria, which he felt compelled to withdraw after coming into power; and now Lord Granville is publicly explaining words, uttered in the ardor of debate, so carelessly framed that they rasped the feelings of Bismarck, although their severity was meant for the Duke of Richmond. A little more discretion in speech would be a good thing in British politics, while the necessity for a little less would be appreciated by many persons connected with German potitics.—[Syracuse Standard.

The Utica Observer says that Doctor Gray made an examination of Mrs. Kate Meyers, the Oswego county murderess, after her removal to Utica, and his opinion coincides with that of the commission which inquired into her case. He says she is undoubtedly insane.

Fred Clark returned to town from Syracuse Saturday, but was unable to find his wife and child. He then telegraphed to Syracuse, and finding that they had not arrived at his mother's, concluded that they had left for parts unknown. Investigation reveals that Mrs. Clark had left Monday afternoon on the train south. The same day Benjamin Crandall, the village barber, who had frequently called on Mrs. Clark of late, also turned up missing. Yesterday it was reported that Mrs. Clark was in Rochester, and Mr. Clark left for Syracuse. Mr. Clark formerly kept the hotel at Lacona. Crandall leaves a wife who is very highly spoken of and who has the sympathy of the community. It is said by those who pretend to know that both parties did not have more than $13.50. Mr. Clark has always provided handsomly for his wife, and she has hardly inproved her situation.—[Sandy Creek News.

THE EMPIRE STATE.

Sheep are dying from a mysterious cause in Wyoming and Genesee counties.

Nothing has yet been heard of the missing S. S. Conant, late editor of Harper's Weekly.

Of 776 deaths last week in New York 143 were from pneumonia. The record is unprecedented.

The Oneida county Board of Supervisors consists of twenty-two Republicans and twenty one Democrats.

The hame shop of Hayden & Boyd, prison contractors of Auburn was burned Monday. Loss $50,000; partially insured. The State loses $15,000. It was probably set on fire by idle convicts. This leaves but one contract in force in the prison.

The population of Yonkers is slowly decreasing since the strike of the carpet weavers. Since last Monday it is estimated that 600 persons have gone elsewhere in search of work.

Rev. Dr. Storrs of Brooklyn has made it a rule for years not to announce from his pulpit public meetings to which an admission fee is charged. It is only at extremely rare intervals that he departs from this custom.

The Madison Square Garden, New York, has been leased for five years, with the privilege of five more, to Wood & Garrett, the managers of last week's roller skating show, at $50,000 a year. The building will be used as a roller skating rink.

The New York Central railroad's statement for the quarter ending March 31, shows that its gross earnings were $6,136,000, its operating expenses $3,904,000 and its fixed charges $1,485,000. The profit is 1.05 per cent. It is believed the Lehigh Valley railroad will reduce its quarterly dividend to 1¼ per cent.

Palermo.

PALERMO March 6th 1885—On Tuesday last at the Town meeting in Palermo the Town Board after the polls were closed and they had began to count and had counted about fifty of the Excise ballots a man came to the polls and gave them his vote, and it was put into the box, Some one should take the matter in hand and learn them a lesson which they would not forget. The Town is by a large majority Republican and they think they can do as they wish. It's a wonder they are not voting yet.

George Jennings of the clothing firm Jennings & Marrim of Phœnix, is to go into the cheese factory at Clifford with his brother-in-law W. H. Marriam this spring.

There will be some sad faces in the Town soon when the Postoffice has to be moved. No Republican need apply.

Two of Fulton's young ladies, Misses. Frankie and Annie Bogue have been on a visit to the Palermo Center house the past two weeks and they have made it very lively with vocal and instrumental music. We should be very glad to have them call again.

W. H. Marriam of Clifford and Mr. Chappel of Gilberts Mills have bought the Battle Island cheese factory they are both young men and will try and please their patrons. It is said Mr. Chappel will make the cheese.

Parish.

PARISH, March 6, 1885—Putnam Rider, William Orton and Andrew McClymond are the only persons living in town, who voted at our first town meeting held in May, 1828. All of them voted Tuesday at our town meeting. They are over 80 years of age and are strong, healthy men.

Analyzing the Baking Powders.

"ROYAL" THE ONLY ABSOLUTELY PURE BAKING POWDER MADE.—ACTION OF THE STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

Under the direction of the State Board of Health, eighty-four different kinds of baking powders, embracing all the brands that could be found for sale in the state, were submitted to examination and analysis by Prof. C.F. Chandler, a member of the State Board, and President of the New York City Board of Health, assisted by Prof. Edward G. Love, the well known late United States Government chemist.

The officeal report shows that a large number of the powders examined were found to contain alum or lime; many of them to such an extent as to render them seriously objectionable for use in the preparation of human food.

Alum was found in twenty-nine samples. This drug is employed in baking powders to cheapen their cost. The presence of lime is attributed to the impure cream of tartar of commerce used in their manufacture. Such cream of tartar was also enalyzed and found to contain lime and other impurities, in some samples to the extent of 93 per cent. of their entire weight.

All the baking bowders of the market, with the single excuption of "Royal" (not including the alum and phosphate powders, which are long since declared as unsafe or inefficient by prudent housekeepers) are made from the impure cream of tartar of commerce, and consequently contain lime to a corresponding extent.

The only baking powder yet found by chemical analysis to be entirely free from lime and absolutely pure is the "Royal." This perfect purity results from the exclusive use of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent process of the N. Y. Tartar Co., which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and on account of this greater cost is used in no baking powder but the "Royal."

Prof. Love, who made the analysis of baking powders for the New York State Board of Health, as well as for the Government, [illegible]

"I have [illegible] of "Royal [illegible]

[illegible] Every State in the Union contributed to the success of the day's demonstration, and the political significance of the event was lost sight of in the grandeur of the ceremony with which it was accomplished. It was a grand display, a grand day, and a grand outpouring of people. Processions are apt to become monotonous to the residents of the Capitol city, famous for its pageantry, but the inaugural ceremonies instant afforded a scene which no spectator will ever forget. Standing on the west portico of the Capitol, the sight presented on Pennsylvania avenue as the escorting divisons moved with the Presidential party was most magnificent. The regular troops, the artillery, the marine corps, the splendid Pennsylvania regiments, the glittering bayonets, the gay uniforms, admixtures of grey, blue, red, white and green, covering the broad clean avenue from the Capitol to the Treasury, and moving with harmony and military precision to the music of 125 bands, was a spectacle not often vouchsafed to one in a life time. Added to this was the towering dome of the Capitol, the panorama of a beautiful city, with its varied architecture and broad avenues sloaping to the Potomac, while the sun beamed like May on all. A certain Western Congressman was so enthused by the splendor of the scene that he forgot all about the rapidly expiring Congress, and would have missed the closing scenes had not a friend rushed out and informed him that the Grant retiring bill was up. He said he was glad, however, to have been dis-entranced. It was his last vote. He was not re-elected and he thought it might be a long time before he would have another chance to vote for so good a measure.

The ceremonies at the Capitol were the same that have been for years the order upon such occasions. The ceremony of inaugurating the Vice President, in the Senate chamber, was seen by only a few favored hundreds of the masses of people who came to Washington to attend the inauguration But it could not have been otherwise for lack of room there.

It is estimated that Mr. Cleveland was in the presence of 150,000 people while he delivered his address and took the oath of office, standing on a platform in front of the east portico of the Capitol. He wore a full suit of black, Prince Albert coat, standing collar and black tie. He used no manuscript, and spoke in a strong voice, with as much composure apparently as if the event was one of daily occurrence. The Chief Justice then administered the oath, using a small morocco bible that had been given to Mr. Cleveland in his boyhood days by his mother. The new president then received congratulations and handshakings, from many of the distinguished people on the inaugural platform, and applause from the crowd, to all of which he responded by bowing and smiling. The long procession started then at the signal of a cannon, preceded by President Cleveland, who afterwards reviewed the entire line from a stand in front of the Executive Mansion. As the President drove from the capitol to the White House the enthusiasm knew no bounds. There was a deafening round of applause at every stage of the route. Besides the mass of humanity on the streets and stands, rows of heads bordered the tops of buildings, filled the windows, and men climbed the trees, lamp posts, and telegraph poles to get a view of the President.

An incident of the parade was the reception of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee and his division, embracing the Virginia soldiery. Gen. Lee, who was dressed in a handsome grey uniform and rode a magnificent black stallion. He received repeated cheers all along the line.

The pyrotecnic display and the ball made a brilliant finale to the festivities of the day. The latter was an immense crush. President Cleveland, assisted by policemen who endeavored to clear a passageway for him, made the tour of the grand ball twice, but he remarked to a friend at his side, I have never seen anything like this. He expressed earnest satisfaction at the beauty of the room, at the arrangements, and at the distinguished company which had gathered [illegible] as he could not move without assistance, when he finally reached, an exit he escaped to his carriage without overcoat or hat. These were brought to him by an attendant and the wearied President was driven to the Executive Mansion where it may be hoped he slept, for he had gone through enough to kill a less healthy and more excitable man.

[illegible] in the [illegible] of the [illegible].

This section is about thirty miles north and ten miles west of the geographical center of the great "mitten" formed by lake Michigan, Straights of Mackinaw, and lake Huron.

The land is timbered with beech and maple, rock elm, and basswood, with some hemlock and pine in belts here and there—Hard timber predominating four to one. Surface gently undulating—hilly in very few places. Watered by spring brooks ranging from six feet to two rods wide; mean diving over nearly every section.

The soil is generally very fertile—a black mould, sometimes gravel, with clay subsoil—in places a clay soil; in fact all kinds of land can be found, from the most fertile to the poorest; but the largest portion is the most perfect farming land that can be found in the state, while the county in the south and western portions, along the line of two railroads that penetrate this section is quite thickly settled. Back from the railroad from five to fifteen miles the land is from one-quarter to seven-eighths unsettled.

This settlement contains some twelve families settled over twelve sections of land, with a school house near the center, used for both school and church purposes. A considerable portion of our people come from the State of New York since 1870 and '76.

We raise beautiful crops of wheat, corn, oats, potatoes, peas and hay. While all kinds of northern fruits, except peaches, (not an assumed success yet) grow to utmost perfection.

Perfect health, if it can be found on the continent, is the rule here; but we have had an extremely cold winter, at least from January to the first of this month. Now the weather is warming up finely and snow one foot deep—is going fast, and the pioneers are getting out their sap pans and "fixtures" preparatory to the sugar campaign, which is one of our most profitable harvests in this section, some making from two to three thousand pounds and a few much more. People can tap all the trees they can attend to on railroad lands and the supply is absolutely unlimited.

But if there is one thing more than another that surprises these stirring go ahead pioneers it is the reading in your eastern papers of the constantly increasing "labor troubles" and the statements made by agitators seemingly without a shadow of humor or sarcasm, but in sober earnest that "The poor man of these United Ltates, has no chance of escape the clutches of the "grinding monopolist" except by a resort to violence, strikes, and a resort to the law making power to help him gain the "rights of labor" and give him "a chance" to live and be truly free. Of course we are not "educated," and we would in no wise dare to confront the profound logicians and college graduates, like Henry George, Ben Butler, and other "friends of labor" in the east, but it has often occurred to your correspondent while reading the "platforms of principles" and "views" of these giants of the stump that if he could once be permitted to follow them upon their lecture tours, and make a plain statement of facts, and telling the story of the actual work of scores of thousands of North Michigan pioneers, just as they have chopped it down, plowed it out, and built it up, since 1870 and 76, beginning absolutely penniless or with no capital but a few months' provisions and a rude camp outfit, in a small log cabin, with a double bitted axe. If I could once succeed in picturing this glorious work of poor men climbing up to the position of capitalists and employers, by labor alone and wrenching out of the earth, peace plenty and security in spite of the worst that "grinding monopolies" can do to hinder them. If all this could be laid down just as it is before the eyes of your discontented hosts of labor; why, I am as certain as that I exist that I could smash the high toned agitators as easily as the sweep of a bears paw crushes a poodle, and start their simple minded dupes towards the new country of the north west with a rush only equaled by the franctic efforts of ancient crusaders, as they thronged after old Peter the Hermit. If this appears to you as tinctured with sentimental "gush" or as an effort to make a "spread" in print, I will agree, if derired to furnish you with the names and post office address of a sufficient number of old time strikers who have cut the gardian knot of Capital vs Labor with the axe since 1870 in this section to fill one whole column of THE TIMES

I cannot afford to be misunderstood in this the most vitally important matter that can be presented to the minds of workingmen, and when I look about me and see upon all sides of my cabin in the wilderness these pioneers,

"Striking like brave, honest men,
Striking down the foe with ease,
Striking a grand old righteous plan,
Striking down the maple trees."

and doing the thing so neatly and completely, gaining all there is in the term success (not wealth but from $1,500 to $3,000 farm capital) by practicing good old Horace Greely's method of "go west" it does seem as though some body who knows these things, ought to tell the truth, as these barve Backwoods Reformers have hewed it out of solid timber.

For it is true the axes and plows of these pioneers do talk and they speak with a cast steel logic that no "stump" eloquence can argue down, and this is just what they say: "Never before in man's history on this planet, has the poor man of any age or clime possessed a title of the most glorious, abundant and genuine liberty, that is to-day offered the poor man of the United States in the newer portions of the north-west.

I am not "writing up" any particular section. It is the truth and nothing but the truth that I do speak [illegible]

[illegible] in America. While the [illegible] day's travel from a section where the fact of hundreds of thousands of poor laborers, rising from poverty, to independence, in a very few years, is so very common that it fails to excite the least comment or surprise. I very much doubt if a parallel to this can be found in human annals.

In conclusion I would most urgently request the eastern workingman to look sharply into these things, and try inteligently to learn if the above seemingly increditable statements i. e. that a home competence and security, and a peaceful solution of the "vexed problem" is at their very finger's ends, are literally true.

For certainly all can learn without cost, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that that the old fashioned strike for liberty is as practible to-day as it in was in the days of the fathers, only with less than one half the effort and in one half the time.

Truly Yours,
CHAS H. BARLOW.

THIS IDEA OF GOING WEST to Colorado or New Mexico, for pure air to relieve Consumption, is all a mistake. Any reasonable man would use Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup for Consumption in all its first stages. It never fails to give relief in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Brouchitis, pains in the chest and all affections primary to consumption. Price 50 cents and $1. For sale by M. M. Williams. eow

Grant and Rosecrans' Smallness.

And this is the man dying at the age of sixty-three or sixty-four years, whom the Congress of the United States refuses to place on the retired list of the army? And this is the man whom William S. Rosecrans, once a general in the army, and now a member of Congress from the state of California, denounced as a "liar" and as incompetent in military affairs. General Rosecrans! the man who lost his head and would have lost his army at Chickamauga if it had not been for old "Pop" Thomas and "Phil" Sheridan—this man Rosecrans to speak as he does of that great soldier, Grant! Has he no sense of shame? Probably not. But Grant's name will live in history while that of Rosecrans will be buried in merited oblivion. —[Albany Express.

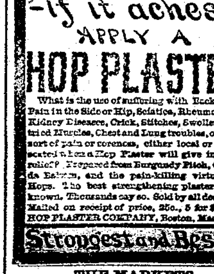
Dr. BOSANKO.

This name has become so familiar with most of the people throughout the United States that it is hardly necessary to state that he is the originator of the great Dr. Bosanko Cough and Lung Syrup, the people's favorite remedy wherever known, for Coughs, Colds, Consumption and all other affections of the Throat and Lungs. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Sold by M. M. Williams. eow

The Deer Hounding Bill.

Signers of the Forest and Stream's petition for a law to forbid the hounding of deer will be glad to know that the bill to that effect (introduced by Gen. N. M. Curtis) has passed the Assembly, by a vote of 66 to 15, and is now in the Senate, with a good prospect of being passed by that body and sent to Governor Hill.

Application has been made by the British military authorities to the directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to learn the earliest date the railway can be finished so as to take troops en route this way to India. This is thought to be in connection with the not improbable event of war with Russia.



What is the use of suffering with Backache, Pain in the Side or Hip, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, Crick, Stitches, Swollen and tried Muscles, Chest and Lung troubles, or any sort of pain or soreness, either local or deep-seated when a Hop Plaster will give instant relief? Prepared from Burgundy Pitch, Canada Balsam, and the pain-killing virtues of Hops. The best strengthening plaster ever known. Thousands say so. Sold by all dealers. Mailed on receipt of price, 25c., 5 for $1.00. HOP PLASTER COMPANY, Boston, Mass.

United For Life.

Decidebly the most interesting and brilliant social event that has transpired in Lansing thus far this year occured at the residence of Geo. C. Cooper on Shiawassee street west, Wednesday evening, at which time Miss Dora Cooper was united in marriage to Sam B. Taylor, in the presence of a large number of invited relatives and guests. The impressive marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. S. W. Sampe, while Mrs. C. M. Carrier rendered Mendelssohn's wedding march on the piano with unusually fine effect. Mayton Buck and Chas. Towne filled the positions of "best men," and the bridesmades were Miss Lena Cooper and Miss Minnie Brow of Detroit. Dupont Newbro and A. V. Puister acted as ushers. The wedding presents were especially noticeable, both as to point of design. At the conclusion of the ceremony a pleasant reception was held, during which a shower of hearty congratulations rained upon the newly-united couble. Mr. Taylor is a well-known and energetic young man of this city, and his bride, who has resided in Lansing for some years, has been a central figure in society circles and has won many friends.—[Lansing Republican.

Miss Cooper will be remembered by many in Fulton where she made it her home for a number of years.

A Moral Modern Comedy Drama.

An American drama full of emotional incidents teeming with startling situations. A thrilling counterplot of conspiracies an olla podrida of dramatic tableaux, and intricate climax interspersed with an overflowing stage cornucopia of most comical scenes, sparkling music, artistic dancing, etc. This is "Muggs' Landing" without a word or action of profanity, or vulgarity. An American Comedy Drama written by the popular Dramatist Mr. Scott Marble. Its great popularity is due to its merit as a most interesting and sensible story, which has been put into dramatic shape, and does not include either a murder, suicide or breach of promise, and does not contain a single profane or impure word or action, and is more akin to "Hazel Kirke" than any play on the stage. The Company are all well known artists and do ample justice to their respective parts. Especially Miss Frances Bishop, formerly of Madison Square Theater, N. Y. Mr. Alfred McDowell of the Tourists. Mr. Geo. A. Booker, of Bunch of Keys Co., etc. Every act of "Muggs' Landing" introduces a new dramatic feature. Every scene is interesting either for its melo-dramatic effect or its humorous, vocal or terpsichorean action.

"Muggs' Landing" deserves great praise for its author and the company, who so ably represent it on the stage. We more cordially say "Come again."—[Pittsburgh Chronicle.

After using all the humbug liniments and salves with sure failure, go and get of your druggist a Hop Plaster. The strongest and best porous plaster ever made. Mr. George Kirkpatrick of the firm of Ney & Kirkpatrick, proprietors of the Boston Bazaar has sold out his interest in the concern to Mr. ——Allen of Oneida, who has become a partner with Mr. Ney. During Mr. Kirkpatrick's stay of one year in this village he has made many warm friends who, while they regret his departure, wish him success in his new field of labor. Mr. Kirkpatrick in partnership with his brother will open a large tea house at Canastota, N. Y.

The game of Polo at the Casino in Oswego last Wedesday evening between the Fulton team and the Casinos was witnessed by a large audience. The match was closely contested but was won by the former team. The Fulton team also went to Syracuse on Friday evening and played the Empires of that city. At the expiration of one hour and ten minutes, time was called. But two goals had been made and by the Empires. The game was decided in their favor.

Professor Wiggins predicts a great storm on March 18. He says that it will be as heavy in the north as in the south Atlantic. "Its main force will be on the meridon of London, but it will be there thirty-six hours before it will reach America." He hopes no vessels bearing troops to the Soudan will be out in it, especially in the bay of Biscay. He says when the storm strikes this continent it will raise and not be felt very heavily. The storm will be accompanied by earthquakes, which, however, will only be slightly felt on this side of the Atlantic. They will appear much stronger in the western part of Europe.

IT is belived by many politicians that Mr. Manning's appointment as Secretary of the Treasury, is only temporary, and that as soon as matters at Washington are running smoothly, a permanent appointment will be made. Mr. Manning's familiarity with practical politics and public men and his confidential relations with the new president are reason why Mr. Cleveland desired his aid on the out set of his administration. Before accepting the secretaryship of the Treasury Mr. Manning resigned his directorship and presidency of the Commercial National bank at Albany. The vacant presidency has not been filled and it is believed that in a short time he will return to Albany and the permanent Secretary will be named.

There is another of Mr. D. Style's poetical little marines on exhibition at Hendricks'. It represents an afternoon effect with long slanting rays of sunlight streaming through the clouds and lighting up the wave crests that dash against white cliffs in the distance and sweep over a couple of dangerous rocks in the fore "ground." Mr. Style's painting shows the heighest artistic expression, giving the idea and feelings so completely that [illegible]

He Treated Like a Man.

Two or three days before the inauguration of President Cleveland, there was gathered together in a certain business place, in this village, four or five young men, all indulging in a warm controversy over Cleveland's silver dollar letter, when one of the party gravely predicted that every National bank in the country would be closed, at least, four months from inauguration day. No sooner had he finished his remark, when a spirited young Democrat (who by this time had worked himself into a high state of feeling) jumped to his feet, grasped the hand of his friend, the prophesier, and then and there declared that he would treat the crowd handsomely if the prediction came true. This noble declaration seemed to cool his fevered brow for a time, but when he was informed that four months from inaguration day was was the Fourth of July—a legal holiday—a sickly smile stole over his countenance and after his friends had indulged in several hearty peals of laughter, this young defender of Democracy could have been seen with bowed head leading the way to the nearest restaurant.

Case vs. Dexter.

We learn that the suit of Daniel C. Case against Mrs. Wealthy Dexter and John Ouderkirk affecting the title to a part of lot 3 known as Fish Lake lot, has been appealed by the defendants to the Court of Appeals. The General Term, Justice Follet writing the opinion, rendered the decision of the Curcuit and held, contrary to opinion of Justice Churchill. The deed under which Mrs. Dexter claimed title did not, as matter of law, convey to her that part of the lot on the north side of the lake. The question raised in this case has become quite important and it will be interesting to know what the Court of Appeals will hold to be the laws of the case. We are also informed that motions for re-argument of the other two actions between Mr. Case and Mrs. Dexter have been made for next General Term and that these actions were decided upon points neither raised or argued by either of the attorneys.

A Safe Investment.

On Monday next the Opera House will be occupied by probably one of the best, as well as best advertised attractions from New York city. As a guarantee of this assertion the manager of the company will return to any of its patrons the full price of all tickets, if at any time during the performance they shall offer just cause of dissatisfaction. The play will be "Muggs' Landing," a Comedy-Drama in 4 acts, by Scott Marble. It has been the most successful play this season, and the press everywhere speak in glowing terms of its merits. The company comprises twelve artists, the stars being Miss Frances Bishop, of the Madison Square Theatre, and Mr. Alfred McDowell, formerly of the Tourists. The rest of the company are all well known.

The "Smith Family."

The entertainment given by the ladies of the Universalist society at the church last Friday evening was exceedingly interesting and amusing and was witnessed by a large audience. It seems to be the general desire that the program be repeated. "The Family" having consented they will again appear at the church, next Friday evening, March 13. A partial change of programme will be made. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Curtain rises at 8 o'clock.

We advise all who enjoy a good laugh to attend. Price of admission 25 cents: Children 15 cents. Tickets for sale at Watson's drug store, News Room, and at the door.

The Leatherstockings.

OSWEGO FALLS, March 9.—Messrs. Taft, Johnson, Sharp and Emerick, members of the Leatherstocking club of this place have issued an invitation to members in Oswego to visit Oswego Falls and participate in a shooting match to take place on the lake, on Wednesday of this week. Mr. Taft and Johnson have collected a large number of sparrows for the occasion, and will put up a tent on the ice and serve hot coffee etc., and make it otherwise pleasant for their Oswego friends. Glass ball and clay pigeon shooting will be indulged in.

TOBACCO CASES.

[illegible]

[illegible] the village of Phoenix [illegible] Schroeppel was ready to bond in the required amount, but after many ineffectual attempts to induce the citizens of Syracuse to do a liberal amount toward procuring the right of way through the city and Mr. Littlejohn had exhausted every effort in trying to influence certain opposing parties to withdraw their opposition. It was determined to go around Syracuse and on the east side of Oneida Lake, this took the road to Pennellville, full three miles north of the village. A little later on, with the aid of a number of influential parties in Salina and Syracuse, the right of way was obtained to enter the city. A road was surveyed, a company organized. The town of Schroeppel voted to bond for $50,000, while the village of Phœnix bonded for $90,000 more. It is unnecessary to state in this place how much was done toward building the road. It was graded nearly the entire length, a bridge built across the Oneida river at Three River Point, the ties delivered and but for the strong opposition at work at that time, the road would have been completed.

The project, however, had never been given up, and, as is well known that since then many times the report has gone out that a new company was about to be formed. The matter rested until last fall, when it was made known to some of the leading citizens of Phœnix, that parties in New York would guarantee the building of the road and put it in full operation, provided they would raise the sum of $10,000, and giving their full co-operation. This offer was taken, expecting the town of Clay would assist them in the sum of $3,000. Last week in New York, the new Syracuse, Phœnix & Oswego railway was organized. The title obtained at foreclosure sale a short time previous in Phœnix was transferred by George Potts to the new company; also a controlling interest in the stock of the old company. The board of directors consists of Max B. Richadson of Oswego; Hon Willard Johnson, Fulton; Edmund Merry, Judge Avery and J. H. Loomis, Phœnix; Judge Low, Middletown: Attorney E. R. Paige New York and Geo. Potts of Ocean Grove: Of these Judge Low was made President, E. Merry Vice-President and E. R. Paige Treasurer. James Barnes of Phœnix was chosen chief engineer. The stock is nearly all owned by the Board of Directors who have contracted with Mr. Potts to finish the road. The ties, rails, locomotives and cars are already bargained for, and as soon as the extreme cold weather lets up the work is to be vigorously pushed with the expectation that cars are to run over the road on or before the 4th of July next.

For the present the terminus will be the Syracuse and Northern depot, close by the Central depot, and running over their line to Liverpool from there a nearly straight line to Phœnix and Fulton connecting with the Ontario & Western about one and a half miles south, near the Fay stone quarry and on to Oswego in all some 13 miles of the former Midland which will in turn use this road to haul coal from Earlville the distance from Oswego being some 14 miles less, and giving the Delaware and Hudson signal advantages with other roads to the coal fields. In this village the new depot of the Ontario & Western will be used, also a station for the accomodation of up-town and Oswego Falls passengers, will be located at the Broadway crossing.

At a meeting held at the office of the treasurer in New York last Saturday all the contracts with the several roads were completed and full arrangements made to push the road to an early completion. Mr. Johnson was present and was asked to see that all the ties, which are to be of cedar are furnished in time, also the lumber for cattle guards &c. He will enter into the building of this road with zeal and is determined to have everything first-class and predicts for it the fullest success.

Warm and dry quarters are a necessity for the successfull wintering of sheep in the Northern states. Wet weather injures sheep more than any other stock, because the wool retains water a long time, and its slow evaporation chills the animal.

Would Not Go Lightening Rods.

John Mahler unintentionally got off a good one the other day, when asked to contribute a sum of money for the purpose of buying some lightning rods for the church. He had been importuned for money every hour in the day last week, and when the lightening rod man came around he quietly observed:

"Now, see here. I have been giving up all the week to every charitable and praiseworthy undertaking that has originated in this city. I have subscribed liberally toward building and furnishing the church you are soliciting for, and now, after doing all this for the Lord, if He sees fit to send lightning and rain to destroy it, he does it at his own risk.—[Carl Pretzel's Weekly.

Aim for the mark. The longest was 'round isn't the shortest way home. When you grow corn, grow corn, not weeds. Play for high stakes and win. If you are trying to fat cattle accomplish something, but don't let the stock stand still. Can't afford it. The worst wheel of the cart makes the most noise. Fix it. If you have any business to transact, talk to the point. Don't hedge. Don't look sheep-eyed. Bull eyed is better. Most lamps give better light than candles. Plow the longest way across the field. See your point before you start upon any work.—[Our Country Home.

It is no uncommon thing for weeds to grow year after year in such a diminutive form that none but botansts would recognize them. Ragwood or others as large or larger, may mature though no more than an inch and a half high. Thus from year to year the ground will be poluted with the seed. When the soil receives some different treatment favorable to the development of the plant, it attains its full size, surprising every one with its ambundance where none had been observed before.—[Industrialist.

Exporting apples in large quantities began in 1877. It was the highest, over 1,400,000 barrels, in 1882, and this year, with a similar crop, it is expected to run up to 2,500,000 barrels. The apples go mainly to London, Liverpool and Glasgow, but we have been sending some to Germany, Swedan and Norway and the West Indies, and there will undoubtedly be a large increase in the demand from these countries.

With the [illegible] now [illegible] smoothly, though with little oil, it is hoped Congress will come to the rescue in a substantial (which means financial) manner. Nothing succeeds like success, and if the exposition which as a fair is a success, fails it will only be for lack of funds to keep it up. The running expenses must be over $5,000 a day. A very important committee was sent to Washington, to present the case before Congress.

The lake plat within the grounds has been completed and filled with water, and the boat house adjoining to represent a life saving station contains the usual material for such service. So the public from this can get a very good idea of the United States service. A beautiful green (in vegetation) isle attracts the eye while the little boats sail around, making quite a nautical craft.

Though the articles exhibited by the states and territories have been in good shape for some time continued additions have been made from day to day, keeping up a kind of competition that has been conductive of much benefit to the to the public and the commissioners.

TENNESSEE.

Messrs. McWharton and Campbell have done very efficient work to put his state where he can show its resources. It shows agricultural, mineral and manufactured productions that even astonishes residents of the state. Its natural advantages are many and Tennessee is not ashamed of the display she presents.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY

This extreme north-west domain, which is rich in timbers, fish, minerals, and agriculture, under the guidance and direction of Commissioner Sharpstein would have been one of the most attractive apartments in Government building, but on account of the Governor's sending a lot of animate (?) fossils, preachers and women to enjoy a winter visit and help disburse the little money given by the general government, Mr. Sharpstein wisely stepped out of the way. The result is Washington makes a ridiculous appearance, and is the laughing stock of the public. Far better had it done as Utah—not attempt a display at all.

PENNSYLVANIA.

It is too bad this noted old state, rich and rare, should refuse to make an appropriation to stand side by side with its fellows. And that to the great 1876 Centennial state. But it is said Major King, its commissioner, has done its best to put the old "Keystone" at the top, though he had to use private means to do so. The iron ore, the leading mineral of Pennsylvania is too well known to require attention from a correspondent. Those interested can here see the staple riches of the earth of the best quality, coal and iron. The manufactures are well represented from the leading cities. Our car load of exhibits was wrecked in transit which seriously affects the Major's intentions of arrangement. Many relics of the late war will be found interesting in this department.

Science.

For the improvement of heavy soils Heided, Voigt, Glintz, and Wetzke recommend lime for the first dressing. They say also that the crop for the first season should be potatoes; for the second, oats; for the third, tares or peas, and for the fourth, potatese again.

A valuable practical fact receives additional support from experiments on the influence of sunshine upon the vitality of the germs of microbes as conducted by M. E. Duclank. He cultivated Tyrothrix scaber in milk and Liebig's extract and found that the light of the sun is 50 times more destructive than its heat, thus fully confirming its hygienic properties.

In concluding a lecture on labor and wages in America before the Society of Arts, London, Mr. D. Pidgeon attacked the doctrine that tariff on imports influences wages, arguing that the movements of American and British wages during the last 21 years have been determined by some common cause which cannot possibly be due to the tariff, because in the two countries presenting the analogous phenomena of wages the tariff was operative in the United States alone and had practically no existance whatever in Great Britain.

LOW PRICE FOR BUTTER.

The N. Y. Tribune in its market reports, explains why some butter is sold for such low prices. In speaking of butter it said: "Light colored goods are very hard to dispose of and several lots were thought well sold at 8 to 10 cents." If butter makers would get the top price, they should use the improved Butter Color, made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. It gives a pure dandelion color and never turns red or rancid, but tends to improve and preserve the butter.

The figures showing the enormous sales of Kidney-Wort, demonstrate its value as a medicine beyond dispute. It is a purely vegetable compound of certain roots, leaves, and berries known to have special value in kidney troubles. combined with these are remedys acting directly on the liver and bowels. It is because of this combined action that kidney-wort has proved such an unequaled remedy in all diseases of these organs.

[illegible]

[illegible] of the most wonderful cures, [illegible] sent us, we do not publish them, as they do not make the cures. It is our medicine, Hop Bitters, that make the cures. It has never failed and never can. We will give reference to any one for any disease similar to their own if desired, or will refer to any neighbor, as there is not a neighborhood in the known world but can show its cures by Hop Bitters.

A Losing Joke.

"A prominent physician of Pittsburg said to a lady patient who was complaining of her continued ill health, and of his inability to cure her, jokingly said: 'Try Hop Bitters!' The lady took it in earnest and used the Bitters from which she obtained permanent health. She now laughed at the doctor for his joke, but he is not so well pleased with it, as it cost him a good patient.

Fees of Doctors.

The fee of doctors at $3.00 a visit would tax a man for a year, and in need of a daily visit, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness.

Given up by the Doctors.

"Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy?"

"I assure you it is true that he is entirely cured, and with nothing but Hop Bitters, and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die, from Kidney and Liver trouble!"

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?

Among the many symptoms of Dyspepsia or indigestion the most prominent are: Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, with unsatisfied craving for food; heartburn, feeling of weight and wind in the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration, headache, and constipation. There is no form of disease more prevalent than Dyspepsia, and none so peculiar to the high-living and rapid-eating American people. Alcohol and tobacco produce Dyspepsia; also, bad air, rapid eating, etc. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will cure the worst case, by regulating the bowels and toning up the digestive organs. Sold everywhere.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and get in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accummulate in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 17, 1882.

In our long and varied experience in handling watches, we cannot but acknowledge and give our testimony that the Keystone Solid Silver Watch Cases are the best made to our knowledge. Having no soldering they remain homogeneous, harder and stiffer than they would be were they heated for soldering, and have more resisting power against pressure than any other cases in the market. Progressive Euchre.

Progressive euchre take twelve persons. There are three tables, each supplied with cards.

One is called the ace, one is called the king and one the queen table. Take aces, kings and queens from one of the packs, and after they have been shuffled, let each person draw one, the one drawing aces going to the ace table, and those queens to the queen table—the persons drawing black cards being partners, and those drawing red partners. When this has been done, the playing commences regular euchre is played. No games count save those at the ace table, and each player's record at the table is kept by the scorer.

When a game has been finished at the ace table the parties who are defeated go to the queen table, and those who have the most points at the kings table take their places and try to defeat their victors, while the parties who made the most points at the queen table take the places of the persons who left the king and queen table for the ace table. At the king and queen tables they do not stop playing because they have finished a game, but keep right on until the game has been finished at the ace table; on the other hand, if a game has been concluded at the ace table, and the king or queen table sets have not finished their game, they do not finish it. The one making the most points are victors, whether less or more than five, the regular number for a game, has been made.

A PURE AND RELIABLE MEDICINE.—A compound fluid extract of roots, leaves, barks and berries is Burdock Blood Bitters. They cure all diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys.

Don't Hurry To Get Married.

Girls don't be in a hurry to get married. If you are but 16. don't allow such an idea to get into your head for at least four years. Don't even run the risk of it by permitting any young man to get so far as proposing the point. Fight them off, and make them wait or go to some one who is ready. Don't live under the impression that you must accept the first lovesick youth who proposes. Be patient, deliberate, and sagicious. There is a world of happiness for you between 16 and 20. The world would be a dreary old world if it were not for the sweet faces of young girls with their piquant sayings and melting smiles. After you have reached 20 it would be well to consider the matrimonial problem with some seriousness. Then if you have learned to think and deliberate you will probably make a suitable selection, and marriage with a worthy man is not only a woman's privelege, but. unless married too young, her best and highest development, mental and physical, can be attained in this state. Men and women were made for each other, and a very old but nevertheless true truism is that a happy marriage is the very Garden of Eden. An unhappy marriage is the reverse and the greatest of all calamities that can cefall a pure, affectionate, and noble woman.

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞ For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞ But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

☞ And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞ BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

Attorney, Fulton, N. Y.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Mortgagor Ephraim D. Mowry, mortgagee Frank Ditts, assignee Joseph W. Butler, mortgage dated August ninth, 1877, and recorded in Oswego county clerk's office August 3d, 1877, in Book 114, of mortgages at page 127. The amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, is $206.52. The mortgaged property is substantially described in said mortgage as all that tract or parcel of land, situate in the town of Richland, county of Oswego and State of New York, and being part of Lot No. 86, of township No. 21, of Scriba's patent as follows: beginning on the west line of said Lot 86 chains and links from the north-west corner thereof, at a stake 29½ links S. 15° west of center of large leaning maple, and runs thence easterly along the south line of lands sold by John Tyler to Charles Springer, to a stake 48 links north 81° west of the north-west corner of the grist mill; thence northerly along land sold to said Springer to the center of the highway running easterly and westerly past school house in district No. 18, in said town of Richland; thence easterly along the center of said highway, as run in 1840 to lands formerly owned by the late William Gillispie; thence southerly and easterly along the said Gillispie's lands to the east line of said Lot No. 86; thence southerly [illegible] line to the south-east corner of [illegible] thence westerly along the south line of [illegible] to the west side of the mill pond, and Grind Stone Creek at high water mark, and thence northerly along said pond and creek at high water mark, to the east corner of land owned by Oliver Mowry; thence along the north line of said Oliver Mowry's land to land formerly occupied by F. H. Cox; thence northerly along said Cox's land to the east corner of the same; thence westerly to the center of the highway; thence northerly [illegible] way to Grind Stone Creek at low water [illegible] thence westerly along said creek at low water mark to Oliver Mowry's land; thence along said Oliver Mowry's land to the west line of said lot No. 86; thence northerly along said line of lot to the place of beginning, subject to the exceptions and reservations contained in a deed from John Tyler and wife and Henry Gillispie to Ephraim D. Mowry. Default having been made in the conditions of said mortgage, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that the premises, described in said mortgage, will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder at the office of the Lewis House, in the village of Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y., on the 2nd day of May, 1885, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and said mortgage will be thereby foreclosed.

Husband and Wife.

"It's the strangest thing that ever I knew,
And the most provoking 'twixt me and you
And a woman who's got a man like me—
A good provider and steady, and free
With all her folks, with funds salted down
And as fine a house as any in town—
To be lamenting 'cause one child in ten
Ain't quite as good as he might have been.

"It's a pretty good showing, it seems to me,
That only a tenth of the lot should be
A little off color, and that's what I say
To their mother twenty times a day.
But I can't make her see it in that light,
And she listens and waits night after night
For the sound of his step, till I grow so wild
That I almost curse both mother and child.

"She ought to live for the others, you know,
And let the tormenting vagabond go
And follow his ways and take the pain;
But I turn him out and she calls him again
This makes a hardness between her and me,
And the worst of it is, the children agree
That I'm in the right. You'd pity her then;
Such times I think I'm the meanest of men.

"I've argued and scolded and coaxed without end;
Her answer is always: 'My boy has one friend
As long as I live, and your charge is untrue
That my heart holds no equal love for you
And all the rest. But the one gone astray
Needs me the most, and you'll find 'tis the way
Of all mothers to hold close to the one
Who hurts her the most. So love's work is done'

"Now, what can I say to such words as those?
I'm not convinced, as the history shows,
But I often wonder which one is right
As I hear her light step, night after night,
Here and there, to the window and door,
As she waits with a heart that is heavy and sore,
I wish the boy dead, while she gives her life
To save him from sin. There's husband and wife."

A LITTLE FLIRTATION.

A pretty girl under any circumstances was Hilda Fairfax, despite of sun-touches on her bright young face; a very happy maiden, also, in her comfortable country home, where she was denied nothing, and where her parents made an idol of her; particularly happy since the advent of a handsome invalid, whom Mrs. Fairfax had received into the farm house because she had once been a schoolmate of his mother's.

"You shall be as one of ourselves, and Hilda and I will send you back to town vigorous and healthy," the kind matron said to Harold Dane. He told himself that never had he so enjoyed seven days as that first week on Fairfax farm. Perhaps this was due to the fact that Hilda was willing to amuse him.

Then the beautiful classmate of Hilda's had come from town on a visit and been warmly welcomed, but not until Hilda's pretty brown hand had been decorated by Harold with a pretty golden band, from which gleamed palely three milky pearls, and Hilda had listened with throbbing heart to low lover-like words.

Miss Nettie Dillon had been at Fairfax farm a fortnight, and they had all grown accustomed to her fair, dainty face, her blueball eyes and her wonderful golden hair. If Harold spent much of his time with the blonde town beauty Hilda never minded, for she was neither jealous nor suspicious.

Suddenly a light, low laugh, sweet as a bird-note, reached her as she awaited their return from a walk.

"That is Nettie's laugh," she said; "they are coming at last. I wonder if they know how long they have kept us waiting for our tea."

Then she started, and her very lips grew white, for words were borne toward her which made her shrink and shiver. It was Harold's voice.

"You fancied I was lingering here because I had lost my heart to pretty Hilda? Why, but for your coming, I would have been back at my desk a week since."

A light laugh again from Nettie.

"You say that quite as though you meant it, Mr. Dane."

"I do mean it. When you leave Fairfax Farm I follow within twenty-four hours."

"And if I go to-morrow?"

"Then I go next day."

"And if I stay until Christmas?"

"Then I do likewise."

"Pray, tell me—why?"

"Because—I love you"

Then Hilda's right hand, which had been tugging nervously at something on one finger of her left hand, opened. There was a transcient glitter of gold and her hand was empty, as she drew open the gate and met them in the early dusk.

"I have been looking for you," she said simply.

The young man looked closely at the little figure in simple white, trying to discover by the bright face whether or not she had heard; but there was nothing for him to see in the gathering gloom and she chatted as vivaciously as ever as they went up the path to the house.

Ere they reached it they heard hoof and beats, and a dark animal, outlined against the pearl-gray of the sky, cantered up to the hall door. The rider could not be seen clearly.

"A visitor for you, Hilda," said Nettie, and Hilda went forward with a little cry, as the light from the open door fell on the stranger. A moment later she had given him both hands, and he was holding them warmly and looking down on her in a way that made Harold Dane's teeth meet in jealous anger.

The stranger was introduced as Mr. Ellis, and presently Mrs. and Mr. Fairfax were, as Harold muttered, "making a regular fuss over the fellow."

An hour later the moon was up, and the four young people went out, and when Hilda sang something very pathetic, Mr. Ellis joined his rich voice with hers.

"You haven't forgotten the old song, Lee," Hilda laughed at its conclusion.

"We sung it together too often for me to forget it," was the low reply. And then they were all saying good night to him.

Nettie turned from watching him as he rode down the drive.

Who is our stranger knight?" she asked.

"A very old friend," was Hilda's reply; "He has been traveling for six months, but intends now to settle down. You recognized the beautiful place you so admired last week when we drove by it? It is his."

"Why, the blonde exclaimed in surprise, "he must be very wealthy."

"He is," Hilda answered, simply; and then, as she lifted her left hand to arrange the cluster of flowers at her throat, Harold Dane saw in the light of the moon that it was ringless.

"She heard me, then! I am an unlucky beggar—but I understand that this golden haired belle is quite an heiress," he thought.

* * * * * * *

"I am going away very regretfully, dear," Miss Nettie said, three weeks later "I have so thoroughly enjoyed my summer with you."

"And I wish you could make your visit a longer one," Hilda said, pleasantly; "perhaps you will next summer. I won't be here then, Nettie—did you not guess it? I will—will——"

"Oh, you stammer!" laughed Nettie; "you will be in that gray-stone mansion among the maples. I guessed it the night he came; he is good and true and loves you dearly. Hilda, I was afraid when I first came that you cared a little for Mr Dane; I am glad you did not; he would give a woman who loved him many a heartache Hilda. I saw you at the gate that evening and led him to talk as I knew he would when he thought you wouldn't hear; I know you heard, although you were so brave. Now tell me, where is the ring you wore when I came? I have not seen it since that night."

"Nor I," said Hilda, very low; "I left it at the gate while I was listening to—him. It was his gift—a love token."

Miss Nettie laughed musically.

"I wonder how many he has scattered a mong the girls he has met?" said she. Hilda looked at her with puzzled eyes.

"I thought you cared for him," she said; "if you did not, how could you seem so kind to him?"

Nettie bent suddenly foreward and kissed her on the cheek.

"You innocent child!" she said, "you cannot understand how one can enjoy a little flirtation can you? Well, it was my way of amusing myself. I have a secret for your ears, too: I have met a man whom I can love with my whole heart. He is in the city. Some time, when you come to me, you shall meet him. You will like him, Hilda for he is much like Mr. Ellis. Such men as he one loves; such men as Harold Dane one flirts with."

"Oh, Nettie! it cannot be right."

"It isn't, and I would not advise you to take it as a pastime. By-the-way, I saw Mr. Dane in the yard. I'll run out and have a chat with him. He may want to say a few tender things to me before parting."

But Harold Dane had no chance to say his "tender things" to her, were he so inclined; for when she found him he was standing where Hilda had stood in the gloaming, and he had just lifted from the earth a tiny hoop of gold, from which three white pearls gleamed, and was looking at it a trifle blankly."

"Hilda dropped it, I think, that evening when she heard you say you would follow me to town, and a few other things Mr. Dane," the girl said pleasantly. "I think that she expects you to bid her good-bye. She knows that you cannot support the dullness of Fairfield farm, twenty-four hours after I have left it."

And her laugh was very musical and sweet as she went back to Hilda. On the whole she had rather enjoyed her little flirtation, and Hilda's happiness was safe.—[Philadelphia Call.

"Wonders."

E. H. BECKWITH, Norwich, Conn., Dec. 18th, 1884, stated, "I owe my life to Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure; when I began its use I passed ten quarts of water daily, which contained 14 per cent of sugar; after using seven dozen bottles my doctor pronounced the water free from sugar; it has done wonders for me."

Care of the Teeth.

The chief rules which must be attended to and observed in connection with the care of the teeth are as follows: First if possible the teeth should be rinsed out every meal. Secondly, the teeth should be brushed, night and morning, with a tooth powder; mere tooth-powder; mere tooth "washes" are ineffective in keeping the teeth clean and pure. A good powder is the "precipitated chalk'," of druggists, well made and having a little camphor added. This preparation is sold under the name of "camphorated chalk," and the camphor has a stimulating and healthy influence on the gums. Thirdly, use a medium tooth brush, neither too hard nor too soft, and use water with the chill taken off, wherewith to brush the teeth.

By attention to these rules not merely will a notable item in personal appearance be preserved, but health will be secured and pain avoided. Many a bad attack of tooth ache disappears if the teeth are attended to, and when some light aperient medicine has also been administered. If the gums are naturally irritable and tender. A few drops of the tincture of myrrh in water should be used to rinse out the mouth twice or thrice a day.—[Dr. Andrew Wilson in "Health."

MRS. CARRIE D. T. SWIET, Rochester, N. Y., for 25 years suffered from hereditary rheumatism, many times being utterly helpless; especially in warm weather. In July, 1883, she used a few bottles of Warner's SAFE Rheumatic Cure, and in January, 1885, said her restoration to health was as complete as miraculous. Cure permanent. Try it,

Being a Woman.

The Lowell Times publishes the following, revised by a woman: It is a dreadful bother to be a woman and do the business up in good shape. In the frist place you've got to look well, or you're nobody. A man may be ever so homely and still be popular. Whiskers cover up most of his face, and if he has a big mouth nobody mistrusts it, and if he does wrinkle bad on his forehead his friends speak of his many cares and of his thoughtful disposition, and tell eachother that his wrinkles are lines of thought. Lines of thought, indeed, when in all probability his forehead is wrinkled by the bad habit he has got of scowling at his wife when the coffee isn't strong enough.

A woman must always be in good order. Her hair must be always frizzed and banged, as fashion demands, and she must powder if she has a shining skin; and she must manage to look sweet, no matter how sour she may feel; her dress must hang just so, and her lace must be always spotless, and her boot buttons always in place, and her finger nails always clean; and then she mustn't whistle, nor climb fences, nor stone cats, nor scold when she's mad.

She can't go out alone, because ladies must be protected; she can't go anywhere when it rains, because her hair won't stay frizzed and she'll get mud on her petticoats and things; she can't be a Free Mason, because she would tell their secrets and everybody would know all about the goat and gridiron; she can't smoke, because that would be unfeminine; she can't go courting because that would not be womanly. But she must get married before she is 35, or everybody will feel wronged. People will sigh over her and wonder why it is that men "don't seem to take;" and all the old maids and widows smile and keep quiet. Oh these smiles and those significant looks! They are ten times more than ofpn slanders. It is a terrilbe thing to be an old maid. Everybody knows it is, and the women who are married to drunken husbands, and who manage to quarrel with them six days out of seven, will live in agony of spirit over the single woman and call her that "poor old maid."

A woman must marry rich or she doesn't marry "well." And to marry "well" is the end and aim of a woman's existence, judging from the view which people in general take of this matter. It is everybody's business when a woman marries. The whole neighborhood put their heads together and talk over the pros and cons, and decide whether she is good enough for him. (There is nothing said about his being good enough for her.) And they criticise the shape of her nose, and relate anecdotes of how lazy her grandfather was, and how her Aunt Sally used to sell beans and butter milk. A woman must wear No. 2 shoes on No. 3 feet, and she must manage to dress well on 75 cents a week, and she musn't be vain, and she must go regularly to sewing society meetings, and be ready to dress dolls and make tidies and aprons for church fairs. She must be a good cook, and she must be able to to "do up" her husband's shirts so that the Chinese washerman woul groan with envy and gnash his teeth with the same unholy passion at sight of them.

She must always have the masculine buttons of the family sewed on so they will never come off while in use, and she must keep the family hosiery so that nobody would ever mistrust that there were toes in the stockings while they were on. She must hold herself in constant readiness to find everything her husband has lost—and a man never knews where to find anything. He will put his boots carefully away on the parlor sofa, and when he has hunted for them half an hour he will suddenly appear to his wife with acounteuance like an avening angel and demands "What in thunder she has done with his boots.' She must shut all the doors after her lord and master, and likewise the bureau drawers, for a married man was never known to shut a drawer. It would be as unnatural for a hen to go in swiming for recreation.

She must go to bed first in cold weather so as to get the bed warm. Her husband, if he be a wise man, never asks her to do this. Oh, no! but he sets to "just finish this piece in the paper," and waits till she has got the sheets to a comfortable tempature. Ah, there is a great many tricks in the trade of living together. A woman is expected to take care of the baby even after the first infantile wonder has multiplied into a round half a dozen. And if he doubles up with the colic or trials of cutting teeth or the unnessary evil of mumps, measles and whooping cough and scarlet fever and rash and the throat distemper and short sleeves and bare legs and pins sticking into him and too much candy and a bad temper, why her husband tells her that he "does wish she would try and quiet her baby," and he says it too as if he thought she was the only one responsible for its existance, and as if she was considerably to blame for it too.

And when she has the headache no one thinks of minding it—a woman's always having the headache. And if she is "nervous enough to fly" nobody shuts the door any quieter, and nobody tucks her on the lounge with a shawl over her or cuddles her to death as a man has to be cuddled under such circumstances. We might go on indefinitely with the troubles of being a woman, and if there is a man who thinks a woman has an easy time of it, why, just let him pin on a pound of false hair and get inside a pair of corsets, and put on a pullback overskirt, and be a woman himself and see how he likes it.

After a thorough test H. C. Giesler most positively asserts that Acker's English Remedy is the best medicine for Asthma, Croup, Coughs, Whooping Cough and all Lung Troubles that can be found. Ask him about it for he fully guarantees it. eow

A Family Ruined by Intermarriage.

At Ellis in Vernon county, Nev., a family boarded a Missouri Pacific train who were terribly afflicted. The family consisted of Mrs. Parson Hale and her four children. Mrs. Hale is over 70 years of age and children are hopeless idiots. The oldest is a grey haired man 53 years old. Aside from his imbecility, his physical deformations are pitiable. His legs are misshaped and when assuming a sitting posture they extend straight out, being totally void of action at the knees. The other brother is not so badly deformed, but is almost incapable of moving himself. One of the two sisters can walk, but sometimes loses her balence and falls heavily. The other has but little control of her body. Parson Hale and his wife were own cousins' and Mrs. Hale's father and mother were related. The terrible condition of the family is doubtless attributable to this series of intermarriages. Of eight children born to them, seven were imbeciles and a majority of them were more or less deformed. Parson is a sufferer by reason of the consanguinity of his parents. He has always been regarded as more than eccentric, and during the past few days he has steadily grown more erratic. He frequently absents himself from home, and for weeks his wife does not know of his whereabouts. He has now been away three months, and it is not known whether he is dead or alive.

During the greater part of his life he has been an exhorter in the Methodist chvrch, and during that time his paroxysms of religious excitement have been regarded as evidences of aberration. For fifteen years Mr. Hale and his family have lived in Vernon county, and here three of his unfortunate children have died. He owned a little farm near Moundville, until lately managed to eke out a scanty living, but age deprived him of his ability to work and the county has been helping him. The family go to Henry county to be cared for by relatives. Mrs. Hale is a woman of average mental power and of moderately good physical developement. The only child born with an average mind is now at work on a farm in the county.

A Woman's Happy Release.

MRS. E. F. LOLLOFF, Haverill, Mass., August 6th, 1881, said she had been cured of inflammation of the bladder by five bottles of Warner's Safe Cure. December 24th, 1884, Mr. Dolloff wrote. "Mrs. Dolloff has never seen a sick day from that inflammatory disease since Warner's Safe Cure cured her in 1881." Cure permanent.

Two Friends.

We have always had a sincere affection for that keen-witted and somewhat skeptical scientist, who believes less than he hears and not all that he sees, and who has the trick of discrediting the signs of emotion with more critical frankness than falls to the lot of most Exclusive and concentrated for his own part, he does not take well with caaholicity; and he looks on general amiability, so he says, as a "thundering" fault. We know that to be with him is to be sacrificed before we leave him. Yet we are glad to meet him, all the same; thinking too that a little honest flaying—without witness—is by no means unwholesome for one's soul. Then there is that other friend who stands at the opposite end of the scale—a prophesyer of smooth sayings—the weaver of silken tissues only—the sweetest, softest, blandest and most amiable creature under heaven. To be in his society is like seeing oneself in a mirror that beautifes every feature and glorifies every circumstance of one's condition, paints only our virtues in the brighest colors, so that we may be excused if—human nature being but a frail kind of thing at the best—we find him one of the most charming companions in the world; until the inevitable question forces itself on our mind: "How much of all this is real and how much is pretty fable and polite flattery?" Then we prefer the rougher tools of our scientific friend; and think that between the two—the disproportioned blame of the one and the insincere praise of the other—the former is the more commendable.—[Detroit Free Press.

A GREAT DISCOVERY.

Mr. Wm. Thomas, of Newton, Ia, says: "My wife has been seriously affected with cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief, and being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery, did so with the most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years."

The Richest Heiress in America.

Miss Nettie Gould, the very charming and accomplished 18-year-old daughter of Mr. Jay Gould, who is reported as soon to wed the partner of her father, Washington E. Connor, is one of the brightest and sweetest little ladies in New York city. She has been finely educated and is highly accomplished. She is an artist of no mean ability and her collection of bric-a-brac, which has been adorned by her pencil and brush, has been greatly admired. She dresses plainly but richly, and when in town can be seen any afternoon driving through the park with her brother George and "Wash," by her side. She probably the richest heiress in America, and on her father's death will come in for $20,000,000 or $30,000,000.

Our Exposition Letter.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

NEW ORLEANS, La., Mar. 14., 1885.

Crowds have thronged the Exposition Grounds daily since the beginning of Mardi Gras, though Monday the 16th, which was Rhode Island day, and the reception of Rex, was the largest attendance the Fair has ever experienced, there being no less than 60,000 people present.

The cheese and butter display has been reduced almost to nothing unless new additions are received, as the materal is perishable and has to be disposed of after a few weeks' exhibition. The North-western states are most generally represented in this line.

MAINE.

This state though so far east is very well represented, and at too much expense and trouble. Col. J. B. Ham, is the commissioner in charge, ably assisted by W. F. Blanding, a newspaper man. Most everything elsewhere produced either naturally or artifically can be seen from the display in this state's department in the Government building. The ice interest is one of the largest industries in the world, as the northeast rivers and lakes of Maine supply nearly all the cities of the states bordering the Atlantic and gulf coast as far west as Texas besides using thousands of tons for shipping meat and preserving fruits. The Sardine canning business is one of the largest known, and it is said over half of this article consumed in the United States is from Maine.

IDAHO TERRITORY.

Col. Geo. L. Shoupe, commissioner, has done nobly by his Territory which stands so high in the mining world. It contains some fine fruit, agricultural and grazing lands, but a specialty is made of minerals. The colective display by the commissioner is immense and select, and many compliments have been bestowed upon it. Col. Shoupe is a wealthy man and he has made most liberal outlays of private funds to bring this territory before the public gaze, and visitors declare he has succeeded admirably in so doing. The Cœur d' Alene, Wood river and Salmon river districts are well represented.

WISCONSIN.

Commissioner Hoton, one of the most genial and happy men of the Exposition, makes friends wherever he goes, and is a most fitting representative of the great Northern state which he has given such an attractive appearance. The cheese display especially from Sheboygan, is number one, while the agricultural collections show the state to good advantage in cereals, and tobacco is one of the principal products. The woman's department of Wisconsin is located among the states exhibits and is very creditable. It should be seen by all as it contains many really artistic articles fashioned by woman's hands.

NOTES.

The old adage of better late than never was practically demonstrated last week by the throwing open of the Art Gallery which is indeed entertaining. It is too bad that the gallery to this art musium could not have been completed before the largest crowds came, among whom were a great many well known artists who made special trips here to see this particular exhibit, and left disappointed at failing to accomplish their desires. Yet it will be enjoyed by those who now make it convenient to take in the great centennial.

Nothing has exceeded in pyrotechnic displays, those held on the evening of the Cotton Centennial day of the Exposition. The representation of the Falls of Niagara, the bale of cotton, and other less attractive but more numerously dazzling fireworks. The array was given at the Exposition Grounds and was viewed by thousands of visitors as well as citizens and all enjoyed it as was merited.

One feature of the show is to visitors from the frigid regions, where they leave snow, ice and frozen ground, to reach this section and see vegitation growing, fountains playing and bird singing, in all of which the Exposition abounds, not to mention oranges hanging on the trees, cocanuts dungling from their native limbs, and fine apples clinging to their mother stem, cocti and flowers budding and in bloom right here in the midst of winter. And then the sun shines so soothingly.

Among the recently completed buildings, that of the bankers, called the "Bankers Provilion," is one of the handsomest and little structures to be seen on the grounds.

The United States department containing the Patentoffice, War, Navy, Postoffice and Interior materials, is one of the most interesting displays of the kind ever looked upon and though it cost "Uncle Sam" immense could not have been better disbursed than within the World's Great Fair.

FRANCIS L. DOW, assistant police marshal, Taunton, Mass., three years ago was cured of stone in the kidney and bladder by Warner's SAFE Cure, and in June, 1884, he wrote, "I have not seen a sick day since I began Warner's SAFE Cure and never felt better; have gained eighteen pounds."

In London there is a well established and highly successful firm of female architects. They plan houses, stores, architectural work of all descriptions, and are much esteemed by hours owners. It is said of the houses built by these women that every room has a closet.

NEVER GIVE UP.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life, strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50 cents a bottle by R. E. Phillips.

FASHION NOTES.

Velvet will be largely used on all bonnets the coming season.

Flowers will be used in preference to feathers for spring bonnets.

French lace imitating real thread laces are used for making entire bonnets.

Gold embroidered Turkish muslin is one of the choicest fancies for the coming summer.

It is now the fancy to preserve the Langtry knot of hair worn low in the nape of the neck.

Bonnets made of some fanciful material over a frame of wire will be used for dress occasions.

The trimmings for black silk are flat passenteries, corded and chenille ornaments and lace.

Some gilt pins placed near together all around the velvet binding of a bonnet are stylish ornaments.

Shot ribbon velvets are very much used, and very handsome; the black is of satin shot in two colors.

Straw bonnets in all dark colors to match costumes will be worn during the spring and summer.

The square and pointed crowns will be used for round hats but all brims are close and narrow.

Colored embroidered collars are introduced for children, and are to be worn alike by small boys and girls.

Dress buttons remain small and round; they are scarcely larger than a pea, and and the newest are of braid or plaided silk.

Velvet cockade bows of bright red, blue, yellow ribbons are worn on the front of the corsage to brighten up dark dresses.

Squares of soft mull printed in Madrass plaids or stripes are imported for the neckerchiefs to be worn when summer days arrive.

Birdnests of chenille, wiih grasses inside and tinny birds perched on stems that the nests rest upon, will be used as trimming for bonnets.

A wide band or dog-collar of embroidered galloon is to be used as a support for shell frills of lace that are to extend very high around the neck.

The ornamental handkerchiefs and the new scarfs will be used to trim round hats. The square kerchief is bunched carelessly in front with its four corners upward.

A pretty cutaway basque for slender figures is open from the throat down, with tinny buttons at either side. The full blouse vest of merveilleux is held down by a Swiss girdle of velvet or plush.

One of my children, a girl about nine years old, had a very bad discharge from her head and nose of a thick, yellowish matter, and was growing worse. We had two different physicians prescribe for her but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise in three days there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was apparently cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

"Who left that door open?" growled Mr. Dinkle, looking up from his desk one of those freezer days last week.

"I did," answered the new office boy.

"Can't you ever learn to shut a door?"

"I s'pose so, sir."

"Well, why in thunder don't you do it?"

"I'm goin' to, but you see, I'm new yet, and I had so much to learn that I thought I'd leave the door be till along towards the last."—[Merchant Traveler.

A Campaigner's Experience.

LAWRENCE MIX, Esq., Warsaw, N. Y., a well campaign orator, in 1882 took 15 bottles of Warner's Safe Cure for kidney trouble, (after many physicians of excellent standing had given him up,) and Iwas cured December 9th, 1884, he says, "I have had no serious return of my trouble, and so conclude that my cure is permanent."

The Cost of the Inauguration.

The finance Committee in charge of the inauguration ceremonies estimate the expense incurred to be $55,000, which is $10,000 more than calculated. The committee guaranteed 4,000 suppers to the caterer, but as only 2,400 took supper the committee will have to make up the deficit. Among the items expended were $25,000 on the ball room, $2,000 for music, $3,800 for lighting the ball room, $5,500 for decorations and $3.500 for fireworks. The committee think that a portion of the subscription fund will have to be used to meet the liabilities.

Quite a sensation was caused at Bridgeport, Ct., Saturday, at a "fashionable" funeral by the fact that the deceased lady was laid out in a casket in full party dress, jewels, gloves and feather, ed fan included.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Husband and Wife.

"It's the strangest thing that ever I knew,
And the most provoking 'twixt me and you
And a woman who's got a man like me—
A good provider and steady, and free
With all her folks, with funds salted down
And as fine a house as any in town—
To be lamenting 'cause one child in ten
Ain't quite as good as he might have been.

"It's a pretty good showing, it seems to me,
That only a tenth of the lot should be
A little off color, and that's what I say
To their mother twenty times a day.
But I can't make her see it in that light,
And she listens and waits night after night
For the sound of his step, till I grow so wild
That I almost curse both mother and child.

"She ought to live for the others, you know,
And let the tormenting vagabond go
And follow his ways and take the pain;
But I turn him out and she calls him again
This makes a hardness between her and me,
And the worst of it is, the children agree
That I'm in the right. You'd pity her then;
Such times I think I'm the meanest of men.

"I've argued and scolded and coaxed without end;
Her answer is always: 'My boy has one friend
As long as I live, and your charge is untrue
That my heart holds no equal love for you
And all the rest. But the one gone astray
Needs me the most, and you'll find 'tis the way
Of all mothers to hold close to the one
Who hurts her the most. So love's work is done.'

"Now, what can I say to such words as those?
I'm not convinced, as the history shows,
But I often wonder which one is right
As I hear her light step, night after night,
Here and there, to the window and door,
As she waits with a heart that is heavy and sore,
I wish the boy dead, while she gives her life
To save him from sin. There's husband and wife."
—[Cardiff Mail.

A LITTLE FLIRTATION.

A pretty girl under any circumstances was Hilda Fairfax, despite of sun-touches on her bright young face; a very happy maiden, also, in her comfortable country home, where she was denied nothing, and where her parents made an idol of her; particularly happy since the advent of a handsome invalid, whom Mrs. Fairfax had received into the farm house because she had once been a schoolmate of his mother's.

"You shall be as one of ourselves, and Hilda and I will send you back to town vigorous and healthy," the kind matron said to Harold Dane. He told himself that never had he so enjoyed seven days as that first week on Fairfax farm. Perhaps this was due to the fact that Hilda was willing to amuse him.

Then the beautiful classmate of Hilda's had come from town on a visit and been warmly welcomed, but not until Hilda's pretty brown hand had been decorated by Harold with a pretty golden band, from which gleamed palely three milky pearls, and Hilda had listened with throbbing heart to low lover-like words.

Miss Nettie Dillon had been at Fairfax farm a fortnight, and they had all grown accustomed to her fair, dainty face, her bluebell eyes and her wonderful golden hair. If Harold spent much of his time with the blonde town beauty Hilda never minded, for she was neither jealous nor suspicious.

Suddenly a light, low laugh, sweet as a bird-note, reached her as she awaited their return from a walk.

"That is Nettie's laugh," she said; "they are coming at last. I wonder if they know how long they have kept us waiting for our tea."

Then she started, and her very lips grew white, for words were borne toward her which made her shrink and shiver. It was Harold's voice.

"You fancied I was lingering here because I had lost my heart to pretty Hilda? Why, but for your coming, I would have been back at my desk a week since."

A light laugh again from Nettie.

"You say that quite as though you meant it, Mr. Dane."

"I do mean it. When you leave Fairfax Farm I follow within twenty-four hours."

"And if I go to-morrow?"

"Then I go next day."

"And if I stay until Christmas?"

"Then I do likewise."

"Pray, tell me—why?"

"Because—I love you."

Then Hilda's right hand, which had been tugging nervously at something on one finger of her left hand, opened. There was a transcient glitter of gold and her hand was empty, as she drew open the gate and met them in the early dusk.

"I have been looking for you," she said simply.

The young man looked closely at the little figure in simple white, trying to discover by the bright face whether or not she had heard; but there was nothing for him to see in the gathering gloom and she chatted as vivaciously as ever as they went up the path to the house.

Ere they reached it they heard hoof and beats, and a dark animal, outlined against the pearl-gray of the sky, cantered up to the hall door. The rider could not be seen clearly.

"A visitor for you, Hilda," said Nettie, and Hilda went forward with a little cry, as the light from the open door fell on the stranger. A moment later she had given him both hands, and he was holding them warmly and looking down on her in a way that made Harold Dane's teeth meet in jealous anger.

The stranger was introduced as Mr. Ellis, and presently Mrs. and Mr. Fairfax were, as Harold muttered, "making a regular fuss over the fellow."

An hour later the moon was up, and the four young people went out, and when Hilda sang something very pathetic, Mr. Ellis joined his rich voice with hers.

"You haven't forgotten the old song, Lee," Hilda laughed at its conclusion.

"We sung it together too often for me to forget it," was the low reply. And then they were all saying good night to him.

Nettie turned from watching him as he rode down the drive.

"Who is our stranger knight?" she asked.

"A very old friend," was Hilda's re[illegible]

so admired last week when we drove by it? It is his."

"Why, the blonde exclaimed in surprise, "he must be very wealthy."

"He is," Hilda answered, simply; and then, as she lifted her left hand to arrange the cluster of flowers at her throat, Harold Dane saw in the light of the moon that it was ringless.

"She heard me, then! I am an unlucky beggar—but I understand that this golden haired belle is quite an heiress," he thought.

* * * * * * *

"I am going away very regretfully, dear," Miss Nettie said, three weeks later "I have so thoroughly enjoyed my summer with you."

"And I wish you could make your visit a longer one," Hilda said, pleasantly; "perhaps you will next summer. I won't be here then, Nettie—did you not guess it? I will—will——"

"Oh, you stammer!" laughed Nettie; "you will be in that gray-stone mansion among the maples. I guessed it the night he came; he is good and true and loves you dearly. Hilda, I was afraid when I first came that you cared a little for Mr Dane; I am glad you did not; he would give a woman who loved him many a heartache Hilda. I saw you at the gate that evening and led him to talk as I knew he would when he thought you wouldn't hear; I know you heard, although you were so brave. Now tell me, where is the ring you wore when I came? I have not seen it since that night."

"Nor I," said Hilda, very low; "I left it at the gate while I was listening to—him. It was his gift—a love token."

Miss Nettie laughed musically.

"I wonder how many he has scattered a mong the girls he has met?" said she. Hilda looked at her with puzzled eyes.

"I thought you cared for him," she said; "if you did not, how could you seem so kind to him?"

Nettie bent suddenly foreward and kissed her on the cheek.

"You innocent child!" she said, "you cannot understand how one can enjoy a little flirtation can you? Well, it was my way of amusing myself. I have a secret for your ears, too: I have met a man whom I can love with my whole heart. He is in the city. Some time, when you come to me, you shall meet him. You will like him, Hilda for he is much like Mr. Ellis. Such men as he one loves; such men as Harold Dane one flirts with."

"Oh, Nettie! it cannot be right."

"It isn't, and I would not advise you to take it as a pastime. By-the-way, I saw Mr. Dane in the yard. I'll run out and have a chat with him. He may want to say a few tender things to me before parting."

But Harold Dane had no chance to say his "tender things" to her, were he so inclined: for when she found him he was standing where Hilda had stood in the gloaming, and he had just lifted from the earth a tiny hoop of gold, from which three white pearls gleamed, and was looking at it a trifle blankly."

"Hilda dropped it, I think, that evening when she heard you say you would follow me to town, and a few other things Mr. Dane," the girl said pleasantly. "I think that she expects you to bid her good-bye. She knows that you cannot support the dullness of Fairfield farm twenty-four hours after I have left it."

And her laugh was very musical and sweet as she went back to Hilda. On the whole she had rather enjoyed her little flirtation, and Hilda's happiness was safe.—[Philadelphia Call.

"Wonders."

E. H. BECKWITH, Norwich, Conn., Dec. 18th, 1884, stated, "I owe my life to Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure; when I began its use I passed ten quarts of water daily, which contained 14 per cent of sugar; after using seven dozen bottles my doctor pronounced the water free from sugar; it has done wonders for me."

Care of the Teeth.

The chief rules which must be attended to and observed in connection with the care of the teeth are as follows: First if possible the teeth should be rinsed out every meal. Secondly, the teeth should be brushed, night and morning, with a tooth powder; mere tooth-powder; mere tooth "washes" are ineffective in keeping the teeth clean and pure. A good powder is the "precipitated chalk'," of druggists. well made and having a little camphor added. This preparation is sold under the name of "camphorated chalk," and the camphor has a stimulating and healthy influence on the gums. Thirdly, use a medium tooth brush, neither too hard nor too soft, and use water with the chill taken off, wherewith to brush the teeth.

By attention to these rules not merely will a notable item in personal appearance be preserved, but health will be secured and pain avoided. Many a bad attack of tooth ache disappears if the teeth are attended to, and when some light aperient medicine has also been administered. If the gums are naturally irritable and tender. A few drops of the tincture of myrrh in water should be used to rinse out the mouth twice or thrice a day.—[Dr. Andrew Wilson in "Health."

MRS. CARRIE D. T. SWIFT, Rochester, N. Y., for 25 years suffered from hereditary rheumatism, many times being utterly helpless; especially in warm weather. In July, 1883, she used a few bottles of Warner's SAFE Rheumatic Cure, and in January, 1885, said her restoration to health was as complete as miraculous. Cure permanent. Try it.

Being a Woman.

The Lowell Times publishes the following, revised by a woman: It is a dreadful bother to be a woman and do the business up in good shape. In the frist place you've got to look well, or you're nobody. A man may be ever so homely and still be popular. Whiskers cover up most of his face, and if he has a big mouth nobody mistrusts it, and if he does wrinkle bad on his forehead his friends speak of his many cares and of his thoughtful disposition, and tell eachother that his wrinkles are lines of thought. Lines of thought, indeed, when in all probability his forehead is wrinkled by the bad habit he has got of scowling at his wife when the coffee isn't strong enough.

A woman must always be in good order. Her hair must be always frizzed and banged, as fashion demands, and she must powder if she has a shining skin; and she must manage to look sweet, no matter how sour she may feel; her dress must hang just so, and her lace must be always spotless. and her boot buttons always in place, and her finger nails always clean; and then she musn't whistle, nor climb fences, nor stone cats, nor scold when she's mad.

She can't go out alone, because ladies must be protected; she can't go anywhere when it rains, because her hair won't stay frizzed and she'll get mud on her petticoats and things; she can't be a Free Mason, because she would tell their secrets and everybody would know all about the goat and gridiron; she can't smoke, because that would be unfeminine; she can't go courting because that would not be womanly. But she must get married before she is 35, or everybody will feel wronged. People will sigh over her and wonder why it is that men "don't seem to take;" and all the old maids and widows smile and keep quiet. Oh these smiles and those significant looks! They are ten times more than ofm slanders. It is a terrilbe thing to be an old maid. Everybody knows it is, and the women who are married to drunken husbands, and who manage to quarrel with them six days out of seven, will live in agony of spirit over the single woman and call her that "poor old maid."

A woman must marry rich or she doesn't marry "well." And to marry "well" is the end and aim of a woman's existence, judging from the view which people in general take of this matter. It is everybody's business when a woman marries. The whole neighborhood put their heads together and talk over the pros and cons, and decide whether she is good enough for him. (There is nothing said about his being good enough for her.) And they criticise the shape of her nose, and relate anecdotes of how lazy her grandfather was, and how her Aunt Sally used to sell beans and butter milk. A woman must wear No. 2 shoes on No. 3 feet, and she must manage to dress well on 75 cents a week, and she musn't be vain. and she must go regularly to sewing society meetings, and be ready to dress dolls and make tidies and aprons for church fairs. She must be a good cook, and she must be able to to "do up" her husband's shirts so that the Chinese washerman woul groan with envy and gnash his teeth with the same unholy passion at sight of them.

She must always have the masculine buttons of the family sewed on so they will never come off while in use, and she must keep the family hosiery so that nobody would ever mistrust that there were toes in the stockings while they were on. She must hold herself in constant readiness to find everything her husband has lost—and a man never knews where to find anything. He will put his boots carefully away on the parlor sofa, and when he has hunted for them half an hour he will suddenly appear to his wife with acountenance like an avening angel and demands "What in thunder she has done with his boots." She must shut all the doors after her lord and master, and likewise the bureau drawers, for a married man was never known to shut a drawer. It would be as unnatural for a hen to go in swiming for recreation.

She must go to bed first in cold weather so as to get the bed warm. Her husband, if he be a wise man, never asks her to do this. Oh, no! but he sets to "just finish this piece in the paper," and waits till she has got the sheets to a comfortable tempature. Ah, there is a great many tricks in the trade of living together. A woman is expected to take care of the baby even after the first infantile wonder has multiplied into a round half a dozen. And if he doubles up with the colic or trials of cutting teeth or the unnessary evil of mumps, measles and whooping cough and scarlet fever and rash and the throat distemper and short sleeves and bare legs and pins sticking into him and too much candy and a bad temper, why her husband tells her that he "does wish she would try and quiet her baby," and he says it too as if he thought she was the only one responsible for its existance, and as if she was considerably to blame for it too.

And when she has the headache no one thinks of minding it—a woman's always having the headache. And if she is "nervous enough to fly" nobody shuts the door any quieter, and nobody tucks her on the lounge with a shawl over her or cuddles her to death as a man has to be cuddled under such circumstances. We might go on indefinitely with the troubles of being a woman, and if there is a man who thinks a woman has an easy time of it, why, just let him pin on a pound of false hair and get inside a pair of corsets, and put on a pullback overskirt, and be a woman himself and see how he likes it.

A Family Ruined by Intermarriage.

At Ellis in Vernon county, Nev., a family boarded a Missouri Pacific train who were terribly afflicted. The family consisted of Mrs. Parson Hale and her four children. Mrs. Hale is over 70 years of age and children are hopeless idiots. The oldest is a grey haired man 53 years old. Aside from his imbecility, his physical deformations are pitiable. His legs are misshaped and when assuming a sitting posture they extend straight out, being totally void of action at the knees. The other brother is not so badly deformed, but is almost incapable of moving himself. One of the two sisters can walk, but sometimes loses her balence and falls heavily. The other has but little control of her body. Parson Hale and his wife were own cousins and Mrs. Hale's father and mother were related. The terrible condition of the family is doubtless attributable to this series of intermarriages. Of eight children born to them, seven were imbeciles and a majority of them were more or less deformed. Parson is a sufferer by reason of the consanguinity of his parents. He has always been regarded as more than eccentric, and during the past few days he has steadily grown more erratic. He frequently absents himself from home, and for weeks his wife does not know of his whereabouts. He has now been away three months, and it is not known whether he is dead or alive.

During the greater part of his life he has been an exhorter in the Methodist chrrch, and during that time his paroxysms of religious excitement have been regarded as evidences of aberration. For fifteen years Mr. Hale and his famity have lived in Vernon county, and here three of his unfortunate children have died. He owned a little farm near Moundville, until lately managed to eke out a scanty living, but age deprived him of his ability to work and the county has been helping him. The family go to Henry county to be cared for by relatives. Mrs. Hale is a woman of average mental power and of moderately good physical developement. The only child born with an average mind is now at work on a farm in the county.

A Woman's Happy Release.

MRS. E. F. LOLLOFF, Haverill, Mass., August 6th, 1881, said she had been cured of inflammation of the bladder by five bottles of Warner's Safe Cure. December 24th, 1884, Mr. Dolloff wrote. "Mrs. Dolloff has never seen a sick day from that inflammatory disease since Warner's Safe Cure cured her in 1881." Cure permanent.

Two Friends.

We have always had a sincere affection for that keen-witted and somewhat skeptical scientist, who believes less than he hears and not all that he sees, and who has the trick of discrediting the signs of emotion with more critical frankness than falls to the lot of most Exclusive and concentrated for his own part, he does not take well with caaholicity; and he looks on general amiability, so he says, as a "thundering" fault. We know that to be with him is to be sacrificed before we leave him. Yet we are glad to meet him, all the same; thinking too that a little honest flaying—without witness—is by no means unwholesome for one's soul. Then there is that other friend who stands at the opposite end of the scale—a prophesyer of smooth sayings—the weaver of silken tissues only—the sweetest, softest, blandest and most amiable creature under heaven. To be in his society is like seeing oneself in a mirror that beautifes every feature and glorifies every circumstance of one's condition, paints only our virtues in the brighest colors, so that we may be excused if—human nature being but a frail kind of thing at the best—we find him one of the most charming companions in the world; until the inevitable question forces itself on our mind: "How much of all this is real and how much is pretty fable and polite flattery?" Then we prefer the rougher tools of our scientific friend; and think that between the two—the disproportioned blame of the one and the insincere praise of the other—the former is the more commendable.—[Detroit Free Press.

A GREAT DISCOVERY.

The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years."

The Richest Heiress in America.

Miss Nettie Gould, the very charming and accomplished 18-year-old daughter of Mr. Jay Gould, who is reported as soon to wed the partner of her father, Washington E. Connor, is one of the brightest and sweetest little ladies in New York city. She has been finely educated and is highly accomplished. She is an artist of no mean ability and her collection of bric-a-brac, which has been adorned by her pencil and brush, has been greatly admired. She dresses plainly but richly, and when in town can be seen any afternoon driving through the park with her brother George and "Wash," by her side. She probably the richest heiress in America, and on her father's death will come in for $20,000,000 or $30,000,000.

Our Exposition Letter.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Mar. 14., 1885.

Crowds have thronged the Exposition Grounds daily since the beginning of Mardi Gras, though Monday the 16th. which was Rhode Island day, and the reception of Rex, was the largest attendance the Fair has ever experienced, there being no less than 60,000 people present.

The cheese and butter display has been reduced almost to nothing unless new additions are received, as the material is perishable and has to be disposed of after a few weeks' exhibition. The North-western states are most generally represented in this line.

MAINE.

This state though so far east is very well represented, and at too much expense and trouble. Col. J. B. Ham, is the commissioner in charge, ably assisted by W. F. Blanding, a newspaper man. Most everything elsewhere produced either naturally or artifically can be seen from the display in this state's department in the Government building. The ice interest is one of the largest industries in the world, as the northeast rivers and lakes of Maine supply nearly all the cities of the states bordering the Atlantic and gulf coast as far west as Texas besides using thousands of tons for shipping meat and preserving fruits. The Sardine canning business is one of the largest known, and it is said over half of this article consumed in the United States is from Maine.

IDAHO TERRITORY.

Col. Geo. L. Shoupe, commissioner, has done nobly by his Territory which stands so high in the mining world. It contains some fine fruit, agricultural and grazing londs, but a specialty is made of minerals. The collective display by the commissioner is immense and select, and many compliments have been bestowed upon it. Col. Shoupe is a wealthy man and he has made most liberal outlays of private funds to bring this territory before the public gaze, and visitors declare he has succeeded admirably in so doing. The Cœur d' Alene, Wood river and Salmon river districts are well represented.

WISCONSIN.

Commissioner Hoton, one of the most genial and happy men of the Exposition, makes friends wherever he goes, and is a most fitting representative of the great Northern state which he has given such an attractive appearance. The cheese display especially from Sheboygan, is number one, while the agricultural collections show the state to good advantage in cereals, and tobacco is one of the principal products. The woman's department of Wisconsin is located among the states exhibits and is very creditable. It should be seen by all as it contains many really artistic articles fashioned by woman's hands.

NOTES.

The old adage of better late than never was practically demonstrated last week by the throwing open of the Art Gallery which is indeed entertaining. It is too bad that the gallery to this art musium could not have been completed before the largest crowds came, among whom were a great many well known artists who made special trips here to see this particular exhibit, and left disappointed at failing to accomplish their desires. Yet it will be enjoyed by those who now make it convenient to take in the great centennial.

Nothing has exceeded in pyrotechnic displays, those held on the evening of the Cotton Centennial day of the Exposition. The representation of the Falls of Niagara, the bale of cotton, and other less attractive but more numerously dazzling fireworks. The array was given at the Exposition Grounds and was viewed by thousands of visitors as well as citizens and all enjoyed it as was merited.

One feature of the show is to visitors from the frigid regions, where they leave snow, ice and frozen ground, to reach this section and see vegitation growing, fountains playing and bird singing, in all of which the Exposition abounds, not to mention oranges hanging on the trees, cocanuts dungling from their native limbs, and fine apples clinging to their mother stem, cocti and flowers budding and in bloom right here in the midst of winter. And then the sun shines so soothingly.

Among the recently completed buildings, that of the bankers, called the "Bankers Provilion," is one of the handsomest and little structures to be seen on the grounds.

The United States department containing the Patentoffice, War, Navy, Postoffice and Interior materials, is one of the most interesting displays of the kind ever looked upon and though it cost "Uncle Sam" immense could not have been better disbursed than within the World's Great Fair.

FRANCIS L. DOW, assistant police marshal, Taunton, Mass., three years ago was cured of stone in the kidney and bladder by Warner's SAFE Cure, and in June, 1884, he wrote, "I have not seen a sick day since I began Warner's SAFE Cure and never felt better; have gained eighteen pounds."

In London there is a well established and highly successful firm of female architects. They plan houses, stores, architectural work of all descriptions, and are much esteemed by house owners. It is said of the houses built by these women that every room has a closet.

FASHION NOTES.

Velvet will be largely used on all bonnets the coming season.

Flowers will be used in preference to feathers for spring bonnets.

French lace imitating real thread laces are used for making entire bonnets.

Gold embroidered Turkish muslin is one of the choicest fancies for the coming summer.

It is now the fancy to preserve the Langtry knot of hair worn low in the nape of the neck.

Bonnets made of some fanciful material over a frame of wire will be used for dress occasions.

The trimmings for black silk are flat passenteries, corded and chenille ornaments and lace.

Some gilt pins placed near together all around the velvet binding of a bonnet are stylish ornaments.

Shot ribbon velvets are very much used, and very handsome; the black is of satin shot in two colors.

Straw bonnets in all dark colors to match costumes will be worn during the spring and summer.

The square and pointed crowns will be used for round hats but all brims are close and narrow.

Colored embroidered collars are introduced for children, and are to be worn alike by small boys and girls.

Dress buttons remain small and round; they are scarcely larger than a pea, and and the newest are of braid or plaided silk.

Velvet cockade bows of bright red, blue, yellow ribbons are worn on the front of the corsage to brighten up dark dresses.

Squares of soft mull printed in Madrass plaids or stripes are imported for the neckerchiefs to be worn when summer days arrive.

Birdnests of chenille, with grasses inside and tinny birds perched on stems that the nests rest upon, will be used as trimming for bonnets.

A wide band or dog-collar of embroidered galloon is to be used as a support for shell frills of lace that are to extend very high around the neck.

The ornamental handkerchiefs and the new scarfs will be used to trim round hats. The square kerchief is bunched carelessly in front with its four corners upward.

A pretty cutaway basque for slender figures is open from the throat down, with tinny buttons at either side. The full blouse vest of merveilleux is held down by a Swiss girdle of velvet or plush.

One of my children, a girl about nine years old, had a very bad discharge from her head and nose of a thick, yellowish matter, and was growing worse. We had two different physicians prescribe for her but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise in three days there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was apparently cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

"Who left that door open?" growled Mr. Dinkle, looking up from his desk one of those freezer days last week.

"I did," answered the new office boy.

"Can't you ever learn to shut a door?"

"I s'pose so, sir."

"Well, why in thunder don't you do it?"

"I'm goin' to, but you see, I'm new yet, and I had so much to learn that I thought I'd leave the door be till along towards the last."—[Merchant Traveler.

A Campaigner's Experience.

LAWRENCE MIX, Esq., Warsaw, N. Y., a well campaign orator, in 1882 took 15 bottles of Warner's Safe Cure for kidney trouble, (after many physicians of excellent standing had given him up,) and Iwas cured December 9th, 1884, he says, "I have had no serious return of my trouble, and so conclude that my cure is permanent."

The Cost of the Inauguration.

The finance Committee in charge of the inauguration ceremonies estimate the expense incurred to be $55,000, which is $10,000 more than calculated. The committee guaranteed 4,000 suppers to the caterer, but as only 2,400 took supper the committee will have to make up the deficit. Among the items expended were $25,000 on the ball room, $2,000 for music, $3,800 for lighting the ball room, $5,500 for decorations and $3.500 for fireworks. The committee think that a portion of the subscription fund will have to be used to meet the liabilities.

Quite a sensation was caused at Bridgeport, Ct., Saturday, at a "fashionable" funeral by the fact that the deceased lady was laid out in a casket in full party dress, jewels, gloves and feathered fan included.

Gen. Grant rested comfortable last night. His condition remains about the same.

The British government has invested £20,000 for the family of General Gordon.

The President has appointed Joseph S. Miller of West Virginia, for Commissioner of internal revenue.

Mr. Blaine is contemplating a foreign tour of a year or two as soon as the second volume of his history is finished.

At the Democratic Senatorial caucus at Dover, Delaware, Monday evening, Attorney-General Gray was nominated for United States Senator, to succeed Secretary Bayard.

Miss Cleveland hold a weekly reception at the Weite House on Saturday afternoon, assisted by her sister, Miss Hoyt. Mrs. Blaine and Walker Blaine were among the callers.

Gen. Hazen, Third Assistant Postmaster General has ordered the new one cent stamp of the series used to pay newspaper postage. It will be similar in design to the first series now in use with the exception of numerals, and will be issued July 1, when the new law goes into effect.

The President is considering the advisability of revoking the recent order of President Arthur, throwing open to settlement old Winnebago or Crow Creek Indion reservation in Dakota. In behalf of the Indians, it has been asserted that the order included lands held by the Indians under the treaty of 1868, that could not be set aside by executive order.

Yesterday Prince Albert Victor was initiated into Freemasonry. The Prince of Wales, as Master of the Royal Alpha Lodge, performed the ceremony. He initiated his brother, the Duke of Connaught, into the order. Prince Albert Victor is the seventeenth member of the royal family who has joined the craft since 1737, when the eldest son of George II. was initiated.

Gen. Hatch, on Friday informed the Secretary of War that there were no trespassers in the Indian Territory. About 1,200 settlers are camped in Kansas, near the border threatening to go over the line. Troops are stationed in the territory, and will drive out all invaders. The President has issued a proclaimation forbidding the invasion of Indian Territory.

The President sent the following nominations to the Senate on Friday: Col. Nelson H. Davis, inspector general, with rank of brigadier general; lieutenant colonel Absalom Baird, inspector general with the rank of lieutenant colonel, to be inspector general with the rank of colonel; Major Robert P. Hughes, to be inspector general, with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Charles W. McCune, proprietor of the Buffalo Courier Company, died Saturday morning, after three weeks illness of typhoid fever. He was very popular and highly esteemed throughout the state. He has for several years been secretary and treasurer of the state associated press. Mr. McCune was only married last January. Messages of condolence were received from President Cleveland, Governer Hill and many others.

The Quick Delivery Postal Law.

It is not generally known that a very important law, known as the quick delivery postal law, was passed by Congress and was approved by the President just before the expiring hours of the session on Wednesday of last week. It provides that a special stamp of the face valuation of ten cents may be provided and issued, whenever deemed advisable or expedient, in such form and bearing such device as may meet the approval of the Postmaster General, which, when attached to a letter, in addition to the lawful postage thereon, the delivery of which is to be at a free delivery office, or at any city, town, or village containing a population of four thousand or over, according to the last federal census, shall be regarded as entitling such letter to immediate delivery within the carrier limit of any free delivery office which may be designated by the Postmaster General as a special delivery office, or within one mile of the postoffice at any other office coming within the provisions of this section which may in like manner be designated as a special delivery office. Such specially stamped letters shall be delivered from seven o'clock ante meridan up to twelve o'clock midnight at offices designated by the Postmaster General in the class mentioned. The Postmaster of any office which may come within the provisions of the act may with the approval of the postmaster-general, employ such person or persons as may [illegible] be required for such purpose, [illegible] upon the delivery of such letter [illegible] procure a receipt from the party addressed, or some one authorized to receive it, in a book to be furnished for [illegible], which shall when not in [illegible] in the post office, and at all [illegible] to examination by an inspector of the department. The postmaster shall keep a record of the number of [illegible] received at such office [illegible] special stamp, which number [illegible] to the number entered in the receipt books heretofore [illegible] the end of each month [illegible] Providing [illegible] compensation [illegible] thirty [illegible] provided further [illegible] in any [illegible] delivery [illegible]

Esther Baird, widow of the late Wm. Baird died at home in [illegible] Saturday evening at the advanced age of 101 years.

At Little Falls, N. Y., the Park skating rink was burned Sunday; loss $4,000 insured for $500. Over 200 pairs of skates and several hundred dollars worth of band music were destroyed.

Moses Latimore, a grocer of Liverpool, has assigned, giving preferences to the amount of $1,188. The liabilities are not large. Among those preferred is Joseph Goodrow of Fulton, for services, $100.

Warrants have been placed in the hands of United States Marshal E. Rowley for the arrest of five students of Alfred university, Wellsville, charged with illegal voting. Four were home for vacation and one, E. D. Stowart, was arrested.

Henry C. Walker, aged 45, of East Randolph, Cattaraugus county, committed suicide Saturday morning by hanging in his barn. He was in good circumstances, but had become sick of footing the bills of a wayward spendthrift son.

George Williams, George Fisher, Adelbert Gravott and Henry Russell each aged about 20, arrested in Syracuse for chicken stealing, have been sentenced to the penitentiary for 18 months, except Russell, who gets a month less.

The plaining mill and box factory of J. P. Bliss in Syracuse was totally destroyed by fire Sunday morning. The loss is between $15,000 and $20,000, and the insurance $7,800. About 30 men found employment in the building.

A salt well at Cuylerville, Livingston county, is attracting considerable attention. It is 1,152 feet deep, and near the bottom passes through a layer of salt 35 feet thick. Thereafter passing through three feet of shale, the great bed of salt is reached.

There are indications that the ice in the Hudson is weakening rapidly. Cracks from shore to shore north and south of Poughkeepsie, are numerous and are increasing in number. It is not believed, however, that navagation to Poughkeepsie will be open much before April 1, though a boat may come through before that time.

As Jacob Simon, a central brakeman, was coupling cars at the Geedes yard, early Friday morning, he caught one foot in a frog, and before it could be extricated a freight train ran over his leg, mangling it so badly that amputation at the hip joint was necessary. He died soon after the operation. He was 24, unmarried, and his parents live on a farm between East Syracuse and Manlius.

The Clermont Fruit company of Syracuse is to be incorporated, with a capital of $10,000, as soon as a majority of the stock is subscribed. Its object is to buy a tract of land in Florida and raise oranges and other tropical fruits. W. A. Duncan, W. E. Hopkins, G. F. Hine, C. H. Reamer, Alfred Underhill and C. P. Meads have been appointed to organize the company.

A fight occurred on Grand island recently between Fred Young and John Sturb, on account of Young speaking disrespectfully of Sturb's wife. In the scuffle each siezed the other's thumb in his mouth, and when they were separated it was found that Young's jaw had set around Sturb's thumb, necessitating medical assistance to open them. Sturb's hand has since swollen to an abnormal size, and blood poisoning and death appear certain. Young has fled to Canada.

PRESS COMMENT.

Under Cleveland it appears likely that the White House will be homelike, if it should not be fashionable.—[Pittsburg Times.

The treasury should pay off all congressmen, at least, and perhaps all officials, in silver dollars and nothing else. That is the only short cut to an end of silver coinage.—[Buffalo Express.

There is consternation in the treasury department. Mr. Manning has ordered 500 dismissal blanks from the printer. But these are to last four years. The supply can not be considered exorbitant. —[New York World.

What a cabinet it is physically! There must be close on to fourteen hundred pounds of solid raw bone; full chest, big nostriled healthy stomached men; and these qualities go a good deal further toward developing the sort of energy that an administration needs than might be supposed.—[New York Sun.

Ten million dollars' worth of property in the United States was destroyed by fire during the month of February. The taxation of Europe for the support of immense standing armies is looked upon here as a frightful burden, but, says the Boston Herald, the difference between the fire losses of either Germany or France and the United States amounts each year to a sufficient sum to pay the entire expenses of their respective war departments.

The people of the state have already spent about $17,000,000 on the capitol; it is enclosed; the public offices are completed, and the appropriations are now being squandered on an ornamental but useless staircase and will hereafter be squandered on a big tower, terraces and what not. It is time for the commonwealth to take a rest in its career of experimental architecture. The park at Niagara would be a thing of beauty; the new capitol is simply a thing of booty.—[Buffalo Courier.

An exchange says: "Sarah Bernhart gets $300 a day for acting." We have heard of men getting $300 and 300 days for acting—bad.

The Trials of a Minister.

The Rev. J. P. Arnold, (Baptist,) Camden, Tenn., in 1878 was taken with Bright's Disease, which produced two large abscesses. In 1878 another abscess formed which discharged for eighteen months. In 1881 two abscesses formed. He then began Warner's Safe Cure, "which restored me to perfect health," and in June 1883, he wrote, "my health is as good as ever." Try it!

THE GRAND JURY STEPS IN.

Wilkinson Brothers Under Indictment Charged With Grand Larceny.

The Syracuse Sunday Standard says that the grand jury on Saturday presented an indictment against Alfred and J. Forman Wilkinson, for grand larceny. The evidence brought to the notice of the grand jury was of the most damaging character. Wilkinson & Co., under which style the business of the firm was done, on December 8 last, received from Col. James S. Goodrich of this city the sum of forty dollars, for which they give him a draft on the Chemical National bank of New York. The following day Wilkinson & Co., made a general assignment. The draft when presented in New York, was therefore dishonoured, there being no funds to the credit of the insolvent firm. On the contrary, Wilkinson had already overdrawn their account at the Chemical bank over $1,800 as was testified by one of the clerks of the Chemical bank, who was in this city and was examined before the grand jury last Thursday. This gentleman was summoned from New York to establish this fact, it being deemed an essential point in the accumulation of proof.

The warrants of arrest Sheriff Bennett entrusted to Criminal Deputy O'Neil who yesterday arrested J. Formam Wilkinson. The measure was so extreme that the banker was quite surprised. He had had, however, an intimation that his case was before the grand jury. The officer took the prisoner to the court house, but out of deference to to his position, refrained from lodging him in the cells. Judge Vann having fixed his bale at $500, the prisoner was taken before County Judge Northrup who released him on his giving a bond in that amount.

GENERAL NEWS

The waters have receded from the lands recently flooded in Iowa.

President Cleveland is a great admirer of Walt Whitman, and it is reported the old poet will get a consulate if he wants it.

Alexander Powell, formerly private messenger to President Arthur, has been given a good position in the railway service.

The iron trade in the Mahoning valley, O., is looking a great deal brighter. Eight of the 18 blast furnace are in operation, and seven more are in condition to start.

The Canadian government is considering a scheme to fit out a number of armed schooners to watch the fishing grounds of the maritine provinces, and prevent American fishermen from taking fish in Canadian waters.

A quarrel occurred in the Texas Senate, Saturday, between Senators Houghston and Davis. Strong language was used. Pistols and knives were drawn, and but for the timely entrance of the lieutenant governor, bloody work would doubtless have ensued.

Hundreds of the inhabitants of the south-western counties of Virginia are emigrating to the western states. The country they leave is blue grass grazing lands and fertile, but owing to the want of railroad communication and the disaster of last year's drouth, the movement is approaching an exodus.

The Northwestern Indians are dying in large numbers from a singular disease, the first symptoms of which are a stiffening of the knees and other joints. Death soon follows:—The chicken-pox and diptheria have taken off many more and they are generally in a starving condition.

A suspicious character, going by the name of Winfield Scott Hancock, who says that he walked from North Carolina to Washington for the purpose of showing the President a patent he had invented to run the government, was committed to the work house for three months, Friday.

Mr. Bayard is the fourth of his family who have served in the senate. His grandfather, James Ashton Bayard, was elected to the senate from Delaware in 1804, and served till 1813, when President Madison appointed him one of the commissioners to negotiate the treaty of Ghent. His uncle, Richard H. Bayard, was elected to the senate from Delaware in 1836, and again in 1841. His father, James A., served in the senate from 1851 to 1869.

O, my back! That lame back is caused by kidney disease. Stop it at once by Hunt's [Kidney and Liver] Remedy.

A delegation of Tammanyites visited the White House and the Treasury department Monday. Ex-President Arthur made Mr. Cleveland a social call, and also Henry Ward Beecher.

Good news ought to be told; and it is good news that Hunt's Remedy has cured the worst of kidney diseases, and can do it again.

Washington Letter.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

Washington, March 18, 1885.

Pennsylvania Avenue has resumed its accustomed pace since the great multitude has metled away, and the music of the inauguration season has been stilled, the tri-colored bunting has been nearly all taken down and packed away for 1888, and now the politicians and office seekers, no longer lost in the overshadowing host, show their proportions in numbers at least. The woods are full of office seekers. Delegations of patriots, eager to serve their country for $1,000 or $1,500 a year, may be seen in groops in all the hotels, or hurrying about in carriages or climbing stairs for secret conferences, or waiting in the anterooms of the new Cabinet. The situation is peculiarly interesting. Cabinet officers to whom all applications for place have been referred by President Cleveland, are under seige. So far the hardest pressure has been brought upon Postmaster General Vilas. In the crowds that have gathered in his Department during the week, every cross roads postoffice in the country has been represented. His assistants have been filing applications at the rate, on some days of one a minute, all of which are referred to the proper bureau until Gen. Vilas can get a chance to see them. some of the applicants for postoffices had had sent their potitions to the President and a large wagon was used to convey them to the Postoffice Department. Gen. Vilas confronts the arduous task before him with few words and many comprehensive shakes of his head. In speaking of his new occupation yesterday, he said it consisted mainly in keeping both ears open and shaking hands.

With all this wild rush for office it would not be fair to say it is the greatest over seen here. Veterans in the business say it was first at Lincoln's first inauguration, and that both the Grant and Garfield beginnings equaled it, while the incoming of Andrew Johnson was marked by the largest onslaught of office seekers. It is thought, however, that the worst has not yet begun, and that the shrewest politicians have been waiting for the departure of the inauguration crowd before coming. It is predicted a new lot of visitors will come each week after this, many of whom will be prepaired to wait all summer if necessary.

The friends of a fixed civil service expect that the change of parties will involve changes in the offices to what may be reckoned the fifth grade. First comes the President with his personal assistants, next, the Cabinet with their private secretaries, stenographers etc., thirdly, the assistant secretaries and their retinues, fourthly, the heads of bureaus, and filthly, the chief clerks. It is held that no fault could be found with a party coming into power which should make changes to this extent, and in the present case a few exceptions have been made even with regard to these leading offices. A few of the incumbents have been retained on account of their efficiency and experience.

The first two cabinet meetings have been held, and they will be held regularly after this on Tuesdays and Fridays at the White House. The result of the last meeting was a number of appointments which went to the Senate to-day for confirmation. The new cabinet is made up of lawyers. Secretaries Bayard, Garland and Lamar were conspicuous in the Senate. Secretary Whitney gained his reputation in the profession, Secretary Endicott came from the Massashusetts supreme bench, and Postmaster General Vilas is a lawyer. Secretary Manning, of the Treasury, is the only one of the number who is not a member of the bar.

There is uncertainty among Senators as to the length of the present extra session of the Senate. There is a desire that an adjournment may be reached by the 1st of April. It will depend upon the will of the Republican majority. The Republican Senators profess to feel kindly disposed toward President Cleveland, however, and to have a desire to deal with his appointments, so far as possible, in a way that will be acceptable to him.

With great shrewdness, the new President has inaugurated reform at his own threshold. The services of one-half the clerical force of the White House have been dispensed with, and the incumbents were notified that they will not be needed after the 15th instant. This step is a signal of alarm to all government sinecurists who are quaking with fear lest their turn or dismissal will come next.

Naturally there is much speculation as to the social changes impending. The new Secretary of State has an invalid wife, too many children and too little money to keep up so grand an establishment as his predecessor. So it is predicted the Whitneys will take the place in society long filled by the Freylinghuysens. Secretary Lamar and Attorney General Garland are both widowers, and it will devolve chiefly upon the families of the four remaining Cabinet officers, Manning, Endicott, Whitney and Vilas to do the honors of the new regime.

"Seven."

David Tooke, Esq., Columbus, Texas, in 1879, was attacked with black jaundice, followed by hemorrhage of the kidneys, and was pronounced incurable. Seven bottles of Warner's Safe Cure restored him to health in 1880, and July 1st, 1884, he writes, "My health has been excellent ever since." Try it, Try it!

[illegible]UST [illegible]

Is not always enjoyed by those who seem to possess it. The taint of corrupted blood may be secretly undermining the constitution. [illegible] virulence the longer it has been allowed to permeate the system. Each pimple, sty, boil, skin disorder and sense of unnatural lassitude, or languor, is one of Nature's warnings of the consequences of neglect.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only remedy that can be relied upon, in all cases, to eradicate the taint of hereditary disease and the special corruptions of the blood. It is the only alterative that is sufficiently powerful to thoroughly cleanse the system of Scrofulous and Mercurial impurities and the pollution of Contagious Diseases. It also neutralizes the poisons left by Diphtheria and Scarlet Fever, and enables rapid recuperation from the enfeeblement and debility caused by these diseases.

Myriads of Cures

Achieved by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, in the past forty years, are attested, and there is no blood disease, at all possible of cure, that will not yield to it. Whatever the ailments of this class, and wherever found, from the scurvy of the Arctic circle to the "veldt-sores" of South Africa, this remedy has afforded health to the sufferers by whom it was employed. Druggists everywhere can cite numerous cases, within their personal knowledge, of remarkable cures wrought by it, where all other treatment had been unavailing. People will do well to

Trust Nothing Else

than Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Numerous crude mixtures are offered to the public as "blood purifiers," which only allure the patient with the pretense of many cheap doses, and with which it is folly to experiment while disease is steadily becoming more deep-seated and difficult of cure. Some of these mixtures do much lasting harm. Bear in mind that the only medicine that can radically purify the vitiated blood is Permanent Security.

T. O. Lewis, San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 28, 1881, says, "I have suffered for ten years with congested kidneys, and have passed stones ranging in size from the head of a pin to a pea, which caused strangury of the neck of the bladder. The best physicians in this city said I could not recover. I used four bottles of Warner's Safe Cure, and got rid of four calculi." Writing June 23d, 1884, he says, "The cure effected in 1881 was permanent."

Northern New York Conference.

The next session of the northern New York conference of the M. E. church, will convene at Ogdensburg April 8th, under the presidency of Bishop Warren of Atlanta, Georgia. The conference embraces six presiding elder's districts, and 161 pastoral charges in Herkimer, Oneida, Lewis, Jefferson, St. Lawrence and Oswego counties, and corners of Montgomery, Otsego, Madison and Franklin. In 1884 there were in these bounds 274 churches valued at a million and a quarter dollar's and 157 parsonages worth $203.000; over $25.000 members, 336 Sunday schools, and 30,000 teachers and scholars. By the expiration of the disciplinary term the bishop will this year change the fields of labor of three presiding elders and thirty-one pastors. He will also probably change as many more pastors who have only served one or two years in their present charges.

Havn't You Felt Just So?

Isaac N. Wood, Fishkill, N. Y., July, 1884, wrote. "It is two years ago last spring since Warner's Safe Cure cured me. I was called a dead man but that medicine brought me to life. I take a few bottles every spring to keep me right." He was afflicted for six years with pains in the back, ending in kidney hemorrhage. Cure permanent.

A Cincinnati printer, who brought suit to compel a telephone company, that had removed his telephone because he used profanity in a message throuh it, to replace the instrument, has been defeated in the supreme court holding that that the company had the right to remove the instrument.

If You Doubt, it Try and See.

D. M. Dewey, of Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 25, 1882, wrote, "One of the most prominent physicians here found 22 grains of sugar to the fluid ounce of my urine; was unable to benefit me. I then began using Warner's Safe Diabetes Cure, and Warner's Safe Pills. Having used five bottes of each, I found myself cured." N. B.—Mr. Dewey remains well.

Hot Coffee Free.

MADE IN ONE MINUTE

James McCarthy of Oswego

will have this wonderful tea and coffee pot on exhibition in the branch store Fulton, N. Y., Saturday March 21

A Great Success to be continued. The

One Minute Coffee Pot.

The most wonderful of all inventions exhibited before the public for making Coffee and Tea. A child six or seven years old can make Coffee and Tea with it just as well as the most experienced cook, and it takes ONE MINUTE TO MAKE COFFEE as CLEAR as WINE with all the rich ingredients contained in the Coffee or Tea.

In boiling Coffee or Tea you get no Coffee or Tea, only bitter water, but by the new method of making it we have a delicious drink. No fish skins, no salt, no eggs, no cold water, anything else used to settle the Coffee or Tea.

All Are Requested To Come
And Get a Cup of Hot Coffee or Tea.

THE POT WILL BE ON SALE WHILE THE EXHIBITION LASTS.

We have seen these Coffee and Tea Pots tested with the most wonderful results, and want our friends and customers to see them in practical operation at McCarthy's China Hall.—One Minute Coffee and Tea Pots a Specialty.

$100 REWARD to any one who will make as good Coffee or Tea with twice the amount of Coffee or Tea.

THE BEST BUTTER COLOR.

The great unanimity with which dairy men of high reputation have adopted, in preference to anything else, the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., of Burlington, Vt. is remarkable. It shows that the claims of imitative colors are baseless, wise dairymen will use no other.

The petrified forest near, Corinzo, in New Mexico, has attracted much attention.—Visitors to it say they also find sings of petrifaction in the valley for some hours before reaching it. Trunks of trees, limbs and twigs lie all about, and even the whole hearts of some trees are beautifully crystalized and sparkle like diamonds.

A POPULAR FALLACY.

Many people think that Rheumatism cannot be cured. It is caused by a bad state of blood which deposits poisonous matter in the joints and muscels causing lameness, stiffness and swelling of the joints and excruciating pains. Kidney-Wort will certainly effect a cure. It acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, stimulating them to a healthy action, purifies and enriches the blood and eliminates the poison from the system. Go to the nearest druggist, buy Kidney-Wort and be cured.

IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞ For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞ But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

☞ And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞ BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞ If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

Stephens Opera House was packed on Monday evening by an intelligent and appreciative audience who had assembled to witness "Muggs' Landing," which is one of the most pleasing and interesting comedy-dramas ever produced. The company which comprises twelve artists, are ladies and gentlemen of refinement and culture. Miss Frances Bishop and Mr. Alfred McDowell are the stars. Miss Bishop has a remarkably sweet face and at once won the admiration of the audience. Her singing was responded to with rounds of applause. Though but seventeen years of age, this young actress ranks high in the art. We can only say that Mr. McDowell, and in fact the whole company are all they are represented to be. The play is free from vulgar utterances and impure actions. The company is the best that has visited Fulton this season, and should they ever return to this place we predict for them a hearty welcome and another full house.

Believed to Have Two Wives.

J. B. Gillis is a young man of about twenty years of age. Last summer while hop-picking he became acquainted with Amanda Seymour of this village and soon after won her affections. Last fall they became man and wife and went to house keeping on Second street. Gillis was employed for a portion of the winter in LaPort's blacksmith shop, while she worked out occasionally. It is said that married life with the young couple was not one continual gush of happiness, according to a well grounded rumor he accompanied his wife with her people to the salvation army barracks last Sunday evening. During the meeting he made his exit and went directly to his home, gathered up his clothing and left for parts unknown. Since his departure his wife, it is said, has learned authoritively that he has another wife living whom he married at Constantia previous to his marriage with her.

The Standard's correspondent of yesterday says: A genuine sprig of shamrock from the Emerald Isle, postmarked Ballenasloe, Galway, came to Marcus Crahan in time to remind him that 1,390 years ago to-day his patron Saint Patrick died, after a life of pure devotion, having converted his countrymen to the Christian faith. Captured in France, sold as a slave in Ireland to tend flocks of sheep, he grew to be the patron saint of Ireland. He died March 17, 495.

At Oswego, on Wednesday, a survey of the ice field of lake Ontario was made from the survey station 224 feet above the lake level. The ice was found to be solid in all directions as far as the glass could reach except due north from the harbor, where open water appeared at a distance of seventeen miles and extended over the horrizon. The ice field consists entirely of rough hammocks.

You may be able to get a large city weekly filled with murders, scandall cases, cock fights., for the same monny you pay for your local papers, but these city weeklies never advertise your county and make your property valuable. The Fultons Again Victorious.

The Casino polo club of Oswego not being satisfied with their defeat by the Fulton club some few weeks since, entered into an agreement to play them again last Thursday evening at the Casino rink in that city. Although the previous game was fairly won by the Fultons, the press of the city and several of the members of the club declared that the game rightfully belonged to them, and expressed themselves as confident that in the next contest they would have a walk-away with our boys. But since last Thursday evening's game we persume they have changed their opinion. The Fulton club made the first, second and third goals with but very little work, the game lasting only fifteen minutes. In criticizing this game the Palladium says: "The Casinos need strengthening or else the managment should endeavor to play with weaker teams."

Prof. Wiggins' Storm.

A dispatch from Ottawa on the 18 inst says: In conversation, Prof. Wiggings said that the storm of to-day, which he predicted in April, 1883, will be heavy, especially on the meridian of London, where it will appear thirty-six hours earlier than in America. It will be accompanied by earthquakes, and tides will be unusally high. The storm will continue in different localities for a week, and will stretch from the Arctic circle to parallel of Sandy Hook. He says this storm will be nearly equal in strength to those which will occur on September 29, 1886; March 26, 1887, and September 19, 1887, known as the Saxeby storm of October, 1869.

Enterprise in Carthago.

The enterprising firm of Walrath & Girvin who started the great furniture Stores in Syracuse a year or two ago have recently added an entirely new and fine variety of Carpets to their other branch of business. With an experience of over 25 years in the carpet trade and the very low price of carpets at this time we can see no reason why it is not for the interest of our readers to give this firm a call when in Syracuse.

The re-appearance of the "Smith Family" at the Universalist church last Friday evening was witnessed by a fair sized audience. The members performed their different parts in an excellent manner. The recitation by Miss Ada Thayer, entitled, "Painter of Lavalle" is worthy of special mention. The entertainment was a success financially and otherwise, the receipts aggregating about $75.

"Dick" Coate, a Fulton boy whom everybody liked, is to be honored in being the first appointee at the hands of President Cleveland. Before election he had the promise direct from Mr. Cleveland that he would be made postmaster at his present home, Stephenson, Wis. and that he himself would personally see that the promise is fulfilled.[—Fulton correspondent to the Standard.

A richly dressed young couple—entire strangers—stepped into the news room a few days ago and made some purchases. After they had departed a handsome leather bag was noticed on the counter. After an hour or more it was examined, and found to contain much gold and valuable ornaments, apparently several hundred dollars worth. It was carefully laid aside, and just before night the owner came in, saw it lying on a shelf, and gruffly said, "give me that bag." with never a word of thanks for its safe keeping.—[Fulton correspondent to the Standard.

A former Fultonian, now a resident of Dakota, in a letter to home friends, pays the following tribute to the memory of one who, though but a child, was made pure and noble through suffering. "I depend upon The Patriot for home news, and notice that little Clara Louise Kellogg is dead—such a life as hers has its uses. Ira Beardsley, who was indicted for rape before the last grand jury, was brought from Michigan by Sheriff Beadle, gave bail Monday in the sum of $1,000.

Lawrence Robinson, a much esteemed citizen of Oswego, dropped dead near his home Thursday evening. During the day he appeared to be in his usual health.

The Phœnix village board has voted to exact a license fee of five dollars a week from Dr. Mason, the proprietor of the rink. This is a virtual prohibition of skating and is looked upon as an outrage.

The Syracuse Herald of Friday had the following: George Howe and his wife and three little children were sent to their old home in Cleveland, Oswego county, to-day by the County Superintendent of the Poor. They came from Michigan to this city.

Owing to the increased amount of work in the passenger and freight departments of the Rowe, Watertown and Ogdensburg roads, they will be separated from March 1. W. F. Parsons is appointed general passenger agent, with office at Oswego.

The lumbermen's board of trade at Oswego is in favor of uniting with Tonawanda, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Rome, Utica, Troy, Albany, New York and Brooklyn for the purpose of organizing the Lumbermen's Mutual Insurance company of the state of New York. This action is proposed on account of the high rater charged in Oswego and elsewhere on lumber.

The skating rink was quite well patronized last week, but the management could not pay expenses and so discontinued it after Saturday evening. On Monday, when they left town, the men had to leave their skates to secure their board at the hotel and to pawn a watch, chain and a ring to get out of town. They sank about $80 it is said during the week, including $20 forwarded to Mexico to secure a hall there. Three was a larger company than this place could support. —[Sandy Creek News.

The large building on the east side of the river at Oswego, owned by the Lieb estate and occupied by Pool's thermometer works and Masten's flax works, was burned Friday morning. The building was located between the canal and the river and was hard to reach. The losses and insurance are: On building, loss, $5,000; insurance, $4,100; Pool's thermometer works, loss on stock and machinery, $30,000; insurance, $16,500; Masten's flax works, loss, $7,000; insurance, $3,400. About thirty operatives are thrown out of employment. Mr. Pool has telegraphed to New York for new machinery, and expects to resume work in about two weeks. Mr. Masten will also resume. The thermometer works were running night and day and employing fifty hands. No explanation of the fire can be given. The tannery building next door was damaged $1,000.

Caught in His Own Death Trap.

Marcus Warner, of Shusan, N. Y., has been bothered by chicken thieves lately. A few nights ago he set a large steel trap at the entrance of his chicken coop door. He also loaded a shotgun with powder and fine salt and placed it at the door of the coop, so that when the door was opened the gun would be discharged, and the intruder receive the contents in his body while held in the jaws of the steel trap. The same day some friends of Warner came to visit him. They drank cider all day and till late in the evening. When the visitors were ready to go Warner went to help them harness the horse. They broke a strap. Warner had one in the chicken coop. He forgot about the trap and the gun and went after the strap. When he opened the door of the hen house he stepped in the trap. The gun went off and bored a large hole in his side. The trap broke his leg. He will die.

[illegible] Cows.

[illegible] Tests Which Are [illegible] Generally Suspected.

BY THOMAS D. CURTIS.

[illegible] milk or cream is pooled [illegible] some test of quality [illegible] the milk or cream [illegible], the man who delivers [illegible] and the one who delivers [illegible] gains a pro rata division of [illegible]. It has been found that the product of 118 cubic inches of cream will vary, apparently under the same conditions, from 8 to 24 ounces, and yet the average will be about 16 ounces. Here the 8-ounce patron gets twice as much as belongs to him, and the 24-ounce patron loses one-third. In a trial at the Maine Agricultural College, made last summer with 20 cows, all being treated alike, it was found that 76 cubic inches of some cows' cream made a pound of butter, while it took as high as 180 cubic inches of the crean of others to make a pound. The yield of butter per cow per day was 3.4 to 2.31 pounds, and the amount of milk required for a pound of butter ranged from 13.77 to 29 pounds.

In a trial made H. B. Gurler, DeKalb, Ill., some years ago, he found his individual cows gave from 18 to 49 pounds of milk per day, and the cow that gave the 18 pounds made the most butter. The per cent of cream varied from 7 to 23. The daily yield of butter per cow was 8 to 20 ounces, and the average annual yield per cow was 150 pounds. The profit on this was $15. By weeding out and breeding from better blood and his best cows, he brought the average annual yield up to 266 pounds per cow, with a profit on each of $45. Such improvement is within the reach of every dairymen. Cows that give less than 3,500 pounds of milk per year do not pay for their keep. There is little or no profit on one that gives less than 5,000 pounds of milk, when the milk is carried to a cheese factory. The profit is on those that give more. The only test of the value of a butter cow is the churn. The measure of cream is no guide, as cream varies so much in butter producing quality.

Stirring or agitating milk before setting it for cream prevents perfect separation and reduces the product of butter. Cooling milk before setting prevents the cream from fully rising. Warming it up to 100 degrees before setting will secure a better separation. Too much dry feed injures the churning quality of milk; succulent food improves the churning quality. The smaller the cream globule, the slower the cream rises and the more imperfect the separation. The longer the time from calving, the smaller the globules. Scant feed and poor condition of the cow reduce the size of the cream globule and impovish it. An old cow's cream was churned with that of a heifer. There was no increase in amount of butter by adding the heifer's cream. Churning the butter milk produced a second batch of butter equal to the first. It was found that it took twice as long to churn the old cow's cream as the heifer's—a warning to be careful about mixing cream of different churning qualities.

Other experiments have shown corresponding results, even a fourth churning producing butter in some cases—but each successive churning was inferior to the previous iu quality, Cows must be liberally fed. The product is from the food over and above the mointanance ration, or else at the expense of the cow's system and constitution. Cows must be kept in a thriving condition for at least six months before calving, or they will not give the best yield. They must be properly sheltered fall and spring, and kept warm in winter. Slight chilling, even in getting drink, shrinks the yield. It is better to have the chill taken off the water. Artificial heating of the stable is found to pay in augmented yield and saving of feed. Feed burned in a heater is cheaper than feed burned in the cow to keep up the temperature of the body. Cream rising in a cold atmosphere is purified by the absortion of the vapors rising from it; cream rising in an atmosphere warmer than the milk, condenses and absorbs the vapors in the atmosphere wi'h all their foulness. Cooling below 40 expands the water in the milk and interferes with the rising of the cream.

WASHED-OUT HAIR.

There is a sort of pallid, chalky complexion which the novelists call a "washed-out complexion." It is ghastly enough, and no mistake. Washed-out, faded, discolored, or parti-colored hair is almost as repulsive and melancholly. Parker's Hair Balsam will restore your hair to its original color, whatever it was; brown, auburn or black. Why wear moss on your head, when you may easily have lively, shining hair 44w4

Time For Seed-Testing.

Now is the season for making a test of old or doubtful seeds. I have just had the pleasure of seeing a general issue of strong sprouts from some peas which I was doubtful of as to their power of germination, although only of last summer's growth; because I had poured boiling water over them and then forgotten to lift the basket out, after a lapse of two minutes, as intended. They remaided until the water was nearly cold, and they were much swelled. It was a troublesome job to get them dried. But they show now no signs of any bugs, and of twenty put on damp sand in a plate, and covered with a piece of thick cloth, all are evenly vegetating.

Some three-year-old peas, on another [illegible], show no sprouts yet, but look as if [illegible] will. They are in low warmth [illegible] more equable and favorable than [illegible] soil will afford at so early a [illegible] for pea-planting. We [illegible] severe winter weather, [illegible] an injurious affect on [illegible] seed potatoes that have [illegible] the temperature has [illegible] the freezing point. [illegible] in temperate [illegible] the full flash of [illegible]. A deep cover [illegible] safest winter [illegible]

[illegible] experiments to demonstrate the value of good roads and broad tires on road and farm wagons. He says that the condition of the country road is one of the surest indications of the civilization of the people. The trials were made with a carefully tested dynamometer; the loads drawn were 3.665 pounds each, and the felloes and tires were 1½ inch and three inches, respectively. The first test was on blue grass sword somewhat moist, though it had not raised for two weeks. The average draft of the narrow-tired wagon was 489 pounds, while that of the wide-tired was 310 pounds—a difference of over 41 per cent. in favor of the wide tire. Assuming the wagons to weigh 1,000 pounds each, the same team could draw 3,248 pounds on the wide tire as easily as 2,000 pounds on the narrow, and, besides this, the wide tires did not cut through and injure the turf as the others did. In a further test on a partially dried dirt road, the broad wheels showed a draft of 371 pounds to 441 for the narrow, being 12.7 per cent. in favor of broad tires, so that with the same wear and tear of team, the broad-tired wagon could carry 331 pounds per ton load. more than the other. Although these differences disappear on hard, well-made roads, he concludes that every farm should have one or more broad tired wagons, and says the teamsters on the College farm always prefer such for use about the farm. We have long known the value of a broad tire for farm wagons, and have such a one for all work on raw ground or meadow land. It costs very little, if any, more, and soon pays for itself by saving the team. —R. N. Y.

Never.

MRS. HELEN LEIKEM, West McHenry Ill., two years ago used Warner's SAFE Nervine for complete nervous prostration. August, 1884, she wrote, "I have never enjoyed such good health, have had no return of my old trouble." Try it.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Overhaul the tools.

Exercise the teams.

Look up spring seeds

Watch that lice do not infest the dairy stock. They often come, no one can tell how, nor whence.

Get out fire wood long enough ahead to allow of its seasoning well; it's a losing business to burn it green.

Good crops will always afford a comfortable living, even if prices are low; while poor crops are never either encouraging or profitable, no difference what prices may be.

Windows in horse stables should be either directly ahead or behind the animals; if at the side, so that one eye receives more light than the other, weakness to the eyes will follow.

A New England farmer, who probably speaks from experience, says the white daisy and wild carrot can be eradicated from the pastures by keeping sheep on them for a few consecutive years.

Any ailing fowl should be at once removed from the flock to comfortable quarters, and specially treated with medicine and food. A fowl is worth saving, but is often neglected and left to get well or die.

It is undoubtedly bad practice to cultivate or plow heavy soil when soaked with water in the spring, but this objection does not apply to the light rains that fall in midsummer and early fall, while the soil is still warm.

Fifteen Years!

JNO. L. CLARK, M. D., Waterloo, N. Y., in 1881, was prostrated with Bright's Disease, crick in the back, rheumatism and malaria. From the latter he had suffered for fifteen years, without help. In 1884 he says. "Warner's SAFE Cure cured me and I am sound and well." If you doubt ask your neighbor!

A Mournful Prophecy of Woes.

Prof. Grimmer in a pamphlet published in 1879 predicted seven years of disaster and famine, beginning with 1880 and ending with 1887, during which the world will be a hell of strife and carnage. He said:

"From 1880 to 1887 will be one universal carnival of death. Asia will be depopulated, Europe nearly so. America will lose fifteen millions of her people. Besides a plague we are to have storms and tidal waves, mountains are to toss their heads thro' the choicest valleys, navigators will be lost by thousands owing to the capicious deflexures of the magnetic needle, and islands will appear and disappear in the ocean. All beasts, birds and fishes will be diseased, famine and human strife will destroy most of the human beings left alive by plague, and finally two years of fire—1885 to 1887—will rage with fury in every part of the globe. 1887 the 'Star of Bethlehem' will re-appear in Cassiopia's Chair, the immediate result being universal war and protentious floods and shipwrecks. North America is to be again involved in civil war unless a "Napoleon" arises to quell it, but during these terrible days the Pacific States will be a vertable paradise of peace, compared to the hellish strife that will be waged throughout the world. The people that may manage to survive till 1887 will have reason to be thankful."

A Notable Arrest.

C. H. OBERBECK, Deputy Sheriff St. Louis, Mo., in 1882, took Warner's SAFE Cure for a very severe kidney and liver complaint; he had lost 75 pounds in weight under the doctor's care. Five bottles of Warner's SAFE Cure arrested and cured the dssease, and December, 1884, he wrote, "I now weigh 260 pounds and never felt better in my life. I recommend Warner's SAFE Cure."

The very remarkable statement is made in the Medical Times that Dr. Fleichl of Vienna has discoverd that the hydro-chlo-rate of cocaine administered hypodermically in doses at from one-twelfth to one fourth of a grain will cure morphinism, alcholism, and similar habits within ten days.

TWO DANGEROUS SEASONS.

Spring and fall are times when so many people get sick. The changes in the weather are severe on feeble persons, and even those naturally strong are apt as they say, "to be feeling miserable." Then they are just in condition to be struck down with some kind of fever. A bottle or two of Parker's Tonic will invigorate the [illegible]

"Why not?"

"Because my boss is so liberal that he gives me nearly eighteen hours to do my day's work in, while you poor business have to crowd your work into about four hours.—[New York Journal.

Adolf Iallos, carriage manufacture, 119 Carroll street, Buffalo, N. Y., states: "I was troubled with nausea, sick headache, and general debility. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me.

The western fever is once more raging in Vermont, and from present indications at least 1,000 citizens of the state will effect a settlement beyond the Mississippi this year. Among those who are going to Dakota are nearly 100 old soldiers.

ONE BOTTLE INSTEAD OF A DOZEN

"And it took only one bottle to do it,' said a gentleman, speaking of Parker's Hair Balsam. I had a run of fever, and when I got well of that, my hair began to fall out so fast as to alarm me. I really didn't know what to do, until one day a friend said, "Try Parker's Hair Balsam. That was some months ago. What surprised me was the fact that one bottle was enough. I expected to use up a dozen." Clean, highly perfumed, not oily, not a dye. Restores original color,

Itching Piles—Symptoms and Cure.

The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching increased by scratching; very distressing, particularly at night; seems as pinworms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected. If allowed to continue very serious results may follow. "SWAYNE'S OINTMENT" is a pleasant, sure cure. JUST AS GOOD.

Many unscrupulous dealers may tell you they have remedies for Coughs and Colds, equal in merit and in every respect just as good as the old reliable Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup, and unless you insist upon this remedy and will take no other, you are liable to be greatly deceaved. CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently proceeded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose that he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomash, etc. A moisture like prespiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a mommon attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching, and affecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address The Dr. Bosonko Medicine Co., Piqua. O. Told by M. M. Williams. 29tf

A Losing Joke.

"A prominent physician of Pittsburg said to a lady patient who was complaining of her continued ill health, and of his inability to cure her, jokingly said: "Try Hop Bitters!" The lady took it in earnest and used the Bitters from which she obtained permanent health. She now laughed at the doctor for his joke, but he is not so well pleased with it, as it cost him a good patient.

Fees of Doctors.

The fee of doctors at $3.00 a visit would tax a man for a year, and in need of a daily visit, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a gold watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case, which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

The Test of 8 Years!

DAN. A. GROSVENOR, Esq., United States Treasury Department, First Controllers Office, Washington, D. Your Boys Companions.

See that your boys have good associates. A mother is quick to observe; she can judge the kind of companions her boys have by their behavior in the house when the boys bring them home, and, if she knows they are not all she would wish, will advise and admonish they are not good. Better let them have a few good companions than many who are "hail fellows well met." A father has more opportunity for observing the outside life of the boys than the mother, and should spare a few minutes of his surplus time to inquire Into the outside life of his boys just entering into life. A well regulated household depends upon the conduct of the father as well as the mother. Command your children's respect from their infancy and you will always have it through life.—[Philadelphia Call.

"Oh, about four hundred dollars, a rought estimate."

"Well, that's a wicked waste of money. I never smoked a cigar in my life. Why, the money you've fooled away on tobacco the past thirty years would almost buy one of those fine mansions.

"Yes," replied Smith, "I suppose it would. By the way, Jones," he added "which of those fine mansions do you own?"—[N. Y. Times.

A Village Moved.

By the recent Spanish earthquakes, a village in Grenada has been moved bodily some sixty feet in a northward direction, a deep semi-circular crevasse appearing on its former site. The course of the little river near which the village stood has been blocked up, and a lake is being formed. Many of the sulphur springs with which the region abounds suddenly ceased flowing, but re-appeared a day or two after in a state of unusual heat indicative, no doubt, of the force at work below.

"O! Suffering Woman!"

C. F. B. HASKELL, (formerly of Vernon, Vt.,) now locating engineer on the B. C. R. and N. Railroad, Dakota, stated in 1883, that his wife was utterly prostrated with female difficulties and did not seem to be amenable to physicians' remedies. She could not sleep, trembled like a leaf, periodically lost her reason. They then began the use of Warner's SAFE Cure. Writing in July, 1884, from Dakota. Mr. Haskel says, "My wife has never seen the slightest inclination of a return of the difficulties Warner's SAFE Cure removed.' Try it, O, suffering woman!

"Well, I wish I had the mint and somebody else had the charms," she said, and the crisis came.

HUDSON RIVER R. R.

Conductor Melius Says Something of Interest to all Travelers.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 22, 1884.

DR. D. KENNEDY, RONDOUT, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR: I have used your medicine called DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, for Indigestion and Dizziness, to which I was subject at times, and know from experience that is worthy of all that can be said of it for disorders of this kind. Respectfully, W. S. MELIUS.

69 Harrison Street.

That DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is extensively used along the line of the Hudson River Railroad, is shown by the following from Tarrytown. The writer is none other than Mr. DeRevere, the Station Agent of the Hudson River Railroad Company at Tarrytown, a man well know in that community.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 22, 1884

Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR:—For a long time I was troubled with severe attacks of Dizziness and Blind sick headaches. I thought it was due to impure blood and a disordered state of the system. I was advised to try FAVORITE REMEDY. I did so, and have been completely cured. It's the best thing I ever heard of for any disorder of that nature, and I've recommended it to many with like success.

A. DEREVERE.

DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY is not confined in its sphere of usefulness to one state or locality, but is hailed as a boon by hundreds in every state, as the following letter from Minnville, N. J., will show.

MILLVILLE N. J.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY, RONDOUT, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR:—I had been a sufferer from Dyspepsia from the time I was sixteen years old. I had consulted various physicians, but could find no relief; therefore had almost given up in dispair of ever recovering my health, when DR. KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY was recommended, which I tried and have been cured. It's the best medicine I ever knew of, and worthy of the greatest confidence. MRS. S. C. DOUGHERTY.

MALARIA.

As an anti-malarial medicine

DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S

has won golden opinions. No traveler should consider his outfit complete unless it includes a bottle of this medicine. If you are exposed to frequent changes of climate, food and water, Favorite Remedy should always be within your reach. It expels malarial poisons, and is the best preventative of chills and malarial fever in the world. It is especially offered as a trustworthy specific for the cure of Kidney and Liver complaints, Constipation and all disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. To women who suffer from any of the ills peculiar to their sex Favorite Remedy is constantly proving itself an unfailing friend—a real blessing. Address the proprietor, Dr. D. Kennedy, Rondout, N. MORTGAGE SALE. Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the State of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative. notice is hereby given that said mortgage, which is dated the 12th day of Jan. 1875, and is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego, at Oswego, N. Y., on the 13th day of January, 1875, at 5 o'clock p. m., in Liber 103, of Mortgages, at page 507, was given by Elizabeth A. Jones mortgagor to Timothy Pratt, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage is as follows: John W. Pratt, who is the present owner and holder. The sum claimed to be due upon the said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is twelve hundred seventy-nine dollars which is the whole amount of said mortgage. The following is a description, of the mortgaged property, contained in the said mortgage: all that tract or parcel of land, situate in the village of Fulton, Oswego county and State of New York, known and distinguished on the printed map of said village, on file in the Oswego county clerk's office, as lot number seven (7) on Block number fifteen (15) the same being four (4) rods in width on Seneca street and eight rods in depth on Third street. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged property, or a part thereof, at public auction at the law office of H. E. Nichols, in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 16th day of May, 1885, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

MORTGAGE SALE. Whereas default has been made in the payment of the money secured to be paid by a mortgage executed by Betsey Dixon to James H. Langdon, dated the fifteenth day of November, 1873, recorded with the power of sale therein contained in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego, New York, on the 16th day of February, 1874, in Liber 101 of mortgages at page 58, given to secure the payment of $253, and interest; duly assigned by said James H. Langdon to Mary Fitzgibbons who is now the lawful holder and owner of said mortgage and whereas the sum of $396.50 is claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, being the whole amount unpaid thereon and an action has not been brought to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof and said power to sell has become operative. Therefore notice is hereby given that by reason of the facts aforesaid and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided the mortgaged premises described in said mortgage as follows, to wit.: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county and state aforesaid and known and distinguished as the north half of lots numbered one and two, on block number forty-nine (49) according to a map made by P. Schenck for the commissioners in partition for the heirs of the estate of Norman Hubbard deceased, dated Nov. 1844, will be sold at public auction at the law office of Giles S. Piper, in the village of Fulton, Oswego county, New York, on the 25th day of April, 1885, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day and said mortgage will be thereby foreclosed.

Dated Jan'y 28, 1885. MARY FITZGIBBONS, Assignee.

GILES S. PIPER,
Attorney, Fulton, N. Y.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Mortgagor Ephraim D. Mowry, mortgagee Frank Dilts, assignee Joseph W. Butler, mortgage dated August ninth, 1877, and recorded in Oswego county clerk's office August 31, 1877, in Book 114, of mortgages at page 127. The amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice, is $206.52. The mortgaged property is substantially described in said mortgage as all that tract or parcel of land, situate in the town of Richland, county of Oswego and State of New York, and being part of Lot No. No. 86, of township No. 21, of Scriba's patent as follows: beginning on the west line of said Lot 26 chains and 2 links from the north-west corner thereof, at a stake 29½ links S. 15 ° west of center of large leaning maple, and runs thence easterly along the south line of lands sold by John Tyler to Charles Springer, to a stake 48 links north 81 ° west of the north-west corner of the grist mill; thence northerly along land sold to said Springer to the center of the highway running easterly and westerly past school house in district No. 18, in said town of Richland; thence easterly along the center of said highway, as run in 1840 to lands formerly owned by the late William Gillispie; thence southerly and easterly along the said Gillispie's lands to the east line of said Lot No. 86; thence southerly along said line to the south-east corner of said lot, thence westerly along the south line of said lot 86 to the west side of the mill pond, and Grind Stone Creek, at high water mark, and thence northerly along said pond and creek at high water mark, to the east corner of land owned by Oliver Mowry; thence along the north line of said Oliver Mowry's land to land formerly occupied by P. M. Cox; thence northerly along said Cox's land to the east corner of the same; thence westerly to the center of the highway; thence northerly along said highway to Grind Stone Creek at low water mark; thence westerly along said creek at low water mark to Oliver Mowry's land; thence along said Oliver Mowry's land to the west line of said lot No. 86; thence northerly along said line of lot to the place of beginning, subject to the exceptions and reservations contained in a deed from John Tyler and wife and Henry Gillispie to Ephraim D. Mowry. Default having been made in the conditions of said mortgage, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that the premises, described in said mortgage, will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, at the office of the Lewis House, in the village of Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y., on the 2nd day of May, 1885, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and said mortgage will be thereby foreclosed.

Dated February 4th, 1885.

Why She Came.

Every week up to my room,
Thence dispelling all the gloom,
Trips a pretty little maiden,
And for me she's heavy laden.

Never failing, rain or shine,
Comes this little maid of mine,
And her merry, joyous laughter,
Fills the room from floor to rafter.

Would you really like to know
Why and wherefore comes she so
Often to my lonely quarter?
She's my washerwoman's daughter.

Breaking The Ice.

We were Skating on the river,
'Neath the trees,
She and I;
And my heart was all a quiver,
For at last I'd dared to give her
Hand a squeeze,
On the sly,

Side by side we flew together,
Swiftly gliding,
O'er the ice.
What cared I for wintry weather?
Light her hand as any feather,
So confiding,
And so nice!

Then I kissed and do you wonder?—
Nothing loth,
Her dimpled chin.
With a whack like Summer thunder,
Burst the brittle ice asunder,
And we both
Toumbled in!

A beautiful girl
In a six story hat
Looks well on the street—
Few people doubt that;
But while such a hat
On the street she may wear,
It is quite out of place
In an orchestra chair.

MY HUSBAND'S UNCLE.

When Fred and I married we were very poor. He was a clerk in the country bank of which he is now manager, and I had been governess in the family of the Hon. Edgar Preston.

After my marriage I continued giving lessons to my former pupils, and this helped us famously.

Mamma lived with us; but her income did not permit her to help us in money matters; though her good sense and judgment were of great service to us. I was of a nervous, excitable temperament, and mamma was so placid and comfortable, with some soothing answer for me whenever I felt inclined to meet trouble halfway, that the benefit she conferred on us by living with us was far greater than any money help, and Fred said so too.

Suddenly, in consequence of a combination of unforseen events, the Preston's left the country, and I could not hope for any more such liberal employers in the small place where we lived.

It really was a serious loss to us, but mother always helped me by her quiet words.

"Don't worry yourself, my dear; God has made His plans, you'll find."

However, we had to give up many little comforts, and Fred gave up his holiday, and took some extra duty for a sick fellow clerk.

I was very sorry for this; but it was a step likely to lead to promotion. so we consoled ourselves, and tried to make home all the brighter.

One day Fred received a letter with a colonial stamp. As he read I saw his eyes sparkle; he read it again and smiled: he read it again and laughed; then he put it in his pocket and went to get his hat.

"Well, Fred!" I said, "going, and never telling me a word about the letter that has amused you so!"

"No time now, dear! You shall hear all about it when I come home," and off he went.

"He might have given me the letter," I pouted.

"So he would, my dear, if he had not had some excellent reason for not doing so," said mother, quite sharply.

I felt snubbed but comforted, and quite determined not to say one word if he did not give it to me.

Not a word did he say at dinner; not until he was in his easy chair by the fire, sipping the cup of coffee I always made for him with my own hands, and smoking the one cigar of the day; then he began;

"Well, now, Jenny dear, about that letter. It was from my grandfather, as, most likely, you guessed. Our photos had just reached him when he wrote, and he is so in love with your mother's that it depends on her whether the energetic old gentleman becomes your father-in-law. What do you say, mother? Will you be my grandmama?"

"Why, he has had three wives already, has he not?" I asked.

"He has; but my last grandmother [illegible] just before our marriage, so the [illegible] is once more vacant. He is serious upon my word, Mrs. Laing. He actually asks me to lay the matter before you."

I saw now why Fred was so amused [illegible] letter, and why he would not give it to us to read—the old gentleman was a rough diamond, and, perhaps, had not put his request in such respectful style as Fred approved.

We had a good laugh at the flattering proposal.

"But," said my husband, "if you refuse this happiness, my grandfather makes another proposal which seems to me much to our advantage, if you both agree to accept it."

"Not to go out there, Fred!" I screamed. "I never, never will consent."

"Don't be rebellious," said Fred, blowing [illegible] of fragrant smoke. [illegible] Fred, I hope you never will [illegible] home for three years, and he offers to pay us for these three years the sum of £500 for the accommodation of his son and a servant."

I clasped my hands in ecstacy and turned to mamma.

"Will you have to make any changes in your mode of living?" asked she. "It is a liberal offer certainly, if your uncle will be content with your present home; but, if you have to take a larger house and another servant, and keep an expensive table, it will not be too much."

"No," Fred would answer for our uncle being perfectly content with our way of living; his father had described his habits, which were perfectly content with our way of living; his father had described his habits, which were perfectly simple. It only remained for us to say whether we would accept the responsibility—and he would telegraph next day. Of course we did not hesitate.

The message was sent. In a few weeks a return telegram told us our uncle and servant had started and would telegraph on reaching Liverpool where Fred was to meet them.

As the time approached, I was, after my fashion, seized with endless misgivings.

Would this man torment Joan, my excellent but rather surly handmaiden, with unreasonable requirements? Were the birds Fred's uncle was bringing me, as notified in the telegram, enormous creatures requiring houses to be built for them? I went so far as to plan with Joan the clearance of an out-house for their reception. Mother would not enter into these forebodings. Nothing ever had induced her to meet troubles, and she said it would be time enough to settle when the birds arrived. If they were immense, Fred could leave them at Liverpool.

But I got so uneasy, with dwelling on the idea, I felt so persuaded it was fidgety "Uncle Horace," whom I had so often heard of, that at last I teased poor Fred into telling me to fit up a little room as a smoking-room and snuggery.

Once having set to work, I made it so pretty! I put some standard books on the shelves, I bought a lovely tobacco jar; I worked some beautiful slippers. I even insisted on Fred's purchasing a dressing gown of softest down lining, for I argued "colonists are always such chilly mortals."

I was delighted to find that, at last, Fred quietly entered into my plans zealously, fitted on the slippers and dressing gown, selected the tobacco, and even consented at last—at my earnest request—to lay in a few dozen of very good wines.

"I assure you, Jenny, it is needless expense," he said, "I am certain my uncle is not a wine drinker. If he wants wine my grandfather will provide it."

"But, Fred dear," I said, "just at first it will look so inhospitable; it is not much out of his £500—paid all in advance, too. I should be so much easier if you would get some really good wine in. I should faint if he asked for some the first thing, and not a drop in the house. Perhaps he might swear; your grandfather owns he is a bit of a tyrant."

"Well, Jenny," said Fred, laughing at my earnestness, "to oblige you I will send some wine that uncle Horace himself cannot grumble at."

So Fred went to an old friend, Mr. Preston's wine merchant, of great repute, and purchased a few dozen of fine wine.

Mother and I prepared to bed rooms and made everything thoroughly comfortable, and at last all was complete.

The telegram arrived in due time, and my husband went to meet our relative.

Toward six o'clock, as I sat down rather tired after helping to prepare a little dinner that no Uncle Horace or any one else could find fault with, an access of despondency again siezed me; but I kept my thoughts to myself, for mother never let me utter them.

"If all the peace and pleasant life of the last two years is at an end," thought I "I shall wish the £500 at the bottom of the sea. To have a crusty old bachelor always at one's table—perhaps a dyspeptic old crosspatch! Oh, I wonder whether, after all, we have done a wise thing. Peace in one's house is better than millions of money."

Then I ran off to see that a nice fire was in the snuggery.

Yes, the oak logs were crackling and sending out delicate tinted little flames; the easy chair was the picture of comfort.

On the little table by it stood the jar of finest tobbacco that could be bought, with a stand of genuine cigars presented to Fred by his friend the wine merchant.

The snow and sleet were falling. It was bitterly cold outside, but the picture of warmth and comfort within.

I began to hope that the entry into our birght, little home would impress our uncle favorably, and when I had drank a glass of the famous bungundy that mamma made me take, seeing how restless I was, I felt quite composed for the first time in many weeks.

At length we heard the sound of a carriage, and in a few minutes I stood in the hall to receive and welcome my dreaded visitor.

"I see no birds, mother; Fred has left them at Liverpool," I remarked.

But Fred sprang out with a cage containing some tiny creatures, well protected by scientific coverings, telling me to put them at once into a warm room.

"Is it uncle Horace, Fred?" I found time to whisper agitatedly.

"No—no," said Fred, rushing back to the fly.

I could not see clearly out into the [illegible], but in another minute Fred [illegible] carrying a lovely child of [illegible] on me, and gave me one kiss, and then pushing me away with one little fat hand, he held out the other to a kind, motherly woman which followed him.

"Bless him" said she "he wants to go to his beddy by—he does."

So when mother and Joan had just peeped at him, Uncle Reginald was fed and put to bed.

Mr. Fred enjoyed his dinner thoroughly. The impostor had, of course, known the facts all the time; but finding he was likely to profit by keeping up the deception, he took care not to enlighten us.

How he did laugh that night as he took possession of the smoking room, the slippers, gown, tobacco, etc.

We all soon grew dotingly fond of our little uncle, who was the son of the third wife of Fred's grandfather, a lady much younger than he.

The hale old gentleman had taken this excellent method of helping us young married folks, and benefitting his delicate little son at the same time.

Mamma's gentle, motherly look had captivated him, and he felt it would be good for his baby-boy to be brought up by her.

Some months after his arrival our little Mab was born, and she found the most tender play-fellow and devoted adorer in her little great uncle.

He Was a "White Man."

One of the Hundson Bay Company's officers has with him his young wife and a child, a tiny girl three years—old a pretty, prattling, fearless, fascinating young woman. She s everybody's pet, from the rather dandy wheelsman, who tries to entice her up to his pilot-box, which towers above the vessel, down to the grizzled, grimy, deck hands, whose acquaintance she has somehow or other made on the lower deck.

On the floor of this lower deck, whither she had been taken by her nurse, she has seen three men lying bound, chained hand and foot. They are on their way to be tried at Fargo, and the sheriff, who has effected their capture, never leaves them, for they are known to be desperate.

The little child came to them and looked at them curiously; they looked silently at her. They had probably never seen anything so dainty or so sweet before. She saw nothing in them to frighten her. So she advanced and spoke to her in her broken words; she even touched the fetters on the hands of one of them, and smiled in his face, and asked him what they were. The man smiled too, without replying, and the child moved away. As she walked there was a sudden quick jerk of the whole ship, its further side ground jarringlo against some unyielding substance hidden in the water; it tilted over slightly, the child lost her balance, and with a scream, fell over the side into the water. The vessel for an instant was stationary. The three prisoners saw her disappear. The prisoner to whom she had spoken, and whose handcuffs she had for a moment touched, exclaimed: "God don't shoot, Bill!" Then quickly rolling himself over and over, dropped into the water beside the child. As his hands were bound behind him he caught the child's dress in his teeth, and treading the water with his fettered feet, kept the child above water until help came. As everybody's attention was diverted to the opposite side of the steamer, it was some time before the boat from the steamer reached them, but the child was saved. Needless to relate the thankfulness of the poor mother or the gratitude of the father.

"I guess you air a white man, Rik, after all," said the sheriff.

A purse was made up among the passengers for the man, whose name was Erikir, a Scanavian by birh. It was afterwards learned that the sheriff told the story to the judge, with Western freedom, and the admiration for a gallant act which covers a multitude of sins, so arranged that when it was found that Erikir had myseriously disappeared, nothing was done beyond a little official bluster, and he escaped.—[R. Our Exposition Letter.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Mar. 21., 1885.

Your corrrespondent has just made a tour of the main building of the Exposition, and will so far as possible, give the reader a word picture of what was seen. The roof covers 33 acres of space, and almost every foot of it is occupied with exhibits, excepting the aisles, which traverse the floor in every direction. The private exhibits occupy neat, and in many cases highly ornamented apartments of various dimensions, and contain every conceivable variety of goods, wares and merchandise, from a lady's thimble to a tun of beer. All the fabrics of mill and factory, of art and genius, are here represented, and when it is remembered that 6,000 applications for spaces were made, for this building alone, and that all are occupied or nearly all, some idea of the grandeur and variety of the scene may be found.

To many visitors, the machinery presents great fascination. It occupies the entire west side of the building, a space 300 feet wide, and including the annex, about 17,000 feet long, all of which is literally crowded with samples of the best brands in the world. As might be expected cotton and sugar cultivators, mills and refineries, claim a large share of space, while general agricultural implements, reapers, mowers, threshers, plows, etc., have myrads of representatives, and wood and metal workers are numerous. A showing what extremes meet, a watch company exhibits the smallest engine ever constructed, having a cylinder 1-32 of an inch in diameter, its builder carrying it about in a globe only three-forths of an inch high. He somes brings it down beside one of the great Corlis engines, where there is a balance wheel alone weighing 60,000 pounds, The horse-power represented by the steam engines on exhibition, is said to amount to considerably over six thousand, nearly all of which is in use running various exhibits.

There are cunning machines, weaving the finest and most beautiful silk handkerchiefs and ornamental fabrics; cotton thread machinery, which takes the raw material, putting it through nineteen different processes, finally making the little spools and winding the finished thread upon them; and just across the way is a monstrous shingle machine, whose full capacity is equal to three hundred thousand shingles per day, enough to paddle all young America, or hammer the truth into "Peck's Bad Boy." Among the many devices of special interest to your potato growing readers, is a potato planter, which cuts, drops and covers the seed at once, setin eight acres per day. But it is useless to attempt any further mention of of this interesting department.

The foreign section, in this building also, while replete with much that is very intresting, will doubtless disappoint many visitors, owing to the absence of such official exhibits from the great governments of Europe, as were shown at the Philadelphia Exposition there being none from Great Britain, France, Italy or Russia. In fact there are no official exhibits from and government of Europe, or South America. To a very great extent, however, their absence is lost sight of, or forgotten, in viewing the magnificent exhibit made under the auspices of the Mexican government, which fills everyone with astonishment and admiration. Meeting Col. Donan, the noted journalist of Dakota, his opinion of this exhibit was asked, and your correspondant can give no better idea of the impression it makes,than by quoting his reply: "The Mexican display," said he, "is to me the most remarkable feature of the whole Exposition—it is an absolute revolation, in everything, vegetables, fruits, minerals, timbers and munufactures; it is one of the most notable displayes of a young and comparatively unknown nation's resources, that this generation has ever witnessed." Speaking to the courteous commissioner of that Republic, I was surprised to learn that his government had appropriated four hundred thousand dollars to defrap the expense of this exhib. it which is said to cover ten thousand feet of space, and includes every variety of fabrics, fine arts, and products, of the most astonishing excellence. In addition they have erected a beautiful iron structure in which is shown a vast collection of the minerals and precious metals of that country. Well done Mexico, is the universal verbict. Jamaica, British Honduras, the Republic of Honduras, Guatamala, China and Japan also make most creditable exhibits under the direction and at the expense of their respective governments, all of which include many samples of their natural products, artistic, educational and social advancement. The most notable in this group is the educational exhibit of Japan, which shows that country to be in the front rank of educational progress. Far away Siam also makes a small exhibit of her crube manufactures and implements, which is somewhat pathetic surrounded, as it is, by so much magnificence. Taken altogether, the foreign section will occupy the visitor many hours, and affords many objects worthy of intelligent study.

The Art Gallery was finally opened to the public February 28, after a most exasperating delay, as well as serious disappointment to many visitors, who were compelled to return to their homes without inspecting it. The walls are hung with many beautiful and costly paintings, every prominent American, and many foreign artists of note being represented in the collection. [illegible]

FASHION NOTES.

Galloons, with beads and tinsel, trim the colored mantles.

Beaded grenadine, or lace, will be used for summer wraps.

Yellow plays an important part in millinery and toilet accessories this spring.

Dressy mantles for the spring are small in shape, and are more often colored than black.

The tendency toward plainer skirts is repeated alike in simple and in elegant costumes.

Wool Jerseys are now considered more stylish than the elaborate silk and beaded affairs.

Black is the leading color in hosiery, but cardinal and dark blue are very fashionable.

Wide satin ribbon bows or sash loops and ends are added on the tournure of some mantles.

Changeable repped silks of light quality are among the combinations used for dressy costumes.

The long Newmarket coats for spring wear, are made with loose fronts and closely fitted backs.

Soft Surah satin and taffeta scarfs for trimming bonnets come in broad stripes of soft shaede color.

There are only fifteen distinct shades of blue, but the wise woman sticks to "navy" through them all.

Spring mantles are made short in the back; the fronts may be very long or extend only half-way to the knees.

The newest Jerseys are much shorter than those worn in the winter and are shorter behind than in front.

The cloth jackets to be worn this spring have the back closely fitted, with loose fronts, longer than the back.

Bronzed buttons and buckles, with owl heads, soldier caps, helmets and heraldic devices upon them, are used on wool dresses.

For young ladies are new shoulder capes with the fronts extended like a mantle. They are made of Ottoman silk, trimmed with beaded embroidery and new shoulder capes with the front extended like a mantle. Some Queer Things!!

New Curiosities.—Wonderful and Mysterious.

Strange Discoveries about Beauty.

NEW YORK, March 4th, 1885.

A few things are yet a little known.

For instance the busiest part of New York contains the big Western Union Building supplied with water from several artesian wells in the cellar.

The same building has an elevator whose flight is so rapid that visitors frequently experience seasickness in its descent. It literally falls six or more stories and alights as gently as a feather.

Near by may be seen one hundred telegraph wires strung from pole to pole.

Across the street snow or rain falls almost every day in the year.

For ten cents can now be procured a harmless cure for Colic, which will relieve the baby at once and avoid crying night and day. One package lasts a year.

Teething in infants can be made painless at a cost of 10 cents per package, enough for a year's use; a harmless preparation.

You can cure sore throat with a simple and harmless remedy, costing but 10 cents for a package, lasting many years.

Bumps which a child gets in falling or otherwise should receive immediate attention. 10 cents will procure a year's supply of a harmless remedy for the same.

Small, pretty feet are especially desired by misses and mothers. On receipt of one dollar in advance we will send our $5. method and preparation ON TRIAL, on condition that you return it within one year and get your money back if it fails to secure you a dainty little foot.

Lily White Hands, Smooth, soft and Velvety may be had by any lady by the simple use in their gloves, of our new hand bleaching preparation at an expense of only one dollar.

Wrinkles may be prevented, thus preserving a smooth, pure, youthful face, till old age, by the use of our Rejuvenating Preservation. This elixir with apparatus can be had for $1.00.

A particular specialty offered contains your name in plain letters on gold plated breast pin, strong and pretty for 25 cents.

Any or all of these articles promptly forwarded on receipt of price, and if unsatisfactory your money promptly refunded on return of same.

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

In this issue we print the report of President Waugh which will be read with much interest by citizens and tax-payers. The President suggests to the citizens that the side walks be put in good condition and that all filth and rubbish be cleaned from the streets. The report gives a complete and accurate account of the receipts and expenditures for all village purposes in a systematic manner. After the tax-payers have carefully studied this report we are sure that the general sentiment will be that President Waugh and the Trustees with him have performed their duty in an economical manner and to the best of their ability and are at least deserving of the thanks of every true citizen.

THE Assembly of this State has passed a bill for the protection of woman and children employed in factories. It prohibits the employment of children under fourteen years of age in manufactories for a longer period than ten hours per day. It authorizes the Governor and Senate to appoint three factory inspectors on salary to see that the law is enforced.

IN the Senate, Thursday, a bill was introduced by M. Murphy, providing that no child under fourteen years, unless accompanied by parent or guardian, shall remain in any skating rink after nine o'clock. The penalty for violation of the law is imprisonment for from one month to one year, or a fine not less than $25 or not more than $250.

THE World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition, and the chief features of interest connected with the various apparatus, appliances and machinery to be seen there, will be found tersely and ably treated, in popular language and with many handsome illustrations, in the March 14th and 28th issues of Industrial America. These two editions are Special Exposition Numbers, the publisher having himself visited New Orleans, and personally superintend the preparation of the report. Copies may be ordered through any newsdealers at a cost of 10 cents every other week. The subscription is $2.00 a year, and the office No. 9 Murry street, New York.

ASSEMBLYMAN SWEET, of neighboring town, is creating for himself at Albany a good name. The bills he has introduced this session are likely to become laws and are of more than ordinary value. A bill regulating exemption on a par with real estate in the matter of taxation, and not exempted for debts, will meet with universal approbation among the farmers and manufacturers. There has always been great complaint of the numerous dodges and subterfuges resorted to escape taxation on personal property. Mr. Sweet's bill is designed to prevent and correct this to a great extent. Another bill requires that all full cream cheese shall bear a stamp to that effect, and all persons selling an inferior quality as full cream shall pay a fine of $50. These bills are intended to promote the public welfare.—[Fulton correspondent to the New York Tribune.

In making out this report I found outstanding order drawn and no funds to pay $855.91, also many other debts no orders drawn for, enough to make about $1,400 indebtedness, for which was raised $1,000 to pay, and in order to make report have to some extent consolidated the funds in order to clean up all indebtedness and leave a clean record for the incoming Board.

In this report is shown a statement of the Sharp. Dodson suit and costs, leaving to be collected this coming season $1 675 voted at special meeting. Also voted at same meeting for 500 feet hose for which there is outstanding a note for $422.79 without interest. Balance of amount for freight, $2.21. Total amount $425.00 which is not in report. I mention this that taxpayers may know just how it is.

I wish to state that fire Steamer No. 2 was badly damaged at our late fire, so much so that it had to have entire new boiler built at cost of $500.00 but will be better than it ever was. By construction of new boiler it will have 25 per cent. more power. Have expected this steamer here before this so we might show that it was paid for from funds on hand which is ample.

The LaDuke suit has been appealed.

There has been $49.00 poll tax reported which does not show in report, but it has been deducted from Street Commissioner's bills before audited.

There are many things I would suggest to the citizens of Fulton, one in particular I would like to see—that is to put their sidewalks in good condition. Your trustees I am satisfied do not like to be quarreling with their friends and neighbors but a great many sidewalks are in very poor condition, which will have to be forced unless owners put them in shape soon as weather permits. It invariably results in hard feelings and ofttimes in lawsuit. Clean up all ashes rubbish and filth from the streets which have been thrown out during the winter. Do this in spring as early as possible. This is your duty, for no citizen has any right to throw rubbish in the streets.

I thank the members of the Board for their many courtesies shown me during the past year.

WM. WAUGH,
President.

(New York Tribune.)

Discoveries of much importance on account of the relation they bear toward a more wholesome food supply and consequently upon the public health, have been recently made in the process of refining cream of tartar. Cream of tartar, as is well known, is a bitartrate of potassa, purified from the crude tartar, or argol, which collects in a crystaline deposit upon the bottom and sides of wine casks during the fermentation of the wine. This tartar, in its crude state, contains lime and other impurities, which no process of refining known prior to that here described was able to entirely remove. It has been possible, it is true, to neutralize the lime to some extent by the aid of chemicals, and this method was resorted to in order to procure cream of tartar in small quantities for pharmaceutical purposes; but it was open to serious objection in view of the fact that the chemicals employed for this purpose were not always washed out but remained in quantities that were uncertain and prejudicial to its quality. The supposed impossibility of removing the lime has, accordingly, caused cream of tartar to be classed and sold as pure when it did not contain more than five per cent of this impurity. The major part, however, of that used in commerce, or for culinary purposes, contains the tartrate of lime to an extent much greater than five per cent. not infrequently being found, upon analysis, debased to a degree equaling one-fourth or more of its entire weight.

In a report upon the subject of food adulteration made to the New York State Board of health by Professors Chandler and Love, it is stated that of 27 samples of cream of tartar bought from dealers as pure 16 were adulterated with various substances from 3 to 93 per cent. while of the remainder all contained tartrate of lime, some as high as 10.59 per cent.

The serious character of this adulteration is more readily appreciated when it is recollected how largely cream of tartar enters into the preparation of the food of every family. In connection with soda in baking powder it is the chief agent now employed for raising and making light and digestible all our biscuit, cake, and other pastry, and is besides in many communities, superseding the old-fashioned yeast for all leavening purposes, so that it is employed to some extent in almost every meal of which we eat. The amount of cream of tartar used in this country in a year in baking powder and otherwise in the preparation of food, is estimated at ten million pounds. If this were 90 per cent. pure—a high estimate—we would consume one million pounds or more of lime annually as a substitute for bread. So large a deterioration becomes appreciable in the deprivation of our food of a portion of its nutritive elements not only, but if, as is now supposed, this excess of lime taken into the system has a relation to the painful affections of the kidneys so prevalent in this country, its bearing upon the health of the entire community is too important to be overlooked.

The new process by which cream of tartar is produced 100 per cent pure—that is, with the lime totally eliminated, —by treating the crude material under pressure instead of using any chemicals whatever for the purpose, was the discovery originally of a German chemist but has been developed and perfected by the Royal Baking Powder Company of this city, through whose efforts a few years since in behalf of a high standard of purity in food, the public was rid of the poisonous alum baking powders at that time so prevalent.

The determination of this Company to place upon the market only absolutely pure goods, and the impossibility of doing this from the cream of tartar of commerce, made it apparent that some new method must be sought by which cream of tartar could be procured in large quantities, free from lime and chemically pure. The cream of tartar refiners of this country and Europe when approached upon the subject, declared such a result impossible, and declined to incur the expenditure necessary to make the trial. The Royal Baking Powder Company, accordingly, resolved to solve the problem for itself; and having secured the aid of the best chemists of Europe and America, proceeded with its investigations and discoveries until the result, after seven years of labor and the expenditure of over half a million dollars in the purchase of patents, perfecting of processes, and the erection of buildings and machinery, was reached in the complete attainment of the end sought. The works (now owned by The New York Tartar Co.) are located in Brooklyn, and exceed in size and capacity any other similar refinery in the world. They produce a chemically pure cream of tartar, which is now exclusively used for pharmacectical preparations, and in the manufacture of the celebrated Royal Baking Powder.

The energy and outlay that have effected this, will undoubtedly be fully rewarded by the public which will chiefly benefit by the successful issue of the investigations. People are coming daily to more fully appreciate the value of pure and wholesome food. By the exclusive use of this chemically pure cream of tartar, The Royal Baking Powder is produced entirely free from lime, and absolutely pure, qualities possessed by no other baking powder yet made. A baking powder entirely free from lime or other impurity must not only contain more strength or leavening power and produce better food and therefore be more economical for use, but what is more important, possess qualities of superior wholesomness.

Chemists and physicians have looked upon the experiments with much interest, and regard their success as a matter of much importance.

DON'T YOU DO IT.

Don't suffer any longer with the pains and aches of Rheumatism, which make life a burden to you. Relief, speedy and permanent can be procured at the nearest drug store, in the form of Kidney-Wort. Elbridge Malcolm of West Bath, Maine says: "I was completely prostorated with Rheumatism and Kidney troubles and was not expected to recover. The first dose of Kidney-Wort helped me. Six doses put me on my feet, it has now entirely cured me and I have had no trouble since."

WHAT ENTERPRISE WILL DO.

THE GREAT OPENING AT LE-FAIVRE'S MUSIC STORE.

Tousands in Attendance—A Brilliant Exhibition—A Luxurious Music Parlor—The Whole City Agape With Astonishment.

Le Faivre's opening during the past four days in his new store, No. 60 South Salina street, was the most notable event in the music business in this city known even to the oldest inhabitant. Throngs to the number of thousands have attended the opening, and the news of the great attractions exhibited has been spread all over the country. Gaylord's orchestra, with the silver-voiced tenor, Mr. Thomas Impett, as soloist, gave an elaborate program of popular music every afternoon and evening, to the delight of the interesting crowds. Last evening the wide, deep store was packed as closely as herrings in a box. It was almost impossible for a TIMES reporter to force a way through to the rear of the store where the musicians were filling enraptured ears with sweet strains, and Mr. Le Faivre stood towering above the crowd, with happy face wreathed in smiles, holding an informal reception and receiving congratulations from all sides at once.

In the front window of the store a superb upright Hallet & Davis piano attracted great admiration. It is beautifully encased and is equally beautiful in tone. Mr. Le Faivre keeps a stock of these pianos, both upright and square, constantly on hand. At the rate he is pushing them, together with their superior merits, he will soon have them in a majority of the parlors where a first-class instrument only will be allowed. Mr. Le Faivre also handles the Kranich & Bach pianos, the Clough & Warren cabinet organs, a superior make which comes from Cincinnatti, and a complete assortmens of smaller instruments. Next to the musical attractions the Davis sewing machine contributed to the interest of the visitors. This machine knows no superior in the market. Numerous beautiful examples of its fancy work in embroidery and tinsel hung upon the walls, adding brilliance to the effect of the animated scene. Eighteen machines were sold during the opening, although it was impossible to make any effort to effect any sales. They literally sold themselves.

But the greatest effort of enterprise and prosperity is shown in the "music parlor" which Mr. Le Faivre has fitted up with a lavish disregard for expense. The walls and ceiling are handsomely decorated with costly gilt paper and elaborate border, there are luxuriant drapings of lace curtains, brussels carpet, carved black walnut furniture upholstered with crimson plush, pictures and piano and organ. This elegant parlor is for the free use of musicians to teach in or for rehearsals of quartets, trios, and the like. It is a feature that all our musicians will appreciate, as it has long been needed. The parlor is located over the rear of the store, removed from the bustle of business, and is reached by a convenient flight of stairs.

Mr. O. J. Le Faivre, who is the cause of all this furore in the musical world, opened in business in a small way at No. 95 South Salina street, a year ago last November. With careful management and unabating energy, his business [illegible]

[illegible] BOTTLES OF WARNER'S "SAFE" CURE

(Or Warner's SAFE Kidney and Liver Cure (its former title).

SOLD TO FEBRUARY 1st, 1885!

No other Compound on earth can show a similar record, and no Physician a better one.

The highest Medical Authorities pronounce it the only known Specific for Kidney, Liver and Urinary diseases; that it has no equal as a BLOOD PURIFIER, and that it is the best safeguard against contagious diseases, both acute and chronic, keeping the Kidneys and Liver—the great organs of the body—in healthy condition, disease then being impossible.

For the many distressing ailments of delicate Ladies, it has no equal.

We can furnish over One Hundred Thousand voluntary Testimonials similar to the following.

Read them for the good of yourself, your family and your friends.

Note the following, showing how this vast number of bottles was distributed as evidenced by our sales-books.

Boston, - 936,842.

B. F. LARABEE, Esq., 49 Chester Square, Boston, Mass., in 1879, was given up by several prominent Boston Physicians as incurable from Bright's Disease. He took over 200 bottles of Warner's SAFE Cure, in 1880-82, and Oct. 6, 1884, wrote that the "Cure was as permanent as surprising."

Providence, - 128,947.

G. W. FULTON, Esq., Fulton, Texas, suffered for ten years from serious bladder disorders and lost from 25 to 30 pounds; in 1881 he used 14 bottles of Warner's SAFE Cure, and recovered his natural weight and said, "I consider myself well for a man of 75." December 20th, 1884, he wrote, "I have had no symptoms of kidney disorder since 1881, and if I did I should rely upon SAFE Cure."

Portland, Me., 330,829.

EX-GOV R. T. JACOB, Westport, Ky. In 1882, during a political canvass, health gave way and was prostrated with severe kidney trouble. Lost 40 pounds of flesh. Used Warner's SAFE Curo in 1882, and June 23, 1884, writes: "I have never enjoyed better health,—all owing to Warner's SAFE Cure."

Bal. of N. Eng., 331,315.

HON. N. A PLYMPTON (Hon. B. F. Butler's campaign manager), of Worcester Mass., in May, 1880, was prostrated by kidney colic, caused by the passage of gravel from the kidneys to the bladder. He then began using Warner's SAFE Cure and in a short time passed a large stone and a number of smaller ones. Dec. 10th 1884, Mr. Plympton wrote, "I have had no recurrence of my old trouble since Warner's SAFE Cure cured me."

New York State, 3,053,080.

MRS. J. B. DESMOULIN, 2411 Morgan street, St. Louis, Mo., in 1882, wrote, "I have been in delicate health for many years; but Warner's SAFE Cure made me the picture of health." June 23rd, 1884, she wrote, "My health has been good for the last two years."

Pennsylvania, 1,365,914

Chicago, - 2,181,520.

CHAS. E. STEPHENS, of Louisville, Ky., Nov. 18, 1882, wrote, "When my daughter was ten years of age, she was seriously attacked by extreme kidney disorder. She recovered temporarily, but a year ago she was again prostrated. She was swollen to twice her natural size, had frequent headaches, nausea and other disguised symptoms of the disorder. All her Louisville physicians agreed that she could not recover. Her case and treatment was telegraphed to a New York specialist who said recovery was impossible. Last August we began to treat her ourselves, and now, wholly through the influence of Warner's SAFE Cure, she is apparently as well as ever." November, 1884, he says, "My daughter is apparently in perfect health."

Detroit, - 635,210.

THE REV. ANDREW J. GRAHAM, (P. E.), Grand Island, Neb., in 1881, was pronounced fatally sick with Bright's Disease. His condition he says was desperate and he could get no relief from physicians. He then followed Warner's SAFE Cure treatment, and July 7th, 1884, he wrote, "All local trouble has disappeared. Have taken no medicine for nearly a year."

Milwaukee, - 344,171

S. F. HESS, Rochester, N. Y., the well known tobacco manufacturer, three years ago took twenty-five bottles of Warner's SAFE Cure for liver disorder, and August 30th, 1884, he reported, "I consider myself fully cured, and the credit is wholly due to Warner's SAFE Cure."

Minnesota, - 486,013.

G. W. HAMILTON, Milton, Santa Rosa Co., Florida, December, 15th, 1884, wrote that "four years ago my wife was suffering with liver complaint which reduced her to a skeleton. The doctors finally pronounced her case Bright's Disease of the kidneys, and incurable. She then took 13 bottles of Warner,s SAFE Cure, and has been in perfect health every since. She now weighs 180 pounds where formerly she was a skeleton. Warner's SAFE Cure will make a permanent cure always if taken by directions."

Cleveland, - 511,975

JOSEPH JACQUES, Esq., St. Albans, Vt., in January 1877 was taken desperately sick with Bright's Disease of the kidneys. He spat blood, was tremendously bloated and seemed to be beyond the power of the best physicians. He took 60 bottles of Warner's SAFE Cure, which restored him to health. January 1st, 1885, eight years afterwards, he wrote: "I never enjoyed better health in my life than I do now, and I owe it all to Warner's SAFE Cure. I consider myself cured of Bright's Disease."

Cincinnati, - 655,250

B. J. WORRELL, of Ellaville, Fla, in 1879 was prostrated with Bright's Disease of the kidneys, and under the best treatment, grew worse. "On the advice of Governor Drew's sister, I began Warner's SAFE Cure, sixty bottles of which restored me to full measure of health. I have now been cured about four years, and my case is regarded as miraculous." Governor Drew of Jacksonville, Florida, April 20th, 1884, says "Mr. Worrell's case and cure give me confidence in Warner's SAFE Cure, and I unhesitatingly indorse it."

Bal. Ohio, (State,) - 474,869.

MRS. S. A. KLARC, East Granby, Conn., in 1881 was utterly used up with constitutional and female complaints of the worst kind. Been sick ten years, and tried everything. In November, 1884, she wrote, "Warner's SAFE Cure cured me four years ago, and has kept me well."

Southern States - 2,725,513.

ROBERT GRAHAM, 77 Penn street Brooklyn, N. Y., suffered for six years from inflamation of the bladder and stricture. Six physicians, specialists, gave him up to die. In 1882, he began Warner's SAFE Cure and continued its use, he says effected a complete cure. Under date June 23, 1884, he says, "My health continues good; have used no medicine since April 23, 1882."

Canada, - - 1,175,868.

St. Louis, - 1,222,895

REV. JAMES ERWIN, Methodist minister, West Eaton, N. Y., was long and seriously ill with inflamation of the prostate gland, (a very obstinate disorder). In 1882 he began the use of Warner's SAFE Cure, and June 25, 1884, wrote, "The relief obtained two years ago proved permanent; physicians express great surprise."

Kansas City, - 538,395.

S. A. JOHNSTON, Lockington, Ohio, Sept. 20, 1881, stated that for thirty years he had suffered tortures with dyspepsia, but he was entirely cured by the use of Warner's SAFE Cure. Dec. 8th, 1884, he says: "I took 20 or 25 bottles of Warner's SAFE Cure, and it has never failed to stop any symptoms of my old complaint if they appeared; my health is good."

Bal. S. W. States, 635,092

N. B. SMILEY, Esq., of Bradford, Pa., in 1882, was very seriously sick of extreme kidney disorder and rheumatism, which gradually grew worse. Physicians being unable to assist him his last resort was Warner's SAFE Cure, and June 25th, 1884, he wrote, "My health is better than for two years past, and in some respects is better than it has been for five years. When I catch cold and have any slight kidney trouble, I resume the medicine again and the relief I believe is permanent."

San Francisco, 932,210

JAMES M. DAVIS, 230 South Pearl street, Albany, N. Y., superintendent of Jagger Iron Co., in 1881 suffered from very serious kidney trouble; he weighed but 160 pounds he used 18 bottles of Warner's SAFE Cure, and Dec. 8th, 1884, he wrote, "That was fully three years ago. I have had no trouble since, and I feel first class and weigh 188 pounds. I would not go back to that time of four years ago for all the dollars in the United States."

Messrs. Edward and Charles Milnes who left here a few days since had their baggage destroyed by the burning of the depot at Rahway, N. J. As their baggage was not checked it is a total loss.

Dr. Marsh has been confined to the house by illness for several days but is now able to be around.

Charter election next Tuesday.

School re-commenced last Monday after a short vacation.

Easter will be observed at the Congregational church by appropriate exercises in the evening by the Sunday school.

The applicants for the postoffice are beginning to buzz again. Johnny Sullivan seems to be the popular man, and will probably win the race.

On a Strike.

The mechanics and laborers employed on the N. Y. O. & W. road in Oswego, struck Monday noon. The reason assigned was that two month's wages are due them, which they have been unable to obtain. They also ask that a regular pay day be established. About two years ago the men struck for a regular pay day, and the fifteenth of the month was named by the company and accepted by the men. For two or three months they received their money regularly, but it gradually fell off, until at present there are two months' due all of the employees of the road. The men claimed that on Saturday last the employees on the Middletown division received money, but that they failed to receive any. If the company will establish a regular pay day they are willing to go back to work. The situation of affairs has been telegraphed to headquarters, and it is expected that matters will soon be adjusted. The train hands and engineers did not strike. There are about seventy-five men employed in the shops. Supt. Childs has directed the master mechanic to reopen immediately the shops at Norwich, which have been closed since November last, and put in a full force of men at work.

BELLADONNA POISONING.

The Experience of a Volney Farmer with the Drug.

Mr. Nichols a dairyman living east of the village had quite an experience in the use of belladonna. He was instructed by a veterinary surgeon to apply a tincture of belladonna to the udder of a cow which was swolen and inflamed. He purchased two ounces and poured a portion of it in his hand and bathed the bag of the cow. He felt a somewhat peculiar sensation in his head and eyes, but did not think more of it until the next morning when he went to feed the cows he found the one he had "doctored" with belladonna blind, with no color in the eye and she refused to eat. He says: "I thought I did not like the manner of curing. Her udder was soft but her head was harder." Suffice it to say that after two or three days she began to eat a little and the eye in a week had nearly regained its natural condition. He had himself an unpleasant experience in his own body but thinks he shall pull through. He is not in favor of new fashioned doses for himself or cattle. Others may profit by his trial of this poisonous plant and save suffering and life best by letting it alone.

The Old Catholic Parsonage Burned.

Yesterday at near one o'clock, the house opposite the Catholic Church, and formerly occupied by Father Smith was discovered by the inmates occupying the east half to be on fire, and originating in the upper rooms. The inmates were Mrs. Chapel with her three small children and their aged grandmother. Mrs. Chapel happened to be away from home, the family of Nicholas Miller, living in the west half assisting, all were removed safely. The firemen were promptly on hand and a stream of water taken from No. 2 school house tank kept the adjoining buildings from burning. But little of the household goods were saved. Mr. Chapel, who is in the employ of Dr. Lake, loses everything, with no insurance. We understand Mrs. Miller had a small insurance, also that the building, belonging to the Catholic Society was insured.

Star Polo Club.

A meeting was held at the Hotel Burns last Wednesday for the purpose of organizing a polo league. The number of clubs in the league was limited to ten. Delegates were present from many of the clubs. Although no delegate was present the Fulton club was admitted. Messrs. Penfield of Oswego, Speedleburg, of Utica, and Westcott, of Syracuse, were named as a schedule committee. They will make a correct announcement of the games to be played shortly.

J. H. Case has been appointed special referee for the Fulton club.

Handsome gold medals will be awarded the members of the team winning a majority of the games.

The Fulton's are daily expecting handsome new uniforms.

Giroux Case.

There is nothing new to say about the much heralded Giroux case, the only thing of interest is the well assertained fact that there was no murder or attempted murder, and that his son who mysteriously disappeared last fall, and no traces of his whereabouts had been found, is alive and in good quarters as the following telegram to the District Attorney must show:

Waterville, N. Y. March 31, 1885

S. B. Mead—"There is a boy with me by the name of Albert Giroux. Came with an Indian woman. Can not give her name."

F. L. TERRY.

Asking Aid.

The principal losers in yesterday's fire was Edward Chapel, who occupied the east half of the house. The family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Chapel, three small children, and Mrs. Stow, an aged lady and grandmother of the children. Mr. and Mrs. Chapel were away from home at the time of the fire and the grandmother could do little more than get the children out. The fire caught in the upper chambers, which were soon filled with smoke and flame, thus making it impossible to save anything, leaving them almost destitute. Any person wishing to give anything in the line of clothing, bedding, or bedsteads for their present relief and comfort will please send word or contributions to Mrs. Isaac Darrow or Dr. Jennie Lake.

The Presbytery of Syracuse will meet in the Park Central Presbyterian church Monday, April 13, at 7:30 p. m. The sermon will be preached by the retiring moderator, the Rev. S. Edwin Koons, of Hannibal. A permanent and temporary clerk will be elected. Tuesday, April 14, at 9 a. m. the Presbytery will meet, and after half an hour spent in devotional exercises, will attend to items of business.—[Syracuse Standard.

Mert Murphy and Edward Hardy were arrested by Officer Jones Monday morning on complaint entered by the Salvation army leaders for disturbing the meeting. They appeared before Police Justice VanWagenen yesterday morning and pleaded not guilty. Murphy was sentenced to $15 and 60 days in the O.P., and Hardy to $20 or 60 days. The fines were paid and the sentence suspended.

People living along the shore of Lake Ontario in Wayne and Oswego counties state that this has been the severest winter known there since 1854. A survey of the ice field on the lake at Sodus Point showed that it covers the greatest area of water ever known there. There is almost solid ice for two miles out from shore. Sodus Bay is almost completely covered with ice of an average thickness of two and a half feet. All entrance to the harbor are frozen fast and covered with huge drifts of snow. Here and there are great piles of solid ice and snow about the bay.

Well Pleased with the Game.

The game of polo at the ring last night between the Regulars and Reserves of Fulton proved a decided attraction and success and was witnessed by a large number of people. The gentlemen composing the clubs deported themselves in a manner creditable to Fulton and were often and heartily applauded. The Regulars won the match in about thirty minutes. Phœnix will be glad to welcome the gentlemen often. It is to the credit of Phœnix that one of her former sons, Mr. Irving Fralick, won a large portion of the applause for his superior playing. Mr. J. H. Case filled the position of referee to the satisfaction of all.—[Phœnix Register.

Not Responsible.

District-attorney Mead tells the Syracuse Standard correspondent that there is no foundation to the report that he is holding back the trial of Warren E. Carpenter, who is now in jail in Oswego on a charge of murder. The prosecution was ready at the February term, but counsel for the accused were not. He has asked for a special term of the oyer and terminer. He does not object to the sympathy which is being extended to the accused for having to lie so long awaiting trial, but he wishes it to be distinctly understood that in no way is he responsible for the delay.

Political.

The Young Men's Democratic Club had a large and enthusiastic meeting in their rooms in the Johnson block, Monday evening, and will hold another meeting Thursday evening for the purpose of making arrangements for the coming charter election. A Card.

Since I have opened a shop in Fulton I have found out that some barbers do haircutting for nothing for customers that give them their shaving. These barbers are very indignant if anyone cuts prices. If this is not cutting prices what is. Now we don't do work for nothing for anyone. Our work is worth more than that, but we intend to reduce the price of our work so as to cope successfully with other barbers. Come and see us and you won't go away dissatisfied.

Closing Exercises.

On Friday evening last a very interesting programme was rendered by the graduating class of the academic department of the Fulton Union school and academy, at the school chapel. The inclement weather did not hinder the many friends of the class from attending and long before eight o'clock the room was well filled. The chapel presents a fine appearance since the recent artistic job of frescoing and the addition of two handsome chandeliers. The class went through with the following brief programme in an adroit manner:

Instrumental duet	Misses Elder and Van Buren
Composition	Miss Cora Furgeson
Declamation	Vernor Shattuck
Quartet	"Evening Bells"
Composition	Miss Laura Rice
Song	Miss Van Buren
Declamation	William Wright
Sketch, "The Irish Lion"	Class
Class prophecy	Miss Bertha Elder
Quartet	"Good Night"

At the close of the programme Prof. Boothby made a few remarks in which he said that every seat in the senior department had already been taken, and that extra seats had been provided for the accomodation of thirty non-resident pupils. Truly our village school is in a flourishing condition.

The following are the names of those who graduate in June: Putman H. Allen, Miss Maud Boomer, Frank G. Coats, Bernie M. Chubb, Miss Cora B. Furgeson, Miss Bertha Elder, Miss Laura M. Lang, Fred G. Lasher, Alfred E. LaPorte, William Livingston, Williard G. Reynolds, Miss Laura M. Rice, Wm. R. Wright, Miss Mattie P. Van Buren, Vernor Shattuck, Miss Gertie G. Farrell.

THERE is a wide-spread and serious prevalence of disorders of the kidneys; and of various diseases caused by the imperfect operation of the kidneys and liver. According to Roberts, Thompson, and other recognized authorities, kidney disorders are very common, but the obscurity of their positive symptoms is so marked that many people, ill and out of sorts generally, are really victims of kidney complaint, and they and their physicians do not realize it. Rheumatic pains, irregular appetite, frequent headache, chills and fever, "blues," hot and dry skin, sour stomach, dyspepsia, irregular action of the bowels, nervous irritability, muscular soreness, cramps, languor, impairment of memory, loss of verility, are among the preliminary evidences of coming kidney and liver derangements. As the disease develops then follow lame back, swelling ankles, pale face, scalding sensations, the water sometimes being very light and abundant, at others scarce, dark-colored and frothy, and abounding in sediment, and, under the microscope, in albumen and tube casts. If the deranged kidneys are not promptly attended to there is danger of the terrible Bright's Disease—hitherto considered incurable, which is a consumption or destruction of the kidneys—the near approach of which alarming disorder should awaken the liveliest concern, for it soon hurries one into the grave unless promptly checked.

Disordered kidneys have the unfortunate effect also of weakening the vigor of the liver, as indicated if one has, besides the above symptoms, yellow spotted skin, fat covered eye-balls, frontal headache after eating, burning and itching skin, cold extremities, hot head, bad circulation of blood, sick headache, nausea, light colored evacuations, constipation, piles, variable appetite and feelings, dizziness, blurred eyesight, liver-cough, ague, chills, fevers, wakefulness at night, drowsiness by day, etc.

These are some of the commoner symptoms as laid down by leading medical authorities, and with them in view one ought not to have much trouble in ascertaining if he is suffering from disorders of these great organs.

These observations have been called forth by a double-column article which appears in another place in another place in this paper. Skeptical of some of the statements made therein, and at other times by the same persons, we have been led to make a little study of the matter ourselves, with the above result. These diseases prevail amongst young and old everywhere, resulting in terrible and untimely deaths; they take off more people than epidemics; physicians report death as occurring from such diseases as apoplexy, paralysis, convulsions, heart disease, pneumonia, fevers, etc., when, in reality these disorders are often secondary to Bright's disease and would seldom occur where the kidneys in healthy working condition. Hence, from personal knowledge, or from trustworthy experience of other competent judges, we believe there is no preparation equal to the remedy that is so prominently mentioned elsewhere in this issue, for preventing and curing the dangerous disorders of which we have written. It has had an extraordinary sale, is everywhere commended, the record of its work seems indisputable, its manufacturers are reputed to be men of the highest standing. We hold, therefore, that not use it, if needed, would be a crime against one's supremest interests, especially at this time when, threatened by a fearful epidemic, it is of the highest importance, according to Dr. Koch, the celebrated German cholera specialist, that we keep the kidneys, liver and digestive organs in healthy action, if the scourge would be escaped.

[illegible] work is [illegible]. It is in some portions [illegible] now at hand. But [illegible] the coming of spring [illegible] for it. [illegible] round, even [illegible] farmers [illegible] have [illegible] can put [illegible] grumbled [illegible] of [illegible] weather, etc., but with [illegible] the grumbler [illegible] He has [illegible] His affairs are in utter confusion; his tools are scattered over the farm, lying just where last used, and will need cleaning and repairing before they can be handled. This will cause delay and afford a good pretext to growl. "Just my luck," says this farmer. If he would calmly think over the whole matter, he would see that the luck was just such as he himself brought about. No one but himself is to blame for the predicament in which he finds himself.

Hustle now, get tools in order, purchase new ones is necessary. Have on hand such seeds as are to go into the ground this spring; test them and note well their germinating power, and the vigor of the young shoots. Repair fences and open ditches and water courses that have become obstructed with rubbish; make chicken coops, etc. See that everything is in prime order in time, and be ready to board the train when it comes along. Better be waiting at the depot, than get there too late and be left. Remember that time and tide wait no man.—[American Farmer.

The White Breed of Swine.

The improved Suffolk is is a neatly formed animal with compact, long cylindrical body, short legs, short small head, fine hair, very fat cheeks, and is a rapid maturer. This breed has of late become very popular. The Chester White is large, strong and hardy, and its chief characteristic is adaptability to farmers who are not well skilled in the feeding and management of pigs. The Lincolnshire is a very large, long-legged, weak-loined, coarse animal. The Middle York is the most useful and popular of white breeds, uniting the good qualities of the large and small York, but it is of modern origin and is not firmly established. The improved Suffolk and Chester White are also modern breeds. The largest experimenters of the best breeds of pigs declare that they cannot decide which is the best breed, everything depending on the system of management; and the weak points of any breed are made up by other strong points. If you are not a skilled manager of pigs and are not acquainted with their history and breeding you had better choose the Chester White; otherwise you may succeed better with the others herein named, or with the Berkshires. There are inferior kinds of Chester Whites.—[American Farmer.

The Chicken Coop

Make your coops two feet square, two feet high in front, and eighteen inches behind, says the Indiana Farmer. Be' sure to put a floor in them, for "chicks' will never do well in the spring on the damp ground. Nail lath up and down on the front side of the coop, so that the youngsters can go in and out in fine weather, but keep them in in wet weather. How? Well, just hang a broad board on the front side of the coop at the bottom, and shut this up of nights and rainy weather, or you may hang a wire screen in front. To get the hen out, hang a small door behind the coop. There are other plans for coops to which I will call your attention in another letter, but in the meantime during the rainy weather keep yourself busy making coops and whitewashing the houses.

The largest apple tree supposed to be standing in the United States may be seen in the door yard of Delos Hotchkiss, Cheshire, Conn. Its shape is symmetrical, the trunk being round and without a scar or blemish upon it. There are eight large branches, five of which bear one year and the other three the next year. Mr. Hotchkiss has gathered in one year from the five branches 85 bushels of fruit, but his predecessor harvested a crop of 110 bushels from the same five branches. The circumference one foot from the ground and above all enlargement of the roots is 13 feet 8 inches. The girth of the largest single limb is 6 feet 8 inches. The top limbs reach a height of 60 feet, and the spread of the limbs is 100 feet. The age of the tree can be traced by family tradition to 140 years at least.—[New England Farmer.

Setting New Orchards.

In making plans for a new orchards one should be very sure that he gives the trees sufficient room. Apple trees should never be set nearer together than two rods, and forty feet is much better. Larger, thriftier and longer lived trees will be secured if they are set forty feet apart. If properly cultivated, trees will need this much room in fifteen years. In the meantime small fruits may be grown between the rows, but it must not be forgotten that good culture and a liberal supply of manure should be given. Some plant peach trees alternately with the apples, intending to cut them out when the apple trees need the room; but we have usually observed that the peach trees were not removed when they should [illegible]

[illegible] privations [illegible] The [illegible] of boarding-house life they consider about as severe as a boy is able to endure and still go forward with his daily duties. As a class they feel that working boys have a hard experience.

Could they be set back fifty years, or less, and see how poor boys fared in those days they would rejoice that they lived in this land and age.

I was reading lately of a poor Western lad whose mother was left a widow, like President Garfield's mother, in a pioneer cabin, and the best thing she could do for her eight-year-old boy was to "bind him out" to a farmer who lived twenty-one miles away. That meant to him thirteen years of hard labor for his board and such poor clothing as his master, in his own poverty saw fit to give him, with a few month's schooling in the winter. The work was not what the child dreaded so much as the heart-breaking separation from his home and his mother. The poor cabin looked like a palace to him. To live there still—no matter what the privations—was the highest joy the world could afford.

Still he plodded faithfully on, scantily fed and worse clothed, with a strict if not unkind employer, and of course inured to hard work from the outset. Once, on condition of extra effort for two weeks, he was permitted to go home and see his mother. The anticipation robbed him of sleep even, and when the happy morning came he was up long before day. The ground was covered with deep snow and he must walk the whole distance. There were tracks of wolves all through the forest, but he would have faced a pack rather than give up his journey. His garments were thin, but his happy heart kept him warm. Only two days were given him, and the most of these were spent in going and coming. Surly boys were not greatly pampered in those days.

At another time his mother walked the whole distance and back again to visit him. Her councils were not forgotten, and the happiest hours he spent were those which were passed by the blazing evening fire reading his one book, the New Testament. If you are ever shut up in one book, I hope it may be that, if only for the intellectual benefit you may gain, but that it is less than the least of the blessings which come to the faithful Bible scholar.

He graduated from the farm one March day when he was twenty-one years old, and it was a real independence day to him. Now he could choose his own employer, could handle his own money, could buy his own clothing, instead of wearing the cast-off garments of others. Do you think he grumbled at the hardships of his position? No; the world looked so full of grand possibilities that he was elated with the prospect opened before him. With so stout a heart and such sound principals, and with habits of industry so thoroughly ingrained it is no wonder that he won a competency and made his mark in the community where he lived.

More happiness in his growing years would have been of inestimable value, but his well-trained working powers were solid capital he was laying up every day. When inclined to grumble at trifles give a thought to this lonely working boy chopping all day in the forest or shivering through his winter's work, and be thankful for the many comforts in your happier life.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Some roots may be fed to swine with profit.

It's up hill work to fatten animals in a cold pen.

Over-crowding and filth are the destruction of sheep and pigs.

For general purposes a horse weighing 1,200 pounds is about right.

The first element of success in the care of live stock is fondness for the stock.

Poultry keeping goes better with dairying and stock raising than with grain growing.

See that the milch cows have pleanty of clean, fresh water to drink. In cold days they are liable to do with too little.

Never allow anyone to tickle your horse in the stable. The animal only feels the torment, and does not understand the joke. Vicious habits are easily brought on.

Farm animals have some rights that we are bound to respect; serving us faithfully merely for their board and lodging, their dues, at the least, are warm stables, good beds, and for the horses, warm blankets and rain hoods.

As trees are generally scraped, more harm than good results from the operation. Great should always be taken not to disturb or injure the lower and living part of the bark. A common mason's trowel or a short handled hoe makes a good scraper.

There is a little interest awakened just now in the subject of odd names. If-Christ-had-not-died-for-thee-thou-hadst-been-damned Dobbins was the name of a man in England in the days of the Roundheads. Dorchester County, Md., presents two names almost as odd. The owners of the names still live near Cambridge, on the Choptank. They are "Julia Jane Augusta Dominica Rustis Ro Bo Bustis Jack" and John Henry Land Runner Run-out-and-Surveyor Bandana Beaver Dam Rendezvous God Bless Busticus.

ONE BOTTLE INSTEAD OF A DOZEN

"And it took only one bottle to do it," said a gentleman, speaking of Parker's Hair Balsam. I had a run of fever, and when I got well of that, my hair began to fall out so fast as to alarm me. I really didn't know what to do, until one day a friend said, "Try Parker's Hair Balsam. That was some months ago. What surprised me was the fact that one bottle was enough. I expected to use up a dozen." Clean, highly perfumed, not oily, not a dye. Restores original color,

JUST AS GOOD.

Many unscrupulous dealers may tell you they have remedies for Coughs and Colds, equal in merit and in every respect just as good as the old reliable Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup, and unless you insist upon this remedy and will take no other, you are liable to be greatly deceived. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Sold by M. M. Williams. tf

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently proceeded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose that he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomash, etc. A moisture like prespiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a mommon attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching, and affecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address The Dr. Bosonko Medicine Co., Piqua, O. Told by M. M. Williams. 29tf

TWO DANGEROUS SEASONS.

Spring and fall are times when so many people get sick. The changes in the weather are severe on feeble persons, and even those naturally strong are apt as they say, "to be feeling miserable." Then they are just in condition to be struck down with some kind of fever. A bottle or two of Parker's Tonic will invigorate the digestion, put the liver, kidneys and blood in perfect order, and prevent more serious attacks. Why suffer, and perhaps die, when so simple a medicine will save you? Good for both sexes and all ages. 44w4

[illegible] Hurried to their Graves.

By relying on testimonials written in vivid glowing language of some miraculous cures [illegible] has hurried thousands to their graves: the patient having almost insane faith that the same miracle will be performed on them, and these testimonials [illegible] while the so called medicine is all the time hastening them to their graves. Although we have of testimonials of the most wonderful cures, voluntarily sent us, we do not publish them, as they do not make the cures. It is our medicine, Hop Bitters, that make the cures. It has never failed and never can. We will give reference to any one for any disease similar to their own if desired, or will refer to any neighbor, as there is not a neighborhood in the known world but can show its cures by Hop Bitters.

A Losing Joke.

"A prominent physician of Pittsburg said to a lady patient who was complaining of her continued ill health, and of his inability to cure her, jokingly said: 'Try Hop Bitters!' The lady took it in earnest and used the Bitters from which she obtained permanent health. She now laughed at the doctor for his joke, but he is not so well pleased with it, as it cost him a good patient.

Fees of Doctors.

The fee of doctors at $3.00 a visit would tax a man for a year, and in need of a daily visit, over $1,000 a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness.

Given up by the Doctors.

"Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy?"

"I assure you it is true that he is entirely cured, and with nothing but Hop Bitters, and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die, from Kidney and Liver trouble!"

CONSTIPATION!

There is no medium through which disease so often attacks the system as by Constipation, and there is no other ill flesh is heir to more apt to be neglected, from the fact material inconvenience may not be immediately felt from irregular action of the bowels. When there is not regular action the retention of decayed and effete matter, with its poisonous gases, soon poisons the whole system by being absorbed into it, causing piles, fistula, headache, impure blood and many other serious affections. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will immediately relieve, and one bottle positively cure or relieve any case of Constipation.

How Watch Cases are Made.

This process of manufacture was invented by James Boss, who started in business in 1851, and the methods and tools used in making these watch cases are covered by patents. This is the only watch case made under this process. For many years the introduction of these goods was slow, owing to popular prejudice against "plated" goods, but gradually the public learned that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case was not a cheap gold-washed or electro-plated article, but was made of genuine gold plates of standard quality and thickness. Conscientious adherence to the determination to make the best watch case ever put on the market, and the adoption of every improvement suggested, has made the James Boss' Gold Watch Case the STANDARD. TRADE MARK In this watch case the parts most subject to wear—the bow, crown, hinges, thumb-catches, etc., are made of SOLID GOLD.

The unhappy girl was dolefully warbling the plaintive notes of "Good-by My Love, Good-by," while half a dozen were trying to get an answer to their calls, when she suddenly made up her mind to attend to business and ceased her musical reverie to fly at the key board like a setting hen at an intruder upon her privacy during business hours.

"Hello!" she exclaimed, setting a plug to connect with 323.

"Hello! Give me 191 please.

"All right. Here is 191."

"Hello! Is this Mr. Brindleman's dairy?"

"Yes, this is Brindleman himself."

"Well, Brindleman, what ailed the milk you left at my house this morning."

"Who is talking?" asked the dairyman.

"Moses Milltoe, the Methodist minister."

"Well, Mr. Milltoe, I suppose the milk was all right; but wait a moment please, and I will ask the man who delivered in your part of the city this morning."

There was a long silence during which the dairyman was supposed to be investigating his deliveryman, followed by a click on the keyboard, as the girl switched on a hired man who was informing his employer of the condition of the live stock on his out-of-town farm.

"Hello!" called the man.

"Hello!" the minister replied.

"Why, everything is all right. One of the cows has the pleuro pneumonia a little, but the farrier says she will come out all right. How Easily Things Go Wrong.

"Alas! how easily things go wrong;"
A sigh too much or kiss too long,
And a father's patience is quite worn out;
There's a hurried step and a wrathful shout,
And a dream fo a youthful pair is o'er.
A youth escapes through the open door,
With terror imprinted upon his face,
And goes down the street a flying pace
With hat in hand and a dog in chase.
The dog to the flying youth draws nigh;
There's a savage growl and a piercing cry.
"Alas! how easily things go wrong;"
Why did the lover stay so long?

A panting youth at his mother's door
Is vowing he'll go out to court no more;
A dog is returning with visage grim,
Dragging an ulster's tail with him.
"Alas! how easily things go wrong."
When a lover foolishly tarries too long;
"And yet how easily things go right"
When he leaves at a decent time of night.
He's wise who this in his memory logs;
Fathers are fathers, and dogs are dogs.

A MYSTERIOUS VISITOR.

It was only a little, forlorn-looking grave that had been newly made a few days ago, yet the grass had sprung up from the clayey soil, somewhat hiding its scant proportions. A small headstone marked the spot, upon which was engraved: "Hilda Graem, aged 18." That was all, yet it caused the greatest commotion in the little village of Chelvey; for not until the little grave had been opened and its fair occupant laid in her last resting place had the quiet churchyard been disturbed by a ghostly midnight visitor.

A few months before the occurrence the little thatched cottage that was hidden among the trees a few steps from the turnpike road, was suddenly tenanted by a woman and a younger female, who was supposed to be her daughter. There might have been others; if there were, the village gossips did not discover it.

When Sunday came and the new-comers found their way to the village church, Chelvey at last satisfied its curiosity. The elder of the two had been beautiful in her youth, but now the brown hair was streaked with silver and the delicate face was sharpened and pinched with sorrow, perhaps hunger. The daughter, for such was the other, was fair; 'twas no earthly beauty, for she was not of this sad world. The golden waves of hair, framed a pure, pale countenance, illumined by eyes that, in their frequent uplifting to the heavens, had caught the same hue. She knelt during the entire service, and once when a severe fit of coughing seized her, would have fallen had not the mother's arm supported the frail form.

This was all the inquisitive little village ever saw or heard of the cottage's tenants. Sunday after Sunday came and went, and with them the mother and daughter. The only thing noticed by those interested in the strangers was that the girl's cough grew worse and the sweet face thinner and thinner, while the big blue eyes were larger and brighter, as if in anticipation of the heavenly wonders they were soon to see.

But one Sunday the couple did not appear, nor the next; but on the following one, after the crowd had departed from the holy edifice, a small procession came slowly from the tiny cottage, and borne upon the brawny shoulders of the sexton and the gravedigger was a coffin. The only mourner was the mother, but as they neared the church the sympathizing villagers followed with hushed voices and uncovered heads in the presence of death.

So the beautiful girl was laid to rest, as all supposed; the simple tablet of stone was erected and for two nights she was forgotten.

But on the third, as Owen Dugan, the sexton's son, passed through the ground after fastening the church doors, he saw a white-robed figure glide from the blackness of the trees and move swiftly to the new grave, then throwing its arms upward. But the frightened lad, who at sight of the apparation had remained rooted to the spot, now rushed from its dread presence, as if bereft of his senses, and with frightened face and in gasping breaths told his father what he had seen.

The graveyard was haunted, and by the spirit of a girl they had thought an angel. That was enough; the rumor spread, was multiplied and exaggerated until no one would venture near the desecrated place at night, and so the disquieted ghost continued to roam.

* * * * *

"Well, my good fellow, I don't suppose you have communication with the outside world in the way of newspapers, or have you?"

"No, stranger; yer in the wrong there. In on the bar there is the Weekly Gazette from Flummerton."

"Thank you; I won't make an acquaintance with Flummerton's news just now. Anything local?"

The conversation was between the landlord of the Boar's Head, the only hotel Chelvey gloried in, and a young man, who sat in a big bar-room chair tilted back to the farthest extremity, with his feet on the wooden railing that fenced in the balcony. His hat was pushed back on his head, and between his lips was the inevitable cigar.

"Well, there be something wonderful 'bout here; but being's yer a stranger may be you wouldn't be interested."

"Oh, yes. Your mysterious manner excites my curiosity."

"Well," replied the landlord, assuming the attitude of a professional story teller, "we have a spook that haunts our graveyard of a night, wringing its hands and carrying on fearful. It's the ghost of a girl whom every one thought a saint but she must have been wicked, since she can't lay easy in her grave," he [illegible] voice.

[illegible] I mean the sky [illegible] "Chelvey ghost" [illegible] excursion?" asked the young man.

"Bout nine, sir. But you ain't going to brave it, air yer?"

"I'm not sure of my valor, but I certainly am going to see what it's like," he laughingly said as he jumped off the balcony.

It was then 8:30 as Guy Stanton strode down the little village street and across the dew-laden fields glistening in the moonlight, until he came to the gloomy churchyard fence. He vaulted lightly over it and crept among the dark shadows of the trees till he came to the open ground where the grove of white tombstones stood.

"It must come by here," he said, as he took a hasty survey of the scene.

Steps heard on the gravel-walk caused him to seek the shelter of the trees. A shadow fell across the path, followed by a figure clad in white; a glance revealed it to be a girl.

"Certainly a ghost, else footsteps would be heard. It grows interesting. I'll follow the ghost whither it may lead," Stanton said, as if to some one near him.

The figure glided to the grave of the dead girl and went through the same performance that had frightened young Dugan, that of throwing her arms upwards and falling upon the grave.

Stanton drew near, now almost assured that she was no visitor from the spirit world, and touched her garment. It was real. He then looked at the beautiful face that was upturned to the evening sky. It was a very counterpart of the saintly Hilda, but far more ethereal. Her eyes were set in anguish one moment and the next assumed a holy calm. She knelt upon the wet sward for nearly an hour—it seemed ages to Stanton; at last she arose, cast one frightened glance about her, and as noiselessly as she had come she left the place.

Stanton followed her. Over the fields, down the road to the little damp cottage. The door was wide open. "What mystery can this be?" he muttered, looking apprehensively up the dark road. When he again looked at the door it was closed and the girl had gone. "This is strange," he soliloquized as he walked back slowly to the tavern. "This is not a ghost, it is plainly seen. The frightened villagers should be told the truth; but no, I would never see her again, and she is so beautiful! I must paint the picture of her in the graveyard. What can it mean?" he paused. "Ah! I have it. My beautiful spirit is a somnambulist."

By this time he had come up to the Boar's Head, and to his landlord's anxious inquiry, "Hav ye seen it?" he [illegible] to bed.

The next evening Stanton wended his way to the church, and again followed the spirit home. He went through the same walk for a whole week, until mine host of the Boar's Head mentioned it to his chums, over the bar.

"He be a queer one," "he was bright and chatty when he first come; said he was a painter; but now he never says a word, but walks about like a stick, and never out of the grave yard. Shouldn't wonder if the ghost had worked a spell on him."

And so the ghost had. Young Stanton was madly in love with the "Chelvey ghost."

On the last night of the week he reached his sad trysting place rather late. The ghost was already there. This time he came close to the sleeping girl and nervously touched her hands. They dropped before her.

"Ah! she awakes!" he cried. "Beautiful being be ye spirit, mortal or demon I love you! Aye, love you better than life itself!" clasping her in a tight embrace, his passion making a madman of him. "Sweetest, ah, heavens! I have killed her!"

The girl, with a shudder, had awoke, and finding herself in the mournful place and at such a time, had fallen back into Stanton's arms.

Without a moment's thought he gathered her in his embrace, and finding his burden light ran down the gloomy road, never stopping until he reached the tiny sitting-room of the little cottage and had laid his lovely charge upon a lounge.

"What shall I do?" he cried, alternately wringing his hands and wiping his damp forehead. "Is she dead, or was she? Have I killed her or have I carried a corpse?"

The last thought maddened him, and kneeling by the senseless girl he placed his ear to her heart.

It beat.

He called loudly. Presently the mother appeared, and seeing the strange young man and her daughter, so white and still, staggered against the wall.

"Do not fear, madam, she is not dead," Stanton said in a faint voice.

"What does it mean?" she gasped.

As well as he could he told her what he knew.

"And she, my beautiful Lillie, is a somnambulist?" Mrs. Graem said, after she had restored the girl.

"Yes. Oh, madam, I love your daughter, odd as it may seem, never having addressed her and meeting under such strange circumstances. I adore her."

"I do not know you, sir, but I pity you. I am sure you must have suffered enough already; but I must tell you something very sad. Have you strength to bear it?"

"Yes, yes," Stanton said faintly throwing himself down on a chair.

"You know I had two daughters—twins—Hilda, who is in the churchyard, and my Lillie. Two days after Hilda died Lillie lay in a stupor, and I suppose the reaction of it caused her to haunt the graveyard at night. God knows what will come from this exposure," sighing deeply. "She always was very delicate, and partly on this account and that of her affliction, the [illegible]

[illegible] rising. Then, falling back, he buried his head in his arms.

Mrs. Graem waited. "I'm sorry for you," she said.

"You need not be; it is my fate. May I kiss her once? Then I will go away forever!"

"Yes; but——"

"Don't! I cannot bear it," he sobbed.

Kneeling beside Lillie, he took her cold hand in his hot palm and pressed his lips once to her white forehead, then left the house never to return. He was not heard of again.

Two weeks later Lillie was laid beside Hilda in the church yard.

"As for the ghost, it was never seen again," they would say at the Boar's Head; "the young chap who left so quick, it's my mind, must have laid it!"

FASHION NOTES.

Coat sleeves still prevail.

The Brenton vest is to be revived.

Visiting cards haye a round clear type, with letters small and neat.

Pointed waists both in front and back promise to rival regular basques.

White, ecru and black satin parasols have a spray of embroidery on each gore.

The peake brimed poke bonnet re-appears among spring milinery importations and productions.

New parasols for the street, are in the flat Japanese shape, mounted to show the gilded frame inside.

Chenille collars with Windsor ties in all colors, with and without tinsel effects, are very effective.

The changeable surahs combined with velvet figured surrah are the fashionable silks for spring and summer.

Wide tinsel braids put on in bands and long looped cabbage bows are the favorite trimmings for spring hats.

Short mantles defining the form with jacket-like effect, and with high shoulders, will be the leading spring wraps.

Dark dresses are brightened by wearing bows of bright red, blue and yellow velvet ribbons on the front of the corsage.

Tuffted wools, serges, canvas cloths, and mohairs are the general terms for the various wool stuffs for spring dresses.

The prettiest cuffs are made by cutting the sleeve an inch and a half too long, turning back the extra length and facing it with velvet.

The stiff, high military collar is used on almost all dresses, [illegible] self be cotton, wool or silk.

Long pleated draperies, quite straight, or in curves that drop from the belt down and return, are in great favor for kinds of materials.

Watercress is to be used as folage on spring bonnets. A Paris model has a bunch of pale blue for-get-me-nots nestling among the cress leaves.

All the trimmings of hats and bonnets are placed directly over the front over the forehead, on the fore part of the crown, and towering high above the same.

Dimity seesuckers of American manufacture are to be had in all colors and in checks and stripes. For mourning the dimity effect in black gives the desirable crape effect.

A new way of putting lace in sleeves is to have two frills, not quite three inches deep; the upper frill nearly covers the lower, and most of the fullness is massed at the outside seam of the sleeve.

April Magazines.

HARPERS MONTHLY

for April is unrivaled in its rich and varied contents. Its illustrated features are superb, while its literary matter makes the reader loth to lay it down. The frontispiece is a life-like picture of that sad, strong face of Abraham Lincoln from a photograph in possession of W. P. Garrison who contributes a poem "The vision of Abraham Lincoln" from a dream the night before his assassination as retold to his Cabinet. "Some Richmond Portraits" from the illustrious Virginian families engraved by Miller, Goetze, Butler and others are quite good enough to frame. "The Prince of Wales at Sandringham" is a descriptive article, most exquisitely illustrated. A full page likeness of the Prince also of the Princess is given. "Along the Rio Grande" and "Fly Fishing" are interesting illustrated articles, the latter has attracted the attention and commendation of some of our expert fishermen. The Easy Chair pleasantly discusses German and Italian operas in New York, General Gordon, Carbyle memories, The Washington Monument, &c., &c.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY

for April continues with much interest its three prominent serials, now well developed in plot and sketch, with constantly renewed attractions in character studies. Miss Jewett grows more charming in every picture of "Marsh Island," from the salt way marshes to the late summer' day in the fragrant peach orchard on the hill; the old farm-house and its family decendants and present occupants encouraged by Farmer Owen and his shrewd wife Marthia. Artist Dale still lingers, enjoying the daily companionship of pretty Dorie Owen. Dan. Lester becomes jealous and disheartened and suddenly determines to go West and look after his possessions, but honest Temperance Kipp relates a bit of news which promises to change the whole current of affairs. A delightful paper on George Frederick Handel 1685 to 1885 is also contained in this number.

☞ Perfection. The [illegible]

Our Exposition Letter.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

NEW ORLEANS, La., Mar. 27., 1885.

"Is Mexico, Pat Donan, or the United States running this show?" asked a countryman of your correspondent as he was sauntering through the Exposition. The query was quite natural, since in the main-building, Mexico, or her representatives, is omnipresent. Mexican exhibits, Mexican soldiers and Mexican bands and music, everywhere greet the eye or ear of the visitor, confounding and surprising all with variety and excellence, one critic going so far as to say that but for Mexico the Exposition would have been a tame affair or have collapsed, possibly. And but for Pat Donan, Dakota and Idaho, with several back townships to hear from, would have lacked oratory enough to have opened their exhibits, the two territories named making their formal openings on two succeeding days recently, with bountiful supplies of oranges, bananas, cheese, crackers, and the best oratory on record, stimulated by lemonade! Shades of Bourbon and St John! how Pat and the other boys plastered those innocent Dakotans and Idahoans with taffy, enough to sweeten their lives for generations to come. But the grandeur of their exhibits warrant all the good things said of and for them. Wallace, of Bismarck, fully believes that Dakota is the original garden of Eden, and he himself, is Adam good fellow, any how.

Since my previous letter the colored people have held their opening day, formally turning over the exhibit to the Exposition and to the inspection of the world. Your correspondent took occasion to pass through the section devoted to their exhibits, one entire gallery of the government building, and after a careful inspection, left it, as he trusts a wiser and less prejudiced man. In all that pertains to woman's fine needle work, in school exhibits, in paint and drawing, in architecture, farm crops, and in mechanical devices of their own invention, or construction the evidences of progress and capibility are unanswerable arguments. At their formal opening were present about six hundred pupils and students of the various colored schools of this city; many learned and distinguished colored orators and teachers, with a great concourse of eminent men and women from all parts of the country. A number of addresses were made by white, and colored speakers, the speeches of the latter eliciting unsimted praise from all not alone because of their superior literary excellence but also on account of their noble sentiments and of their [illegible] good sense. It is somewhat [illegible] been invited to [illegible] creditably have they responded.

The other galleries of the government building are occupied with woman's work, in grand profusion, and with various educational exhibits, from different states and private institutions, from the United States government and from the French Republic, the latter being very extensive, and complete, the whole covering almost every department of popular and professional education. The work of pupils in the Cherokee Indian Orphan asylum is exhibited here also and especially Kindergarten pupils' work, displaying great excellence, considering that they are but mere children of six to eight years old, and have only been under training for five months.

Prof. Ward, of Rochester, makes here, in a large section of one of the government building galleries, a prodigious display of fossils, ores, minerals etc. He also has a large exhibit of casts of celebrated models taken from the most celebrated museums of Europe and America, including a well mounted cast of the Siberian Mammoth, whose remains were found in 1799 frozen in the ice banks at the mouth of the Lena river. The skeleton is 16 feet high and 26 feet long, and is now in the museum at St. Petersburgh, Russia. He also exhibits the real skeleton of a finback whale, which measures 55 feet in length. There is enough in this exhibit alone to occupy the student in study for months.

Standing at any point in these galleries, the eye sweeps over one vast empire in miniature, having its institutions and boundless resources and development all portrayed in tens of thousands of samples and forms, while a multitude of flags and banners of all nations, droop or wave in friendly proximity, impressing the lesson humanity has been so slow to learn or heed, that God has made of one blood all the nations and peoples of the earth, and that in peace, and not in war, the grandest victories are won.

The Interior-department makes a vast exhibit from the patent office, showing models of thousands of inventions, from the most trifling up to the great modern locomotive; the treasury shows vast collections of engravings, fac-similes of currency and bonds, with large plates of public buildings, and from the Agricultural Bureau are samples of every vegetable, grass, grain, sugar, seed, and insect, especially of those injurious to vegetation; the State department exhibits maps showing the locations and extent of our diplomatic service, and the whole is the most extensive and the most instructive ever made by any government. The various states, circling round the central head, make unlimited displays of cotton, sugar, timbers, ores, grains, grasses, and collections of such variety and number that forty large volumes would scarcely suffice in which to fully describe them, and all that we can hope to do as we proceed, is to give general bird's eye views, leaving the reader to imagine much that cannot be set down, or described in brief letters. For this week adieu. B.

THE NEW MINISTER TO GERMANY

GEORGE HUNT PENDLETON,

OF OHIO.

As everybody expected that he would, George H. Pendleton, of Ohio, has received an important ministerial appointment from the new administration. His rank as the representative of his country abroad, is of the highest, namely that of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, and the financial recognition it involves is $17,500 a year, the highest amount paid by the United States Government for the services of its ministers. Many of Mr. Pendleton's friends thought that he would be sent to either Great Britain or France, which are appointments considered preferable to the one he has received. On the other hand, it is claimed that his going to Germany is a high compliment to his ability, as American interests in relation to that power, would be promoted by the revision of the Bancroft treaty and the settlement of other matters requiring superior strength and judgment in the United States minister resident at Berlin.

Mr. Pendleton is of a distinguished family. His paternal grandfather is mentioned in history as Hamilton's second in the duel with Aaron Burr, which robbed the young republic of one of its ablest men. The more agreeable distinction was his father's of long Congressional service in the House of Representatives, from the Cincinnati district. He was a Whig in his political preference.

The subject of this sketch was born in the Congressional district represented by his father, in the year 1825. He received a superior education, which in return he joined a party of [illegible] a journey on foot through Germany.

He was married in 1846 to Alice Key, daughter of Francis S. Key, the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner." The lady of his choice was also a niece of Roger B. Taney, Chief-justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. Pendleton's careeer as a stateman began, when he was about thirty years old, with his election to the Ohio State Senate, of which he was a member in 1854 and 1855, giving him an experience of statesmenship in connection with the practicle of his profession as a lawyer. This he has pursued with assiduity when his public services have permitted, from his admission to the bar until now.

He was a member of the House of Representatives for eight years, ending with the Thirty-eighth Congress. His term in the Senate ended March, 1885. It was the full term of six years.

When the war for the Union began, Mr. Pendleton was a member of the House of Representatives. Then, as now, he was attached to the Democratic party, and was an advocate of compromise so long as there seemed any possibility of it. When all attempts in that direction failed, however, he favored the continuance of coercive measures for the maintenance of the Union. In 1864 he was nominated for the Vice-Presidency on the ticket with General McClellan. He was a delegate to the Philadelphia National Convention in 1866. Three years later he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Governorship of Ohio. In 1869, the same year, he was elected President of the Kentucky Railroad Company.

Perhaps Mr. Pendleton's greatest accomplishment as a statesman was the prominent part he took in the advocacy of Civil Service Reform. He was Chairman of the Senate Committee having the matter in hand. As such he introduced, in the year 1880, the bill that became law in 1882, and which is perhaps the leading subject of domestic politics in these office-seeking times, to-day.

In person Mr. Pendleton is somewhat taller than the average man. His figure is stout; his head large and his neck short. He is always well-dressed, and is the pink of correct deportment and gentlemanly courtesy. This has always characterized him, and won for him, twenty years ago, the title "Gentleman George," by which he is still known. He is distinguished among our public men for generous and elegant hospitality, both at home in Cincinnati and while in Washington. His address, both in public and private, is remarkable for elegance and preciseness of expression. Most of his public addresses are first written at full length, memorized and rehearsed, and his appearances are always welcome to persons of good taste. The wife of his youth is still living. His only son is practicing law in New York City; his other children, two in number, are daughters.

Some Queer Things!!

New Curiosities.—Wonderful and Mysterious.

Strange Discoveries about Beauty.

NEW YORK, March 4th, 1885.

A few things are yet a little known.

For instance the busiest part of New York contains the big Western Union Building supplied with water from several artesian wells in the cellar.

The same building has an elevator whose flight is so rapid that visitors frequently experience seasickness in its descent. It literally falls six or more stories and alights as gently as a feather.

Near by may be seen one hundred telegraph wires strung from pole to pole.

Across the street snow or rain falls almost every day in the year.

For ten cents can now be procured a harmless cure for Colic, which will relieve the baby at once and avoid crying night and day. One package lasts a year.

Teething in infants can be made painless at a cost of 10 cents per package, enough for a year's use; a harmless preparation.

You can cure sore throat with a simple and harmless remedy, costing but 10 cents for a pack age, lasting many years.

[illegible] falling or otherwise should receive immediate attention. 10 cents will procure a year's supply of a harmless remedy for the same.

Small, pretty feet are especially desired by misses and mothers. On receipt of one dollar in advance we will send our $5. method and preparation ON TRIAL, on condition that you return it within one year and get your money back if it fails to secure you a dainty little foot.

Lily White Hands, Smooth, soft and Velvety may be had by any lady by the simple use in their gloves, of our new hand bleaching preparation at an expense of only one dollar.

Wrinkles may be prevented, thus preserving a smooth, pure, youthful face, till old age, by the use of our Rejuvenating Preservation. This elixir with apparatus can be had for $1.00.

A particular specialty offered contains your name in plain letters on gold plated breast pin, strong and pretty for 25 cents.

Any or all of these articles promptly forwarded on receipt of price, and if unsatisfactory your money promptly refunded on return of same. STITES & CO. 192 Broadway, New York City.

WORTHY Of Confidence.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla is a medicine that, during nearly 40 years, in all parts of the world, has proved its efficacy as the best blood alterative known to medical science.

SARSAPARILLA (extracted from the root of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla) is its base, and its powers are enhanced by the extracts of Yellow Dock and Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other potent ingredients.

IS your blood vitiated by derangements of the digestive and assimilatory functions? is it tainted by Scrofula? or does it contain the poison of Mercury or Contagious Disease?

THE leading physicians of the United States, who know the composition of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, say that nothing else so good for the purification of the blood is within the range of pharmacy.

ONLY by the use of this remedy is it possible for a person who has corrupted blood to attain sound health and prevent transmission of the destructive taint to posterity.

THOROUGHLY effective renovation of the system must include not only the removal of corruption from the blood, but its enrichment and the strengthening of the vital organs.

RELIABLE witnesses, all over the world, testify that this work is better accomplished by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA than by any other remedy.

BLOOD that is corrupted through disease is made pure, and blood weakened through diminution of the red corpuscles is made strong, by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

PURIFYING the blood and building up the system require time in serious cases, but benefit will be derived from the use of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA more speedily than from anything else.

MEDICINE for which like effects are falsely claimed, is abundant in the market, under many names, but the only preparation that has stood the test of time, and proved worthy of the world's confidence, is

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

How Easily Things Go Wrong.

"Alas ! how easily things go wrong ;"
A sigh too much or kiss too long,
And a father's patience is quite worn out ;
There's a hurried step and a wrathful shout,
And a dream fo a youthful pair is o'er.
A youth escapes through the open door,
With terror imprinted upon his face,
And goes down the street a flying pace
With hat in hand and a dog in chase.
The dog to the flying youth draws nigh ;
There's a savage growl and a piercing cry,
"Alas ! how easily things go wrong ;"
Why did the lover stay so long ?

A panting youth at his mother's door
Is vowing he'll go out to court no more ;
A dog is returning with visage grim,
Dragging an ulster's tail with him.
"Alas ! how easily things go wrong."
When a lover foolishly tarries too long ;
"And yet how easily things go right"
When he leaves at a decent time of night.
He's wise who this in his memory logs ;
Fathers are fathers, and dogs are dogs.

A MYSTERIOUS VISITOR.

It was only a little, forlorn-looking grave that had been newly made a few days ago, yet the grass had sprung up from the clayey soil, somewhat hiding its scant proportions. A small headstone marked the spot, upon which was engraved: "Hilda Graem, aged 18." That was all, yet it caused the greatest commotion in the little village of Chelvey; for not until the little grave had been opened and its fair occupant laid in her last resting place had the quiet churchyard been disturbed by a ghostly midnight visitor.

A few months before the occurrence the little thatched cottage that was hidden among the trees a few steps from the turnpike road, was suddenly tenanted by a woman and a younger female, who was supposed to be her daughter. There might have been others; if there were, the village gossips did not discover it.

When Sunday came and the newcomers found their way to the village church, Chelvey at last satisfied its curiosity. The elder of the two had been beautiful in her youth, but now the brown hair was streaked with silver and the delicate face was sharpened and pinched with sorrow, perhaps hunger. The daughter, for such was the other, was fair; 'twas no earthly beauty, for she was not of this sad world. The golden waves of hair, framed a pure, pale countenance, illumined by eyes that, in their frequent uplifting to the heavens, had caught the same hue. She knelt during the entire service, and once when a severe fit of coughing seized her, would have fallen had not the mother's arm supported the frail form.

This was all the inquisitive little village ever saw or heard of the cottage's tenants. Sunday after Sunday came and went, and with them the mother and daughter. The only thing noticed by those interested in the strangers was that the girl's cough grew worse and the sweet face thinner and thinner, while the big blue eyes were larger and brighter, as if in anticipation of the heavenly wonders they were soon to see.

But one Sunday the couple did not appear, nor the next; but on the following one, after the crowd had departed from the holy edifice, a small procession came slowly from the tiny cottage, and borne upon the brawny shoulders of the sexton and the gravedigger was a coffin. The only mourner was the mother, but as they neared the church the sympathizing villagers followed with hushed voices and uncovered heads in the presence of death.

So the beautiful girl was laid to rest, as all supposed; the simple tablet of stone was erected and for two nights she was forgotten.

But on the third, as Owen Dugan, the sexton's son, passed through the ground after fastening the church doors, he saw a white-robed figure glide from the blackness of the trees and move swiftly to the new grave, then throwing its arms upward. But the frightened lad, who at sight of the apparation had remained rooted to the spot, now rushed from its dread presence, as if bereft of his senses, and with frightened face and in gasping breaths told his father what he had seen.

The graveyard was haunted, and by the spirit of a girl they had thought an angel. That was enough; the rumor spread, was multiplied and exaggerated until no one would venture near the desecrated place at night, and so the disquieted ghost continued to roam.

* * * * *

"Well, my good fellow, I don't suppose you have communication with the outside world in the way of newspapers, or have you?"

"No, stranger; yer in the wrong there. In on the bar there is the Weekly Gazette from Flummerton."

"Thank you; I won't make an acquaintance with Flummerton's news just now. Anything local?"

The conversation was between the landlord of the Boar's Head, the only hotel Chelvey gloried in, and a young man, who sat in a big bar-room chair tilted back to the farthest extremity, with his feet on the wooden railing that fenced in the balcony. His hat was pushed back on his head, and between his lips was the inevitable cigar.

"Well, there be something wonderful 'bout here; but being's yer a stranger may be you wouldn't be interested."

"Oh, yes. Your mysterious manner excites my curiosity."

"Well," replied the landlord, assuming the attitude of a professional story teller, "we have a spook that haunts our [illegible] of a night, wringing its hands and carrying on fearful. It's the ghost [illegible] whom every one thought a saint [illegible] have been wicked, since [illegible] in her grave," he [illegible] voice.

[illegible] I mean has any [illegible] this ghost?" [illegible] thing and [illegible] excursion?" asked the young man.

"Bout nine, sir. But you ain't going to brave it, air yer?"

"I'm not sure of my valor, but I certainly am going to see what it's like," he laughingly said as he jumped off the balcony.

It was then 8:30 as Guy Stanton strode down the little village street and across the dew-laden fields glistening in the moonlight, until he came to the gloomy churchyard fence. He vaulted lightly over it and crept among the dark shadows of the trees till he came to the open ground where the grove of white tombstones stood.

"It must come by here," he said, as he took a hasty survey of the scene.

Steps heard on the gravel-walk caused him to seek the shelter of the trees. A shadow fell across the path, followed by a figure clad in white; a glance revealed it to be a girl.

"Certainly a ghost, else footsteps would be heard. It grows interesting. I'll follow the ghost whither it may lead," Stanton said, as if to some one near him.

The figure glided to the grave of the dead girl and went through the same performance that had frightened young Dugan, that of throwing her arms upwards and falling upon the grave.

Stanton drew near, now almost assured that she was no visitor from the spirit world, and touched her garment. It was real. He then looked at the beautiful face that was upturned to the evening sky. It was a very counterpart of the saintly Hilda, but far more etherial. Her eyes were set in anguish one moment and the next assumed a holy calm. She knelt upon the wet sward for nearly an hour—it seemed ages to Stanton; at last she arose, cast one frightened glance about her, and as noiselessly as she had come she left the place.

Stanton followed her. Over the fields, down the road to the little damp cottage. The door was wide open. "What mystery can this be?" he muttered, looking apprehensively up the dark road. When he again looked at the door it was closed and the girl had gone. "This is strange," he soliloquized as he walked back slowly to the tavern. "This is not a ghost, it is plainly seen. The frightened villagers should be told the truth; but no, I would never see her again, and she is so beautiful! I must paint the picture of her in the graveyard. What can it mean?" he paused. "Ah! I have it. My beautiful spirit is a somnambulist."

By this time he had come up to the Boar's Head, and to his landlord's anxious inquiry, "Hev ye seen it?" he paid no attention, but went directly to bed.

The next evening Stanton wended his way to the church, and again followed the spirit home. He went through the same walk for a whole week, until mine host of the Boar's Head mentioned it to his chums, over the bar.

"He be a queer one," "he was bright and chatty when he first come; said he was a painter; but now he never says a word, but walks about like a stick, and never out of the grave yard. Shouldn't wonder if the ghost had worked a spell on him."

And so the ghost had. Young Stanton was madly in love with the "Chelvey ghost."

On the last night of the week he reached his sad trysting place rather late. The ghost was already there. This time he came close to the sleeping girl and nervously touched her hands. They dropped before her.

"Ah! she awakes!" he cried. "Beautiful being be ye spirit, mortal or demon I love you! Aye, love you better than life itself!" clasping her in a tight embrace, his passion making a madman of him. "Sweetest, ah, heavens! I have killed her!"

The girl, with a shudder, had awoke, and finding herself in the mournful place and at such a time, had fallen back into Stanton's arms.

Without a moment's thought he gathered her in his embrace, and finding his burden light ran down the gloomy road, never stopping until he reached the tiny sitting-room of the little cottage and had laid his lovely charge upon a lounge.

"What shall I do?" he cried, alternately wringing his hands and wiping his damp forehead. "Is she dead, or was she? Have I killed her or have I carried a corpse?"

The last thought maddened him, and kneeling by the senseless girl he placed his ear to her heart.

It beat.

He called loudly. Presently the mother appeared, and seeing the strange young man and her daughter, so white and still, staggered against the wall.

"Do not fear, madam, she is not dead," Stanton said in a faint voice.

"What does it mean?" she gasped.

As well as he could he told her what he knew.

"And she, my beautiful Lillie, is a somnambulist?" Mrs. Graem said, after she had restored the girl.

"Yes. Oh, madam, I love your daughter, odd as it may seem, never having addressed her and meeting under such strange circumstances. I adore her."

"I do not know you, sir, but I pity you. I am sure you must have suffered enough already; but I must tell you something very sad. Have you strength to bear it?"

"Yes, yes," Stanton said faintly throwing himself down on a chair.

"You know I had two daughters—twins—Hilda, who is in the churchyard, and my Lillie. Two days after Hilda died Lillie lay in a stupor, and I suppose the reaction of it caused her to haunt the graveyard at night. God knows what will come from this expense," sighing deeply. "She always was very delicate, and, partly on this account, and that of her affliction, the [illegible] my [illegible] rising. Then, falling back, he buried his head in his arms.

Mrs. Graem waited. "I'm sorry for you," she said.

"You need not be; it is my fate. May I kiss her once? Then I will go away forever!"

"Yes; but——"

"Don't! I cannot bear it," he sobbed. Kneeling beside Lillie, he took her cold hand in his hot palm and pressed his lips once to her white forehead, then left the house never to return. He was not heard of again.

Two weeks later Lillie was laid beside Hilda in the church yard.

"As for the ghost, it was never seen again," they would say at the Boar's Head; "the young chap who left so quick, it's my mind, must have laid it!"

FASHION NOTES.

Coat sleeves still prevail.

The Brenton vest is to be revived.

Visiting cards have a round clear type, with letters small and neat.

Pointed waists both in front and back promise to rival regular basques.

White, ecru and black satin parasols have a spray of embroidery on each gore.

The peake brimed poke bonnet re-appears among spring milinery importations and productions.

New parasols for the street, are in the flat Japanese shape, mounted to show the gilded frame inside.

Chenille collars with Windsor ties in all colors, with and without tinsel effects, are very effective.

The changeable surahs combined with velvet figured surrah are the fashionable silks for spring and summer.

Wide tinsel braids put on in bands and long looped cabbage bows are the favorite trimmings for spring hats.

Short mantles defining the form with jacket-like effect, and with high shoulders, will be the leading spring wraps.

Dark dresses are brightened by wearing bows of bright red, blue and yellow velvet ribbons on the front of the corsage.

Tufted wools, serges, canvas cloths, and mohairs are the general terms for the various wool stuffs for spring dresses.

The prettiest cuffs are made by cutting the sleeve an inch and a half too long, turning back the extra length and facing it with velvet.

The stiff, high military collar is used on almost all dresses, and is usually of velvet, no matter whether the dress itself be cotton, wool or silk.

Long pleated draperies, quite straight, or in curves that drop from the belt down and return, are in great favor for kinds of materials.

Watercress is to be used as folage on spring bonnets. A Paris model has a bunch of pale blue for-get-me-nots nestling among the cress leaves.

All the trimmings of hats and bonnets are placed directly over the front over the forehead, on the fore part of the crown, and towering high above the same.

Dimity seesuckers of American manufacture are to be had in all colors and in checks and stripes. For mourning the dimity effect in black gives the desirable crape effect.

A new way of putting lace in sleeves is to have two frills, not quite three inches deep; the upper frill nearly covers the lower, and most of the fullness is massed at the outside seam of the sleeve.

April Magazines.

HARPERS MONTHLY

for April is unrivaled in its rich and varied contents. Its illustrated features are superb, while its literary matter makes the reader loth to lay it down. The frontispiece is a life-like picture of that sad, strong face of Abraham Lincoln from a photograph in possession of W. P. Garrison who contributes a poem "The vision of Abraham Lincoln" from a dream the night before his assassination as retold to his Cabinet. "Some Richmond Portraits" from the illustrious Virginian families engraved by Miller, Goetze, Butler and others are quite good enough to frame. "The Prince of Wales at Sandringham" is a descriptive article, most exquisitely illustrated. A full page likeness of the Prince also of the Princess is given, "Along the Rio Grande" and "Fly Fishing" are interesting illustrated articles, the latter has attracted the attention and commendation of some of our expert fishermen. The Easy Chair pleasantly discusses German and Italian operas in New York, General Gordon, Carbyle memories, The Washington Monument, &c., &c.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY

for April continues with much interest its three prominent serials, now well developed in plot and sketch, with constantly renewed attractions in character studies. Miss Jewett grows more charming in every picture of "Marsh Island," from the salt way marshes to the late summer day in the fragrant peach orchard on the hill; the old farm-house and its family decendants and present occupants encouraged by Farmer Owen and his shrewd wife Marthia. Artist Dale still lingers, enjoying the daily companionship of pretty Dorie Owen. Dan. Lester becomes jealous and disheartened and suddenly determines to go West and look after his possessions, but honest Temperance Kipp relates a bit of news which promises to change the whole current of affairs. A delightful paper on George Frederick Handel 1685 to 1885 is also contained in this number.

Our Exposition Letter.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

NEW ORLEANS, La., Mar. 27., 1885.

"Is Mexico, Pat Donan, or the United States running this show?" asked a countryman of your correspondent as he was sauntering through the Exposition. The query was quite natural, since in the main-building, Mexico, or her representatives, is omnipresent. Mexican exhibits, Mexican soldiers and Mexican bands and music, everywhere greet the eye or ear of the visitor, confounding and surprising all with variety and excellence, one critic going so far as to say that but for Mexico the Exposition would have been a tame affair or have collapsed, possibly. And but for Pat Donan, Dakota and Idaho, with several back townships to hear from, would have lacked oratory enough to have opened their exhibits, the two territories named making their formal openings on two succeeding days recently, with bountiful supplies of oranges, bananas, cheese, crackers, and the best oratory on record, stimulated by lemonade! Shades of Bourbon and St John! how Pat and the other boys plastered those innocent Dakotans and Idahoans with taffy, enough to sweeten their lives for generations to come. But the grandeur of their exhibits warrant all the good things said of and for them. Wallace, of Bismarck, fully believes that Dakota is the original garden of Eden, and he himself, is Adam good fellow, any how.

Since my previous letter the colored people have held their opening day, formally turning over the exhibit to the Exposition and to the inspection of the world. Your correspondent took occasion to pass through the section devoted to their exhibits, one entire gallery of the government building, and after a careful inspection, left it, as he trusts a wiser and less prejudiced man. In all that pertains to woman's fine needle work in school exhibits, in paint, and drawing, in architecture, farm crops, and in mechanical devices of their own invention, or construction the evidences of progress and capibility are unanswerable arguments. At their formal opening were present about six hundred pupils and students of the various colored schools of this city; many learned and distinguished colored orators and teachers, with a great concourse of eminent men and women from all parts of the country. A number of addresses were made by white, and colored speakers, the speeches of the latter eliciting unsinted praise from all not alone because of their superior literary excellence but also on account of their noble sentiments and of their sobriety and good sense. It is somewhat remarkable that this is the first Exposition in which the colored people have been invited to participate, and most creditably have they responded.

The other galleries of the government building are occupied with woman's work, in grand profusion, and with various educational exhibits, from different states and private institutions, from the United States government and from the French Republic, the latter being very extensive, and complete, the whole covering almost every department of popular and professional education. The work of pupils in the Cherokee Indian Orphan asylum is exhibited here also and especially Kindergarten pupils' work, displaying great excellence, considering that they are but mere children of six to eight years old, and have only been under training for five months.

Prof. Ward, of Rochester, makes here, in a large section of one of the government building galleries, a prodigious display of fossils, ores, minerals etc. He also has a large exhibit of casts of celebrated models taken from the most celebrated museums of Europe and America, including a well mounted cast of the Siberian Mammoth, whose remains were found in 1799 frozen in the ice banks at the mouth of the Lena river. The skeleton is 16 feet high and 26 feet long, and is now in the museum at St. Petersburgh, Russia. He also exhibits the real skeleton of a finback whale, which measures 55 feet in length. There is enough in this exhibit alone to occupy the student in study for months.

Standing at any point in these galleries, the eye sweeps over one vast empire in miniature, having its institutions and boundless resources and development all portrayed in tens of thousands of samples and forms, while a multitude of flags and banners of all nations, droop or wave in friendly proximity, impressing the lesson humanity has been so slow to learn or heed, that God has made of one blood all the nations and peoples of the earth, and that in peace, and not in war, the grandest victories are won.

The Interior-department makes a vast exhibit from the patent office, showing models of thousands of inventions, from the most trifling up to the great modern locomotive; the treasury shows vast collections of engravings, fac-similes of currency and bonds, with large plates of public buildings, and from the Agricultural Bureau are samples of every vegetable, grass, grain, sugar, seed, and insect, especially of those injurious to vegetation; the State department exhibits maps showing the locations and extent of our diplomatic service, and the whole is the most extensive and the most instructive ever made by any government. The various states, circling round the central head, make unlimited displays of cotton, sugar, timbers, ores, grains, grasses, and collections of such variety and number that forty large volumes would scarcely suffice in which to fully describe them, and all that we can hope to do as we proceed, is to give general bird's eye views, leaving the reader to imagine much that cannot be set down, or described in brief letters. For this week adieu. B.

THE NEW MINISTER TO GERMANY

GEORGE HUNT PENDLETON,

OF OHIO.

As everybody expected that he would, George H. Pendleton, of Ohio, has received an important ministerial appointment from the new administration. His rank as the representative of his country abroad, is of the highest, namely that of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, and the financial recognition it involves is $17,500 a year, the highest amount paid by the United States Government for the services of its ministers. Many of Mr. Pendleton's friends thought that he would be sent to either Great Britain or France, which are appointments considered preferable to the one he has received. On the other hand, it is claimed that his going to Germany is a high compliment to his ability, as American interests in relation to that power, would be promoted by the revision of the Bancroft treaty and the settlement of other matters requiring superior strength and judgment in the United States minister resident at Berlin.

Mr. Pendleton is of a distinguished family. His paternal grandfather is mentioned in history as Hamilton's second in the duel with Aaron Burr, which robbed the young republic of one of its ablest men. The more agreeable distinction was his father's of long Congressional service in the House of Representatives, from the Cincinnati district. He was a Whig in his political preference.

The subject of this sketch was born in the Congressional district represented by his father, in the year 1825. He received a superior education, which included attendance at one of the German universities. His first residence abroad was from from 1844 to 1846. Before his return he joined a party of students in a journey on foot through Germany.

He was married in 1846 to Alice Key, daughter of Francis S. Key, the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner." The lady of his choice was also a niece of Roger B. Taney, Chief-justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. Pendleton's careeer as a stateman began, when he was about thirty years old, with his election to the Ohio State Senate, of which he was a member in 1854 and 1855, giving him an experience of statesmenship in connection with the practicle of his profession as a lawyer. This he has pursued with assiduity when his public services have permitted, from his admission to the bar until now.

He was a member of the House of Representatives for eight years, ending with the Thirty-eighth Congress. His term in the Senate ended March, 1885. It was the full term of six years.

When the war for the Union began, Mr. Pendleton was a member of the House of Representatives. Then, as now, he was attached to the Democratic party, and was an advocate of compromise so long as there seemed any possibility of it. When all attempts in that direction failed, however, he favored the continuance of coercive measures for the maintenance of the Union. In 1864 he was nominated for the Vice-Presidency on the ticket with General McClellan. He was a delegate to the Philadelphia National Convention in 1866. Three years later he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Governorship of Ohio. In 1869, the same year, he was elected President of the Kentucky Railroad Company.

Perhaps Mr. Pendleton's greatest accomplishment as a statesman was the prominent part he took in the advocacy of Civil Service Reform. He was Chairman of the Senate Committee having the matter in hand. As such he introduced, in the year 1880, the bill that became law in 1882, and which is perhaps the leading subject of domestic politics in these office-seeking times, to-day.

In person Mr. Pendleton is somewhat taller than the average man. His figure is stout; his head large and his neck short. He is always well-dressed, and is the pink of correct deportment and gentlemanly courtesy. This has always characterized him, and won for him, twenty years ago, the title "Gentleman George," by which he is still known. He is distinguished among our public men for generous and elegant hospitality, both at home in Cincinnati and while in Washington. His address, both in public and private, is remarkable for elegance and preciseness of expression. Most of his public addresses are first written at full length, memorized and rehearsed, and his appearances are always welcome to persons of good taste. The wife of his youth is still living. His only son is practicing law in New York City; his other children, two in number, are daughters.

Some Queer Things ! !

New Curiosities.—Wonderful and Mysterious.

Strange Discoveries about Beauty.

NEW YORK, March 4th, 1885.

A few things are yet a little known.

For instance the busiest part of New York contains the big Western Union Building supplied with water from several artesian wells in the cellar.

The same building has an elevator whose flight is so rapid that visitors frequently experience seasickness in its descent. It literally falls six or more stories and alights as gently as a feather.

Near by may be seen one hundred telegraph wires strung from pole to pole.

Across the street snow or rain falls almost every day in the year.

For ten cents can now be procured a harmless cure for Colic, which will relieve the baby at once and avoid crying night and day. One package lasts a year.

Teething in infants can be made painless at a cost of 10 cents per package, enough for a year's use; a harmless preparation.

You can cure sore throat with a simple and harmless remedy, costing but 10 cents for a pack age, lasting many years.

[illegible] which a child gets in falling or otherwise should receive immediate attention. 10 cents will procure a year's supply of a harmless remedy for the same.

Small, pretty feet are especially desired by misses and mothers. On receipt of one dollar in advance we will send our $5. method and preparation ON TRIAL, on condition that you return it within one year and get your money back if it fails to secure you a dainty little foot.

Lily White Hands, Smooth, soft and Velvety may be had by any lady by the simple use in their gloves, of our new hand bleaching preparation at an expense of only one dollar.

Wrinkles may be prevented, thus preserving a smooth, pure, youthful face, till old age, by the use of our Rejuvenating Preservation. This elixir with apparatus can be had for $1.00.

A particular specialty offered contains your name in plain letters on gold plated breast pin, strong and pretty for 25 cents.

Any or all of these articles promptly forwarded on receipt of price, and if unsatisfactory your money promptly refunded on return of same.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla is a medicine that, during nearly 40 years, in all parts of the world, has proved its efficacy as the best blood alterative known to medical science.

SARSAPARILLA (extracted from the root of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla) is its base, and its powers are enhanced by the extracts of Yellow Dock and Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other potent ingredients.

IS your blood vitiated by derangements of the digestive and assimilatory functions? is it tainted by Scrofula? or does it contain the poison of Mercury or Contagious Disease?

THE leading physicians of the United States, who know the composition of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, say that nothing else so good for the purification of the blood is within the range of pharmacy.

ONLY by the use of this remedy is it possible for a person who has corrupted blood to attain sound health and prevent transmission of the destructive taint to posterity.

THOROUGHLY effective renovation of the system must include not only the removal of corruption from the blood, but its enrichment and the strengthening of the vital organs.

RELIABLE witnesses, all over the world, testify that this work is better accomplished by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA than by any other remedy.

BLOOD that is corrupted through disease is made pure, and blood weakened through diminution of the red corpuscles is made strong, by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.

PURIFYING the blood and building up the system require time in serious cases, but benefit will be derived from the use of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA more speedily than from anything else.

MEDICINE for which like effects are falsely claimed, is abundant in the market, under many names, but the only preparation that has stood the test of time, and proved worthy of the world's confidence, is

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

IMPROVED BUTTER COLOR

A NEW DISCOVERY.

☞ For several years we have furnished the Dairymen of America with an excellent artificial color for butter; so meritorious that it met with great success everywhere receiving the highest and only prizes at both International Dairy Fairs.

☞ But by patient and scientific chemical research we have improved in several points, and now offer this new color as the best in the world.

It Will Not Color the Buttermilk. It Will Not Turn Rancid. It is the Strongest, Brightest and Cheapest Color Made,

☞ And, while prepared in oil, is so compounded that it is impossible for it to become rancid.

☞ BEWARE of all imitations, and of all other oil colors, for they are liable to become rancid and spoil the butter.

☞ If you cannot get the "improved" write us to know where and how to get it without extra expense. (46)

THE news announcing the death of General Grant may be expected at most any hour. His condition for the past few days has been critical. He is continually growing weaker and his physicians fear that death is near at hand. Profound regret is felt for this brave sufferer throughout the land.

IN the twenty principal wheat raising States, the decreased acreage this year as compared with last, is 4,283,950, which at the average yield of 13 bushels an acre, will make a shortage of 55,000,000 bushels. To this is to be added reported damage by winter-killing and other causes, of 15 per cent., a further falling off of 51,000,000 bushels. In the spring-wheat States there will also be a decreased acreage.

WHILE it may be a fact that the war preparations in Great Britain are the best possible guarantees of peace, it is no doubt true that a struggle between England and Russia over the Afghan question is bound to occur, and there are many who believe that it may as well come now as at any other time. It is certain that the Russians can easier be kept out of Herat, than they can be driven out when once in.—[Syracuse Journal.

THE Irish revolutionists held a meeting in New York Saturday which was largely attended. O'Donovan Rossa, and many others delivered influenenatory speeches. Prof. J. M. Moore of Oswego [illegible] new principal of the Pulaski Academy.

Monday, a lady of this village having built a fire raised the lid to see how it was progressing, when her teeth fell into the fire and were consumed.—[Sandy Creek News.

A fire broke out at half-past 8 o'clock Sunday night in the house of the Rev. David McFarland of Hannibal while he was preaching in the Baptist church. There is no fire apparatus in the village, and the house, valued at $3,000, was entirely consumed. There was an insurance upon the building of $1,000. The origin of the fire is not known, but it is supposed to have caught from a defective stove pipe or from a lamp in the hall.

How Fred Carrington Went up in an Elevator.

We take from the Detroit Post the following laughable description of an incident which befell Fred Carrington who is widely known in the village having resided here many years:

There is an elevator in the [illegible] of trade building that goes up and down from cellar to garret with the speed of a dart. It is the fastest perpendicular coupe in Detroit. It is worked by a lever, and a slight pressure touches it off, when up she goes like a [illegible]. An experienced hand manipulates it. No other [illegible] it. A thrilling experience of yesterday will cause the following sign to be posted to-day: "Don't monkey with the elevator."

The engineer was momentarily out of sight when Fred Carrington wanted to ascend from the first to the [illegible] floor. He thought he would run the thing [illegible], so he stepped in, closed the door and touched the spring. THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

The brief delay in the arrival of the April Century, receives full compensation in the richness of its matter and great variety of subject treated. The leading illustrated article is "The opening of the Lower Mississippi" by David D. Porter. It occupies 30 pages and is in every respect a good [illegible] article. The second paper, "A Florentine Mosaic" by W. D. Howells, is as interesting and fascinating as are the productions of his pen generally. The other illustrated articles are, "The Upper Columbia," "Meditations of Arcadie Kiitredt," "The Colonists at Home," and "New Orleans before the Capture." Mr. Howell's new novel, "The Rise of Silas Lapham" increases in interest with each installment, while "The Bostonians" by Henry James, is exceptionally bright entertaining. Topics of the Time discusses Practical Politics. The attempt to save Niagara, and other matters. This first edition opens with the amazing number of 225,000.

The Syracuse board of aldermen and Mayor Thomas Ryan are likely to be imprisoned for contempt of court. The trouble arose over a petition that a new water company presented at a meeting of the common council on Monday evening, asking for permission to lay their pipes through the streets. The people generally favor the new enterprise, but the officers of the old water company have opposed the new corporation in every possible way. They secured injunctions against the mayor and aldermen restraining them from granting the new company's petition, but the council passed them over and the new company was victorious. Justice Kennedy, who signed the injunctions, will use every effort, it is said, to imprison the council, the members of which declare that they will go to the penitentiary in a body rather than pay a fine.

Washington Letter.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, March 27, 1885.

President Cleveland's appointments this week especially his diplomatic appointments were a continuation of the surprises for which the new administration is already famous. The names of ex-Senator Pendleton for the Berlin mission, and Governor McLane for the Paris mission, were familiar; but Messrs Phelps for the British, and Jackson for the Mexican mission raised the inquiries "who is Jackson, and who is Phelps?" Politically these appointments are inexplicable. From any other standpoint they appear to be admirable, and outside of political circles are kindly received. Rarely have such appointments been made solely on grounds of personal fitness, experience and attainments. Politicians of both parties would have declared it a political impossibility that the President should select his Minister to England from a State so firmly and unchangeably Republican as Vermont. Some say, "the idea of going to Mr. Edmund's state for a Democrat!" Senator Edmunds, however, speaks in high praise of the nominee. He says there is no finer gentleman or greater lawyer in the United States than Mr. Phelps.

It is natural to believe that ones own particular sphere is all there is worth knowing in this world, just as society limits the world to its visiting lists. It is refreshing to notice that the present occupant of the White House has another point of view. He does not think politicians monopolize all greatness, and his selection of Mr. Phelps, who is entirely unknown to politicians, to fill the most distinguished position in the Diplomatic Service, is proof that he thinks there should be a change in this regard.

By the Mexican Mission going to Georgia, Kentucky got another disappointment in the failure of "Cerro Gordo" Williams to receive that prize, and Indiana was again ignored. When ex-Senator McDonald was here, and refused to accept the Russian mission, he told President Cleveland and pointedly that his state had not received as much consideration as it was justly entitled to. He also said as the state had no representative in the Cabinet, she would look to the President to represent her in it, and Mr. Cleveland assured him that, in [illegible] Indiana should [illegible] to [illegible] ignored.

There is [illegible] appointment of Hon. S. S. Cox for the Turkish mission. [illegible] Mr. Cox, however. He has been all over Turkey, is acquainted with her people and institutions. He has been in ill health for several years, and as he is quite sick now, he is glad for a change of climate. Mr. Cox will be a good deal missed in Congress. He has been returned to the Lower House for a number of consecutive terms. A Representative remarked that Mr. Cox had gotten off his pleasantries on all matters whenever he desired to, [illegible] he did not mind saying that [illegible] to regret in the appointment was that it would inevitably result in Mr. Cox writing another book.

The Diplomatic appointments are said to be Secretary Bayard's choice in every case, and Mr. Randall is also said to be well pleased with them. A few weeks ago it was questionable how Mr. Randall would stand with the new regime. Now it is noticed that he calls at the White House every day.

Secretary Endicott's recent threat of a shaking up of the Army officers stationed in this city, has caused alarm in society circles, and he finds himself daily besieged by the friends of officers, who are fearful of being ordered to the frontier. Many of his assailants are ladies, and the Secretary finds it difficult to get rid of such visitors without making promises. One evening while seated quietly at home with his wife, he was called upon by a delegation of these ladies, who urged their cases with great persistence. Afterwards, when expressing surprise at the flank movement, he was informed that the work of social influence here, is usually done through the fair sex, who will not listen to reason.

President Cleveland has at last settled the church question. He has rented a pew at a church on Four-and-a-half street, at least a mile from the White House, and one of the least pretentious of the Presbyterian churches. This is quite a disappointment to the more fashionable worshipers, of the New York Avenue church congregation. It is said he will rent a pew in another church also, and thus be able to alternate [illegible] and avoid the notriety occasioned by constant attendance at one. He is unwilling to give one congregation the distinction of the administration church.

In a field on the Gardner Smith farm near the road between Ellenville and Kingston, is a chestnut tree which is both a natural curiosity and an ancient landmark. The trunk is eight feet in diameter. Four feet from the ground a white elm tree, a foot in diameter, projects from the trunk. It is supposed that there was once a cavity or depression in the side of the chestnut tree, which became filled with decayed vegetable matter, into which a seed from an elm had lodged, and from which sprang the present elm. The latter has spreading branches, which mingle their foliage with that of the chestnut every year. Both trees are sound. The chestnut was an important landmark in the ancient Indian trail leading from Esopus to the Delaware Water Gap, down the Neversink and Delaware valleys. It is mentioned in many old legal documents of Ulster county. The tree is about 600 years old,

The principal losers in yesterday's fire was Edward Chapel, who occupied the east half of the house. The family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Chapel, three small children, and Mrs. Stow, an aged lady and grandmother of the children. Mr. and Mrs. Chapel were away from home at the time of the fire and the grandmother could do little more than get the children out. The fire caught in the upper chambers, which were soon filled with smoke and flame, thus making it impossible to save anything, leaving them almost destitute. MORTGAGE SALE. Mortgagor Elizabeth Bellue, of Parish, Oswego county, N. Y. Mortgagee Luke D. Smith of Mexico, Oswego county, N. Y. Assignee Delilah D. Wright of Granby, Oswego county, N. Y. Mortgage dated April 3, 1872, and recorded in Oswego county clerk's office April 15, 1872, in Book 94, of mortgages at page 275. The amount claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the first publication of this mortgage is $1047.17. The mortgaged property is substantially described in said mortgage as all that tract or parcel of land situate in the town of Parish, Oswego county, N. Y. being the north half of Small Lot number two of Great Lot number twenty-six (26) in the 23d township of Scriba's Patent as surveyed by H. Parke, and conveying sixty five acres of land more or less. Default having been made in the conditions of said mortgage whereby the power to sell has become operative notice is hereby given that the premises described in said mortgage will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder at the office of the Lewis House, in the village of Fulton, Oswego county, N. Y., on the 27th day of June, 1885, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and said mortgage will be thereby foreclosed.

A Safeguard.

The [illegible] with which slight Colds and Coughs [illegible] develop into the gravest maladies of the throat and lungs, is a consideration which should impel every prudent person to keep at hand, as a household remedy, a bottle of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

[illegible] such immediate relief and [illegible] a cure. In all the [illegible] of the [illegible] eminent physician, Prof. F. [illegible] of the Maine Medical School, Brunswick, Me., says:—

"[illegible] no other anodyne [illegible] Ayer's Cherry Pectoral [illegible] invaluable for diseases of the throat and lungs."

The same opinion is expressed by the well-known Dr. L. J. Addison, of Chicago, Ill., who says:—

"I have never found, in thirty-five years of continuous study and practice of medicine, any preparation of so great value as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for treatment of diseases of the throat and lungs. It not only breaks up colds and cures severe coughs, but is more effective than anything else in relieving even the most serious bronchial and pulmonary affections."

AYER'S

Cherry Pectoral

Is not a new claimant for popular confidence, but a medicine which is to-day saving the lives of the third generation who have come into being since it was first offered to the public.

There is not a household in which this invaluable remedy has once been introduced where its use has ever been abandoned, and there is not a person who has ever given it a proper trial for any throat or lung disease susceptible of cure, who has not been made well by it.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has, in numberless instances, cured obstinate cases of chronic Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and even acute Pneumonia, and has saved many patients in the earlier stages of Pulmonary Consumption. It is a medicine that only requires to be taken in small doses, is pleasant to the taste, and is needed in every house where there are children, as there is nothing so good as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL for treatment of Croup and Whooping Cough.

These are all plain facts, which can be verified by anybody, and should be remembered by everybody.

Oswego's Treasurer Absconds.

Saturday morning the people of Oswego were startled by a report which spread quickly upon the streets that Thomas Crawford, for three years past city treasurer, was a defaulter in a large amount and had fled to Canada. Mr. Crawford is in the hat business, and left home on Thursday night, telling his wife that he was going to Syracuse to buy goods, and very few people knew. Friday evening the finance committee of the common council held a meeting at which Crawford had been requested to be present for the purpose of making the annual settlement of his accounts and also to present his bonds for the current year. Crawford was informed last Wednesday of this meeting, and had promised to be present and bring his books, vouchers, &c. The committee met, but the treasurer did not appear. This aroused suspicion, and the committee immediately inquired as to his whereabouts. Learning that he was out of town Saturday morning the committee took possession of the business books and began an investigation. The last report of the city treasurer to the common council was made February 20, 1885, showing a balance on hand, according to the books, of $31,359.00. Receipts since that time increased the amount to $32,312.60. His disbursements were $5,228.71, leaving a balance to be accounted for of $26,[illegible].86. All that can be discovered in the absence of Crawford is $451.73 on deposit in one of the city banks, and $121.62 in the American bank, New York, leaving a shortage of $26,211.51. The announcement of the defalcation was a great surprise to most people, as Crawford's reputation was excellent and the public knew of nothing which would have led to a suspicion of the real state of facts. It is now a certainty that Crawford has been for some months past engaged in speculations thro' a friend, to whom he furnished money for this purpose. Heavy losses swept away all of his private means, and he then [illegible] using the city's funds, hoping [illegible], but only got in deeper and deeper [illegible] involved, until concealment [illegible] possible. Crawford [illegible] bonds, and his bondsmen [illegible] responsible. Although [illegible] reported $31,359.00 on hand [illegible] 20, the investigation already made [illegible] that it is probable that a large shortage had occurred before that time. The finance committee and experts will make a thorough investigation. [illegible] that he carried away [illegible] money, the balance having [illegible] been lost, [illegible] speculating [illegible] firm of brokers [illegible] Crawford [illegible] Mortimer [illegible] warrant for Crawford, and [illegible] ly be proceeded [illegible].

Sudden Death.

At about 5 o'clock last evening while nearing his home on Cayuga street, William Warner dropped dead from heart disease. He was born in Summit, N. Y., in 1809 and was 75 years of age. He has been an honored citizen and resident of this village for 21 years and was much esteemed for his quiet manners and kindly acts. Funeral services attended on Friday from his late residence. Miss Sarah Warner preceptress of Phœnix academy arrived last evening, his son in the Journal office will come from Syracuse to-day.

Mooted Questions.

Mrs. Grundy has been asked:

"Is it right to keep a season that is Lent?" That depends upon the seasoning. Seasonable clothing should never be lent, because it can be bought so very cheap at Kent & Miller's 18 and 20 South Salina street.

"What are the proper occupations of the season?" Well, spring is a clothier, like Kent & Miller, 18 and 20 South Salina street, because like them it clothes the earth; summer runs a blast furnace, and is given to melting moods; autumn is an artist, and does for the country what the politicians do for the town,—"paints it red;" winter is a shoemaker, but it sounds as though we were never to get the last of it. For further particulars call at Kent & Miller's 18 and 20 South Salina street, at any season and examine the stock of men's and boys' clothing and inquire about prices.

The rush for crockery, lamps, glass and plated ware at Draper's proves that he is selling goods and as he advertises at the wholesale factory prices. He thinks it is better to give his customers a chance to buy the goods a little less [illegible]

In Memoriam.

The many friends of D. C. Cumings and wife who came to this village last week from their home in Carthage to receive the remains of their son, Dewitt J., from Denver, Col., deeply sympathize with them in their sad bereavement. Funeral services in charge of the Masonic order held at the Baptist church on Sunday last were largely attended; an excellent and appropriate sermon was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Breaker. Before closing he paid a just and fitting tribute to the order of Free and Accepted Masons, in the good and commanding influence exerted by the rules which govern them. He said, the last words of the fond mother to him when leaving home were, "I beg of you my son not to forget to read your bible," and his answer, "how can I mother? I could not be a good Mason if I did!" The circumstances attending the sickness and death of Mr. Cumings have not yet been received from Denver. The lodge of which he was a member took care of him during sickness and caused his body to be embalmed, placed in a rich casket, with the emblems of the order attached, and forwarded to this village. The Masonic Order of Watertown, N. Y., where he had previously belonged sent beautiful floral offerings, with expressions of sorrow. Company "C" of which he was an honored member, sent their sorrowful regrets at their inability to be present at the funeral. The Rev. Mr. Pierce who married his only sister, now at Terre Haute, Ind., expressed his heartfelt sympathy and deeply regretted that illness prevented their coming. Among the friends in attendance were Miss Mary E. Cahill, affiance of deceased, a young lady highly cultured and of fine accomplishments, accompanied by her brother and Mr. George Bartlett, of Watertown, the latter an intimate home friend who spent much of his time with Mr. Cummings during his stay in Denver. The deceased was an only son of Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt C. Cumings, formerly well known citizen of this village, and who was the originator and builder of the large manufacturing establishment at the Falls. A youth of thirteen years when his parents removed from this village, he continued his studies, and at the age of twenty entered the law office of Lansing & Rogers in Watertown and was admitted to the bar five years later at Buffalo, soon after which he sought a home in the far west, locating at Pueblo. Dying at the early age of 2[illegible] years, he stood in noble stature and perfect health with every promise of length of days and increasing honors. Death indeed found in him "a shining mark." He now sleeps on yonder hillside in Mt. Adnah. Peace, peace, to his ashes, consolation to his friends and loved ones, gentle flowers for his tomb.

[illegible] gathered the reaper fruit more fair,
[illegible] the shadow of dark despair

OBITUARY.

Miss Agnes Flannery, youngest daughter of Dennis and Catharine Flannery, died at her home in Oswego Falls, Tuesday evening, March 24, at 7:30 of consumption. Some two years ago she experienced a slight attack of the same [illegible], which alarmed her friends and [illegible] induced to spend the ensuing year in Iowa. During her stay her health was apparently restored and upon returning home strong hopes were entertained that a permanent recovery had been secured, but the insiduous destroyer still lurked in her system and finally, two months since, again developed symptoms which crushed the hopes of her friends and they waited in sorrow the approaching end. The deceased possessed a cheerful, happy disposition, was the life of home and social gatherings. She was frank and truthful, and the kindness of her many friends during her sickness and death testify to the esteem in which she was held. She was a devout Catholic and that faith to her was a living, vital principle which sustained her in sickness and vouchsafed for her a triumphant death. Her last moments were happy and she awaited the last struggle without fear. She was ready to go, and as the most exquisite tints are produced when the sun is sinking in a cloudless sky, mingles its light with the shades of advancing evening, so in the dying moments of the departed, the light of her faith shone out in unwanted clearand beauty. Her funeral and that of her brother, occurred from the church of the Immaculate Conception on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. The remains reposed in a handsome casket. There was nothing about the features that indicated death, but suggested a bride in quiet slumber. Upon the casket were floral offerings of rare design from Oswego Falls, Fulton, Oswego and Syracuse friends. The requeum mass was celebrated by Father Smith of Oswego, who made a few appropriate and consoling remarks to the doubly afflicted families, at the conclusion of which the caskets were borne to St. Mary's cemetary where they were interred side by side. Requiescat in pace. ***

Mrs. Azuba Pierce died at Pemperton, Mo., March 29, 1885 at the residence of her son, Lyman Fuller, aged 87 years. The remains were brought to the village yesterday for burial. The funeral services took place this morning at 10:30 a. m. the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Chesbro. Rev. Mr. Breaker of the Baptist church, officiated.

Martha, daughter of William and Margaret O'Connor, died at her home in the upper part of the town, yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, aged 24 years and 3 months. The funeral services will take place to-morrow at 2 p. m. at the Catholic church.

Mrs. N. Cooper, widow of the late William Cooper and one of Fulton's oldest residents died Monday in the 91st year. The funeral will occur at 2 p. m. to-day from Zion's church, Rev. Dr. Goodier officiating.

Mathew Sauter died at his home at Ingalls Crossing on Saturday March 28th aged 48 years. The funeral took place yesterday at 10 a. m. at the Catholic church in this village.

In Granby March 31, Anastia McAvoy aged 60 years. Services in the Catholic church Thursday at 10 a. m.

On Friday morning occurred the death of an infant child of John White jr.

... Crawford is in [illegible] ... on Thursday night, telling his ... that he was going to Syracuse to buy goods, and very few people knew. Friday evening the finance committee of the common council held a meeting at which Crawford had been requested to be present for the purpose of making the annual settlement of his accounts and also to present his bonds for the current year. Crawford was informed last Wednesday of this meeting, and had promised to be present and bring his books, vouchers, &c. The committee met, but the treasurer did not appear. This aroused suspicion, and the committee immediately inquired as to his whereabouts. Learning that he was out of town Saturday morning the committee took possession of the business books and began an investigation. The last report of the city treasurer to the common council was made February 20, 1885, showing a balance on hand, according to the books, of $31,359.00. Receipts since that time increased the amount to $32,312.60. His disbursements were $5,226.74, leaving a balance to be accounted for of $26,785.86. All that can be discovered in the absence of Crawford is $451.73 on deposit in one of the city banks, and $121.62 in the American bank, New York, leaving a shortage of $26,211.51. The announcement of the defalcation was a great surprise to most people, as Crawford's reputation was excellent and the public knew of nothing which would have led to a suspicion of the real state of facts. It is now ascertained that Crawford has been for some months past engaged in speculations thro' a friend, to whom he furnished money for this purpose. Heavy losses swept away all of his private means, and he then he began using the city's funds, hoping to recover his losses, but only got more and more deeply involved, until concealment was no longer possible. Crawford was under $50,000 bonds, and his bondsmen are responsible. Although, as stated, Crawford reported $31,369.55 on hand on February 20, the investigation already made shows that it is probable that a large shortage had occurred before that time. The finance committee and experts will make a thorough investigation. Crawford's intimate friends—in one of whom he confided before his departure—say that he carried away only a small sum of money, the balance having previously been lost, and that he is now in Canada. A friend claims to have certain information that he is in Belleville. His wife says she never had the slightest knowledge of his speculating and the only firm of brokers in the place say he has done no business through them. Certificates of indebtedness of $800 by personal friends to Crawford have been found. Mayor Morrison has sworn out a warrant for Crawford, and says that his bondsmen will certainly be prosecuted for the full amount of his indebtedness.

Sudden Death.

At about 5 o'clock last evening while nearing his home on Cayuga street, William Warner dropped dead from heart disease. He was born in Summit, N. Y., in 1809 and was 76 years of age. He has been an honored citizen and resident of this village for 34 years and was much esteemed for his quiet manners and kindly acts. Funeral services attended on Friday from his late residence. Miss Sarah Warner preceptress of Phoenix academy arrived last evening. his son in the Journal office will come from Syracuse to-day

Mooted Questions.

Mrs. Grundy has been asked:

"Is it right to keep a season that is Lent?" That depends upon the seasoning. Seasonable clothing should never be lent, because it can be bought so very cheap at Kent & Miller's 18 and 20 South Salina street.

"What are the proper occupations of the season?" Well, spring is a clothier, like Kent & Miller, 18 and 20 South Salina street, because like them it clothes the earth; summer runs a blast furnace, and is given to melting moods; autumn is an artist, and does for the country what the politicians do for the town—"paints it red;" winter is a shoemaker, but it sounds as though we were [illegible] at the last of it. An Indiana Woman Thinks You belong to Her—Deserting Her After a Few Months.

Oswego Palladium: The wife of William Green, of Fulton, formerly of this city, who is in jail at Lyons on a charge of bigamy has received the following letter:

Rogers, Grant Co., Ind. Mar. 17 '85.

Mr. Jessie Green: I saw a piece in a paper about William E. Green stating that you were his wife and that you believed and witnesses believed he had a wife living at Vincennes, Indiana. My name is Green. I have a husband somewhere by that name. He came to this country a stranger and he worked awhile here before we married. We were married in April, 1882, and he deserted me in August, 1882, and I haven't seen him since. He gave his name as George R. Green and his age about 25. I thought maybe he was the same man and that he had changed his name. We married in Grant county, Indiana. I would like you to write and give me a discription of him and then I can tell you whether it is the same man or not. I think from the item that he is the same person. If it is desired I can send you his picture. If it is not he I reckon there will be no harm done. Please write immediately to my father.

GOING WEST.

[illegible]

... funeral services ... held at the Baptist church on Sunday last were largely attended; an excellent and appropriate sermon was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Breaker. Before closing he paid a just and fitting tribute to the order of Free and Accepted Masons, in the good and commanding influence exerted by the rules which govern them. He said, the last words of the fond mother to him when leaving home were, "I beg of you my son not to forget to read your bible," and his answer, "how can I mother? I could not be a good Mason if I did!" The circumstances attending the sickness and death of Mr. Cumings have not yet been received from Denver. The lodge of which he was a member took care of him during sickness and caused his body to be embalmed, placed in a rich casket, with the emblems of the order attached, and forwarded to this village. The Masonic Order of Watertown, N. Y., where he had previously belonged sent beautiful floral offerings, with expressions of sorrow. Company "C" of which he was an honored member, sent their sorrowful regrets at their inability to be present at the funeral. The Rev. Mr. Pierce who married his only sister, now at Terre Haute, Ind., expressed his heartfelt sympathy and deeply regretted that illness prevented their coming. Among the friends in attendance were Miss Mary E. Cahill, affiance of deceased, a young lady highly cultured and of fine accomplishments, accompanied by her brother and Mr. George Bartlett, of Watertown, the latter an intimate home friend who spent much of his time with Mr. Cummings during his stay in Denver. The deceased was an only son of Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt C. Cumings, formerly well known citizen of this village, and who was the originator and builder of the large manufacturing establishment at the Falls. A youth of thirteen years when his parents removed from this village, he continued his studies, and at the age of twenty entered the law office of Lansing & Rogers in Watertown and was admitted to the bar five years later at Buffalo, soon after which he sought a home in the far west, locating at Pueblo. Dying at the early age of 28 years, he stood in noble stature and perfect health with every promise of length of days and increasing honors. Death indeed found in him "a shining mark." He now sleeps on yonder hillside in Mt. Adnah. Peace, peace, to his ashes, consolation to his friends and loved ones, gentle flowers for his tomb.

"Ne'er gathered the reaper fruit more fair,
Never the shadow of dark dispair
Fell on a deeper woe;
Gone from his task but half complete,
Gone from caresses kind and sweet
Into death's arms of snow."

OBITUARY.

Miss Agnes Flannery, youngest daughter of Dennis and Catharine Flannery, died at her home in Oswego Falls, Tuesday evening, March 24, at 7:30 of consumption. Some two years ago she experienced a slight attack of the same disease, which alarmed her friends and she was induced to spend the ensuing year in Iowa. During her stay her health was apparently restored and upon returning home strong hopes were entertained that a permanent recovery had been secured, but the insiduous destroyer still lurked in her system and finally, two months since, again developed symptoms which crushed the hopes of her friends, and they waited in sorrow the approaching end. The deceased possessed a cheerful, happy disposition, was the life of home and social gatherings. She was frank and truthfuthl, and the kindness of her many friends during her sickness and death testify to the esteem in which she was held. She was a devout Catholic and that faith to her was a living, vital principle which sustained her in sickness and vouchsafed for her a triumphant death. Her last moments were happy and she awaited the last struggle without fear. She was ready to go, and as the most exquisite tints are produced when the sun is sinking in a cloudless sky, mingles its light with the shades of advancing evening, so in the dying moments of the departed, the light of her faith shone out in unwanted clearand beauty. Her funeral and that of her brother, occurred from the church of the Immaculite Conception on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. The remains reposed in a handsome casket. There was nothing about the features that indicated death, but suggested a bride in quiet slumber. Upon the casket were floral offerings of rare design from Oswego Falls, Fulton, Oswego and Syracuse friends. The requeum mass was celebrated by Father Smith of Oswego, who made a few appropriate and consoling remarks to the doubly afflicted families, at the conclusion of which the caskets were borne to St. Mary's cemetary where they were interred side by side. Requiescat in pace. *

Mrs. Azuba Pierce died at Pemperton, Mo., March 29, 1885 at the residence of her son, Lyman Fuller, aged 87 years. The remains were brought to the village yesterday for burial. The funeral services took place this morning at 10:30 a. m. the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Chesbro. Rev. Mr. Breaker of the Baptist church, officiated.

Martha, daughter of William and Margaret O'Connor, died at her home in the upper part of the town, yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, aged 24 years and 3 months. The funeral services will take place to-morrow at 2 p. m. at the Catholic church.

Mrs. N. Cooper, widow of the late William Cooper and one of Fulton's oldest residents died Monday in the 91st year. The funeral will occur at 2 p. m. to-day from Zion's church, Rev. Dr. Goodier officiating.

Mathew Sauter died at his home at Ingalls Crossing on Saturday March 28th aged 49 years. The funeral took place yesterday at 10 a. m. at the Catholic church in this village.

[illegible] frequently deficient [illegible] but excel in the pro- [illegible] or because the [illegible] value of orchard grass, [illegible] though, is in its un- [illegible] of leaves, and those who [illegible] in its stems and heads [illegible] disappointed. A farmer who [illegible] to obtain his hay crop at a single [illegible] had better not sow orchard [illegible] except in pasture land. Nor is [illegible] grass suited to the demands of those [illegible] grow hay for the city market. For [illegible] the old standard varieties, timothy [illegible] top, are to be preferred.

Orchard grass should only be grown in [illegible] fields by those who would like [illegible] two or three crops per year on [illegible] ground. Nor should its cul- [illegible] ever be attempted by those who [illegible] be ready to begin haying when- [illegible] their grass is ready to cut. Orchard [illegible] like June grass, red clover, and a [illegible] other varieties, is full three weeks [illegible] in ripening than red top and [illegible] timothy, and unless harvested at the [illegible] it is at its best, soon becomes hard [illegible] innutritious like any other ripe grass [illegible] straw. Orchard grass has no other [illegible] merit. It is a little tender the first [illegible] ear, if sown very late in the autumn. [illegible] ow to get its full value we must ob- [illegible] its habits and conform to its pe- [illegible] uliarities. Red clover is one of our [illegible] most valuable forage plants, but if we [illegible] to attempt to make it take the [illegible] of timothy and should give it pre- [illegible] the same treatment, we would [illegible] rely be disappointed.

"Orchard grass is adapted to grow in [illegible] ady fields, and in orchards or forest [illegible] oves it may occupy comparatively dry [illegible], but for open culture it will pay [illegible] tter on land so moist that continuous [illegible] owth may be maintained from April [illegible] November. In the latitude of Cen- [illegible] al New England, the first crop will be [illegible] ady to cut as early as the middle of [illegible] ne every year, in early seasons by the [illegible] th to the tenth, and when the blos- [illegible] ms begin to fall it must be cut without [illegible] lay. The second growth will start [illegible] pidly and will be entirely of leaves, [illegible] hich will lengthen at the rate of an [illegible] ch per day for a month or more, when [illegible] crop should be cut. A third crop [illegible] ill have to be cut or pastured later in [illegible] e fall, as there will be too much to [illegible] ave on the ground over winter. Or- [illegible] hard grass will bear topdressing any [illegible] me directly after removing a crop, and [illegible] ill pay well for the cost on any moist [illegible] nd. It should not, however, be sown [illegible] land that is to wet, or which is likely [illegible] be overflowed or covered by ice in [illegible] nter.

Bee-Keeping in Cities.

About ten years ago we began to keep [illegible] es in this city, at first merely as an ex- [illegible] riment, and to our astonishment we [illegible] und that they did almost as well as [illegible] e bees in the country. We soon es- [illegible] blished an apiary of 40 hives on top of [illegible] e American Express Company's build- [illegible] g in Hudson St., and in 1878 took [illegible] om a single hive 188 pounds of choice [illegible] mb honey. Our success induced [illegible] veral persons in different cities to re- [illegible] at our experiment, and to-day there [illegible] e extensive apiaries in Chicago, Cin- [illegible] nati, St. Louis, Baltimore and New [illegible] rleans. In this city and in Brooklyn [illegible] are keeping bees, mostly on [illegible] housetops, and are doing remarkably [illegible] ell, their reports varying from 75 to [illegible] 0 pounds of honey to the hive; not [illegible] athered from the sugar houses or from [illegible] e gutters, as some persons have as- [illegible] rted, but from flower in all the parks, [illegible] rdens, and yards of the city, the va- [illegible] ety being so great that some are in [illegible] oom every day during the summer [illegible] ason. One of our city customers, a [illegible] ergyman living on twenty-fourth [illegible] eet, reported that from one of his [illegible] ves he got 116 pounds of honey last [illegible] mmer. We know of about three [illegible] ndred hives that are kept in the city. [illegible] st year we extracted about 600 pounds [illegible] choice honey while the ailanthus trees [illegible] ere in bloom, at our apiary in Park [illegible] this city. We do not keep our [illegible] merely to raise honey, but for in- [illegible] of stock and queen raising, and [illegible] took the honey out in order to give [illegible] to the queen to deposite eggs. Last [illegible] ober we shipped from this roof apiary [illegible] stocks of bees to the island of [illegible] where they have increased to over [illegible] and have given an enormous [illegible] of honey. We have just com- [illegible] the Cuban apiary the largest [illegible] extractor in the world, capable of [illegible] out 5,000 pounds of honey [illegible]

[illegible] every field of bare earth invites [illegible] but the man who has one will [illegible] be buried.

[illegible] are the very best food for laying [illegible] if they are soaked over night they will be eaten more readily and be more digestible.

[illegible] cut early, cut hay, chopped fine and scalded, is a good food for hens in the winter. They must have something of the sort to do well.

The demand for genuine diary butter is increasing in New York, owing to the enforcement of the laws recently enacted against oleomargarine.

To procure a good coat on your horse, use plenty of rubbing and brushing, plenty of "elbow grease" opens the pores, softens the skin and promotes the general health.

See to it that the stabledoors can be fastened either open or shut, and not allow them to be broken to piecies by the wind. This may also save accidents in the transfer of stock.

The outside leaves of cabbages are greedily eaten by cows, but with, however, a bad effect on the milk, unless care is taken to feed just after milking. Given thus, the bad flavor goes off before the cow is milked again.

How a Cell is filled With Honey.

Says Dr. C. Spencer: In my observatory hive one cell was built against the glass, and that afforded an excellent opportunity of seeing how bees deposit honey in the cell. First, a bee deposited a thin coating of honey upon the base of the cell, making a sort of varnish, as it were, to the base of the cell. The next bee that came with honey, raised up the lower edge of this film of honey, and forced its honey beneath; the next bee did the same, and this film acted as a kind of diphragm, keeping the honey in the cell. When the cell is full enoughed to be sealed, the bees commence contracting the opening with wax, until there is only a small hole left in the center, when they appear to take one little flake of wax and pat it down over the opening. At any time during the process of filling the cell, the honey could be withdrawn with a hypodermic syringe, and the diaphragm left hanging.

The Yankee in Florida.

The Yankees, who come hither originally for health or to escape the rigors of Northern winters, are now coming with commercial intent. They are cutting down the forests along the Gulf Coast and cutting up the logs into lumber. They are draining the vast areas of swamp land and have commenced "raising cane" on the drained lands in a very practical sort of a way. They are planting orange groves and improving the methods of orange culture, and they are gradually attaining to a monopoly of active business—buying, selling, building railroads, steamboating, and doing whatever they may to gather $2 fruit where they sow $1 seed. The thrift and prosperity of the new comers have visibly added to the thrift and prosperity of the earlier, hardier settlers. They have distinctly mended their pace to keep step with northern activity. But it must not be supposed that Florida will ever be converted into a new Yankee land. On the contrary, the invaders from the north who come here to live every year take on more and more the appearance and characteristics of the natives. It is not given to man to shape the weather, but the weather does shape the man. The invincible sunshine and the warm, compulsive rains soon have their influence on the going and coming of the swiftest goers and comers. It is not reasonable that a person who can pick his breakfast from an orange tree and gather a dinner of bananas should develop the energy of a differently situated person who must plant his potatoes and hoe and dig them before he can have the pleasure of eating them. So the Northener who comes down here and builds him a house the first month of his stay, and plants his grove the next, gradually finds himself falling into the slip-shod ways. His fences get to be disreputable; his house is not freshly painted; his walks are neglected; his garden goes to weeds; and he and his wife and children settle into the easy untidiness which befits the latitude. It is tne latitude which governs. If the Mayflower had landed at St. Augustine, instead of Plymouth Rock, possibly the Seminoles would have been sooner exterminated; but the Yankee developed on the meager and stony soil of New England would have been a non-existent personage.—[Correspondence Philadelphia Record.

An Age of Too Much Reading.

Prof. Blackie says he wishes himself back in the Middle Ages, when singing was the only sermon and the minstrel the only teacher. We are running too much to books. The people don't come together any more. There are no more grand public reunions of the masses. A man buys a book or a paper, and, hurrying home, shuts the door and reads. Everybody reads. Enter a family circle nowadays and man, woman and child has his, her or its nose poked down between printed pages. It's read, read, read. Absolute silence reigns throughout the house. [illegible] I sometimes feel like [illegible] and demolishing [illegible]

[illegible] was enough. I expected to use up a dozen." Clean, highly perfumed, not oily, not a dye. Restores original color,
